Fr. anal. fièvre, f. Germ. syn. Fieber, n.

Pyre'xiæ. (Nom. pl. of Pyrexia, fever.) Med. Fevers, or febrile diseases; a class of Cullen's Nosology. Fr. syn. fièvres, f. pl. Germ. syn. Fiebern, n. pl.

Pyre'xial. (Pyrexia, fever.) Med., Pathol. Of or belonging to fever; febrile. Pyre'xiālis, is, e. Fr. syn. fébrile, adj.; pyrexique, adj. Germ. syn. fieberisch, adj.

Pyrgomāceus, a, um. Zoöl. Applied by Menke to a Family (Pyrgomacea, nom. pl. n.) of the Cirripedes, having the Pyrgoma for their type. Fr. anal. pyrgomacé, adj.

Pyrgomātidæ, patron. m. pl. Zoöl. Applied by Gray to a Family of the Cirripedes, having the Pyrgoma for their type. See Diss. div. i. s. iii. Fr. anal. pyrgomatides, m. pl.

Pÿ'ria, æ, f. (Πῦρ, fire.) Med. Old name for sweating produced by the application of dry heat; also the same as Tomentum. Fr. anal. pyrie, f. Germ. syn. trochnes Schwitzbad; heisses Sand- oder Aschenbad.

Pyriastes. (Πυρίαστης.) Physiol. Old term the same as Protogala.

Pÿriātērion, Pÿriātērium, ii, n. } (Πυριάω, to keep warm.) Med. Old term for Sudatorium, or a sweating bath; a vapour bath. Fr. syn. sudatoire, m. Germ. syn. Schwitzbad, n.

Pÿrĭ'dium, ii, n. (Pÿrus, the pear-tree.) Bot. Term by Mirbel for the fruit which Linnæus called Pomum and Richard named Melonida. Fr. anal. pyridion, m.

Pyrieph'thos. Pyrieph'thus, a, um. } (Πυρίεφθος, scorched at the fire.) Physiol. Anciently applied in the neuter (πυρίεφθον) to the Colostrum, or first milk after childbirth. See Protogala.

Pÿrĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Pÿrum, a pear; fĕro, to bear.) Bot. Bearing fruits in form of the pear, as the Psidium pyriferum. The Fucus pyriferus has the extremity of its frond swoln out like a pear: pyri'ferous. Fr. anal. pyrifère, adj. Germ. syn. birntragend, part. adj.

Pÿ'rĭfor'mis, is, e. (Pyrum, a pear; forma, resemblance.) Resembling a pear in shape; pear-shape: py'riform. Anat. Applied to a muscle of the pelvis presenting somewhat of this appearance. Pyrĭfor'mis, is, e. Fr. anal. pyriforme, adj. Germ. syn. birnförmig, adj.

Pyrĭ'gĕnæ'us, a, um. Pyrĭ'gĕnēs, adj. Pyrĭgĕ'neus, a, um. } The same as Pyrogeneus.

Pyrĭ'măchos. Pyrĭ'măchus, a, um. } (Πῦρ, fire; μάχομαι, to fight hot in battle.) Chem. Formerly applied to Stibium, or antimony, digested and converted into stony hardness, when it resists ordinary heat and flows only when exposed in the hottest furnaces; also called Pyromachus lapis; more recently the term has been restricted to copper fused with sulphur and concreted into stone-like hardness.

Pyrĭmă'nia, æ, f. (Πῦρ, fire; μαίνομαι, to rage.) Med., Physiol. The faculty of being easily set on fire, inflamed, or incensed. Fr. anal. pyrimanie, f. Germ. syn. Leichtentzündbarkeit, f.

Pyrĭne, es, f. (Πυρίνη.) Chem., Nat. Philos. Term for an organic substance composed of carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen, discovered by Wilh. Zimmerman in the aqueous, atmospherical descent, as dew, rain, snow, or hail. Med., Pharm. Old name of a plaster for scirrhus and hardness, according to Paulus Ægineta, vii. 17, Adams's Transl. vol. iii. p. 560.

Pyrītes, æ, m. (Πῦρ, fire; because it strikes fire when brought suddenly into collision with steel.) Chem. Name for native compounds of metals with sulphur, as iron pyrites, etc. Fr. anal. pyrite, f. Germ. syn. Feuerstein, m.

Pyrītĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Pÿrites; fĕro, to bear.) Geol. That which contains pyrites. Fr. anal. pyritifère, adj. Germ. syn. feuersteintragend, part. adj.

Pyrītŏlŏ'gia, æ, f. (Πυρίτης, pyrites; λόγος, a discourse.) Geol. Term for a treatise upon pyrites. Henkel published a work under this title: pyrito'logy. Fr. and Germ. anal. pyritologie, f.

Pyrītōsus, a, um. (Pÿrites; terminal -ōsus.) Chem. Having or full of pyrites. That which is converted into pyrites, as the Ferrum pyritosum; or which contains pyritous iron disseminated through it: pyri'tous. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. anal. pyriteux, adj. Germ. syn. feuersteinig, adj.

Pÿ'ro-. (Πῦρ.) Chem. This word used as a prefix in compound terms applied to objects, means that these are obtained through the application of fire, or heat, as pyroacetic spirit. It also is used generally as meaning relation to or connection with fire or heat. Fr. anal. pyro-.

Pyro-ace'tic. (Pref. Pÿro-; acētĭcus, acetic; terminal -ĭcus.) Chem. Of or belonging to acetic acid obtained by the help of fire. Pÿro-acētĭcus, a, um. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 6. Fr. anal. pyro-acétique, adj. Germ. syn. brenzessigsauer, adj.

Pyro-ace'tic Ether. Pyro-ace'tic Spirit. } Chem. Names for a substance obtained along with acetic acid by the destructive distillation of the acetates (first observed by Derosne), being formed by the action of fire on acetic acid. Fr. anal. ether pyro-acétique; esprit pyro-acétique. Germ. syn. brenzlicher Essigäther.

Pÿ'ro-acētĭcus, a, um. Chem. A liquid discovered by Chenevix, which is obtained by submitting the acetates to dry distillation, is named Spiritus pyro-aceticus: pyroace'tic. Fr. anal. pyro-acétique, adj.

Pyrŏce'tus, a, um. Chem., Geol. Employed by Haüy to designate the Ferrum volcanicum. Fr. anal. pyrocète, adj.

Pyrŏchēmia, æ, f. (Πῦρ, fire; χημεία, chemistry.) Chem. Term for that part of chemistry which treats of fire. Fr. anal. pyrochémie, f.

Pyrochinicus. See Pyrokinicus.

Pyrochrōidis, is, e. Entomol. Applied by Cuvier, Latreille, Goldfuss, Eichwald, Ficinus and Carus to a tribe (Pyrochroides, nom. pl. m.) of the Coleoptera, having the Pyrochroa for their type. Fr. anal. pyrochroides, m. pl.

Pyroci'tric A'cid. Chem. Name given by M. Lassaigne to an acid obtained by subjecting citric acid to destructive distillation. A'cĭdum pyro-ci'trĭcum. Fr. anal. acide pyrocitrique. Germ. syn. brenzlichte Citronensäure.

Pyrŏci'trĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied to an acid discovered by Lassaigne, obtained by submitting crystallised citric acid to dry distillation: pyroci'tric. Fr. anal. pyrocitrique, adj. Germ. syn. brenzlicht-citronensauer, adj.

Pyroci'trate. (Pyrŏcitrĭcum acĭdum, Pyrocitric acid; terminal -ate.) Chem. Term for a combination of pyrocitric acid with a salifiable base. Pyrŏcitras, ātis, f. Germ. syn. brenzlicht-citronensauer Salz.

Pyro-elec'trĭcus, a, um. Nat. Philos. Applied to the phænomena of electric polarity developed in a great number of crystallised substances by the effect of a change of temperature. Fr. anal. pyro-électrique, adj.

Pyræ'nus, i, m. (Πῦρ, fire; οἶνος, wine.) M. Med., Pharm. Term for brandy or strong spirit. Fr. syn. eau de vie. Germ. syn. Branntwein, m.

Pyrogal'lic A'cid. Chem. Name given to an acid obtained by the action of heat on gallic acid. A'cĭdum Pyrogal'lĭcum. Fr. anal. acide pyrogallique. Germ. syn. Pyrogallussäure, f.; brenzlichte Gallapfelsäure.

Py'rogen. (Πῦρ, fire; γεννάω, to generate.) Chem. A term proposed for electricity considered as a material substance possessing weight. Pyrŏgĕ'nium, ii, n. Fr. anal. pyrogène, m. Germ. syn. Elektricität, f.

Pyrŏgĕnĕ'sia, æ, f. } (Πῦρ, fire; γένεσις, Pyrŏgĕ'nĕsis, is, or eos, f. } generation or production.) Chem., Med., Physiol. Term for the generating or producing of fire; false warmth. Fr. anal. pyrogénésie, f. Germ. syn. die Entstehung (Erzeugung) des Feuers.

Pyrŏgĕnĕ'tĭcus, a, um. (Pyrŏgĕnĕsis, the production of heat; terminal -ĭcus.) Chem., Med., Physiol. Of or belonging to Pyrogenesia, fire, heat, or warmth: pyrogene'tic. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 6. Fr. anal. pyrogénétique, adj. Germ. syn. die Feuer oder Wärmebildung.

Pyrŏgĕ'neus, a, um. (Πῦρ, fire; γεννάω, to produce.) Chem. Born or produced from fire, or by means of heat: pyroge'neous. M. Med., Pharm. Applied by Berzelius to empyreumatic oils and resins, i. e., those produced by distillation of organic substances. Fr. anal. pyrogéné, adj. Germ. syn. Feuer gezeugt oder geboren.

Pyrŏ'gĕnus, a, um. (Πῦρ, fire; γεννάω, to produce.) Geol. Applied by Brongniart to a a class of earths comprehending the volcanic and actual igneous strata. Fr. anal. pyrogène, adj. Germ. syn. Fuer gezeugt oder geboren.

Pyrognos'tĭcus, a, um. (Πῦρ, fire; γνῶσις, knowledge; terminal -ικὸς.) Chem. Applied to those experiments that are made with the blowpipe to discover the nature of some substance: pyrognos'tic. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 6. Fr. anal. pyrognostique, adj. Germ. syn. feuergelehrt, adj.

Pyroïdeus, a, um. (Πῦρ, fire; terminal -ĭdeus.) Geol. Applied by Omalius to an Order of earths the external characters of which approach those mineral substances that have undergone the action of fire. See Diss. div. i. s. ii. Fr. anal. pyroïde, adj. Germ. syn. feuerähnlich, adj.

Pyroki'nate. (Pyrŏkīnĭcum acĭdum, Pyrokinic acid; terminal -ate.) Chem. Term for a combination of pyrokinic acid with a salifiable base. Pyrŏkīnas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. pyrokinate, m. Germ. syn. brenzchinasauer Salz.

Pyroki'nic A'cid. Chem. Name given to an acid obtained by the action of heat on kinic acid. A'cĭdum pyrŏkīnĭcum. Fr. anal. acide pyrokinique. Germ. syn. Brenzchinasäure, f.

Pyrŏkĭnĭcus, a, um. (Πῦρ, fire; kĭnĭcus.) Chem. Applied to a particular acid discovered by Pelletier and Caventou in distilling kinic acid by heat directly employed: pyroki'nic. Fr. anal. pyrokinique, adj. Germ. syn. brenzchinasauer, adj.

Py'rŏla, æ, f. (Pyrus, a pear-tree; from the shape of its leaves.) The pharmacopœial name (E.) of the herb Chimaphila umbellata, formerly Pyrola umbellata, or American winter-green. A Linn. genus of plants, Cl. Decandria; Ord. Monogynia. Juss. Pyrolaceæ. Fr. anal. pyrole, f. Germ. syn. Wintergrün, n.

Py'rŏla Rŏtundĭfŏ'lia. Bot. Systematic name of the round-leaved winter-green, which has astringent powers, and was formerly used in medicine. Fr. anal. pyrole rotundifoliée. Germ. syn. das (Steine) Wintergrün.

Py'rŏla Umbellāta. M. Med. The former systematic name of the plant now called Chimaphila corymbosa, Chimaphila umbellata, or the American winter-green, an infusion of the leaves of which acts as diuretic. Fr. syn. pyrole, f. Germ. syn. Wintergrün, n.

Pyrŏlāceus, a, um. (Pyrŏla, the herb Winter-green.) Bot. Belonging to, or having an arrangement of parts as in the genus Pyrola; applied to a Juss. Order (Pyrolaceæ, nom. pl. f.) of plants: pyrola'ceous. Fr. anal. pyrolacé, adj.

Pyrŏ'leus, a, um. Bot. Applied to a Family (Pyroleæ, nom. pl. f.) of plants established by Lindley, having the Pyrola for their type. Fr. anal. pyrolé, adj.

Pyrolig'neous. (Pref. Pyro-; ligneus, of wood; terminal -ōsus.) Chem. Applied to an acid obtained by the destructive distillation of wood. Pyrŏligneus, a, um. The same as Pyroxylosus. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. anal. pyroligneux, adj. Germ. syn. brenzlichtsauer, adj.; holzlichtsauer, adj.

Pyrolig'neous A'cid. Chem. A term for acetic acid contaminated with empyreumatic oil and bitumen. A'cĭdum Pyrolignōsum. Fr. anal. acide pyroligneux. Germ. syn. Holzsäure, f.; Holzessig, m.

Pyroli'thic A'cid. Chem. Name given to an acid obtained from uric acid by the action of heat; also called Pyro-uric acid. A'cĭdum Pyrolĭ'thĭcum. Fr. anal. acide pyrolithique. Germ. syn. brenzharnsäure, f.

Pyrŏlŏ'gia, æ, f. (Πῦρ, fire; λόγος, a discourse.) Chem., Nat. Philos. Term for the doctrine or theory of fire: pyro'logy. Fr. anal. pyrologie, f. Germ. syn. die Lehre vom Feuer; Feuertheorie, f.

Pyroma'late. (Pyrŏmālĭcum acĭdum, Pyromalic acid; terminal -ate.) Chem. Term for a combination of pyromalic acid with a salifiable base. Pÿrŏmālas, atis, f. Germ. syn. brenzliche-äpfelsauer, adj.

Pyroma'lic A'cid. Chem. Name given to a peculiar acid obtained by distilling malic acid in a retort, when the liquid in the receiver affords this acid in crystals by evaporation; also called Pyrosorbic acid. A'cĭdum Pÿrŏmālĭcum. Fr. anal. acide pyromalique. Germ. syn. brenzliche Aepfelsäure.

Pÿrŏmālĭcus, a, um. (Pref. Pÿro-; mālĭcus.) Chem. See Pyromalic Acid.

Pÿrŏmā'nia, æ, f. (Πῦρ, fire; μανία, madness.) Med. Jur. Term for a supposed species of moral insanity, believed to actuate incendiaries or fire-raisers in their criminal acts, but the existence of which is by some denied: pyroma'nia. Fr. anal. pyromanie, f. Germ. syn. Leichtentzündbarkeit, f.

Pÿrŏmargă'rĭcus, a, um. (Pref. Pÿro-; margăricus.) Chem. Applied by Bussy to a peculiar crystallisable body, which he obtained by distilling the margarite of barytes. Fr. anal. pyromargarique, adj.

Pyromeco'nic A'cid. Chem. Name for an acid obtained by the action of heat on meconic acid. A'cĭdum Pyromēcōnĭcum. Fr. anal. acide pyroméconique. Germ. syn. brenzliche Mohnsäure.

Pyro'meter. (Πῦρ, fire; μέτρον, a measure.) Chem. Name given to an instrument for ascertaining, or measuring those higher degrees of heat to which the thermometer cannot be applied. Pyrŏ'mĕtrum, i, n. Fr. anal. pyromètre, m. Germ. syn. Pyrometer, m.

Pyromu'cate. (Pÿrŏmūcĭcum acĭdum; Pyromucic acid; terminal -ate.) Chem. Term for a combination of pyromucic acid with a salifiable base. Pÿrŏmūcas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. pyromucate, m. Germ. syn. brenzschleimsauer Salz.

Pyromu'cic A'cid. } Chem. Name for an

Pyrŏmūcĭcus, a, um. (Pref. Pÿro-; mūcĭcus.) Chem. See Pyromucic Acid.

Pÿrŏnŏ'mia, æ, f. (Πῦρ, fire; νόμος, a law or usage.) Chem. Term for the doctrine of the nature and use of fire: pyro'nomy. Fr. anal. pyronomie, f. Germ. syn. die Lehre von der Natur und Anwendung des Feuers.

Pÿro-ole'ĭcus, a, um. (Pref. Pÿro-; oleĭcus.) Chem. Applied by Bussy to a peculiar crystallisable body (Spiritus pyro-oleicus) which he obtained in distilling the oleate of lime: pyro-ole'ic. Fr. anal. pyro-oléique, adj.

Pÿrŏpem'phĭgus, i, m. (Πῦρ, a fever; pemphĭgus.) Med., Pathol. Term for febrile pemphigus. Fr. anal. pyropemphigus, m. Germ. syn. der fieberhafte Blasenausschlag.

Pÿrŏphānus, a, um. (Πῦρ, fire; φαίνω, to make to appear.) Chem. Applied to silicious stones imbibed with wax; opaque when cold, they become transparent when exposed to the action of fire, which melts the wax. Fr. anal. pyrophane, adj.

Pÿrŏ'phŏrus, i, m. (Πῦρ, fire; φορέω, to bear.) Chem. Name for an artificial substance which takes fire or burns on exposure to the air; also applied to an instrument for striking fire, as it may be to any such. See Homberg's Pyrophorus. M. Med. A name for Phosphorus. Fr. anal. pyrophore, m.

Pyrophos'phate. (Pref. Pÿro-; phosphas.) Chem. Applied by Clarke to the phosphate of soda, which after having been calcined possesses other properties than those it previously had, and crystallises under another form, with another proportion of the water of crystallisation. Pÿrŏphos'phas, ātis, f.

Pÿrŏphÿsă'lĭthos. } (Pref. Pÿro-; φυσα- Pÿrŏphÿsă'lĭthus, i, m. } λὶς, a bladder; λίθος, a stone.) Mineral. Term for the topaz. Fr. anal. pyrophysalithe, f. Germ. syn. Topas, m.

Pÿrŏphÿ'tĭcus, a, um. (Pref. Pÿro-; phÿtĭcus.) Bot. Unverdorben admits under the name of pyrophytic acids, many existing, according to him, in the pyrogeneous, vegetable, unrectified oils, of which he appears not to have studied any one in particular: pyrophy'tic. Fr. anal. pyrophytique, adj.

Pÿrŏpiānus, a, um. (Πυρωπὸς, fiery.) Mineral. Applied to a rock which contains reddish disseminated garnets, forming spots upon a clear ground. Fr. anal. pyropien, adj.

Pyro'pin'. (Πυρωπὸς, the ruby; from its colour.) Chem. Name given to a beautiful substance, found occasionally in the hollow portions of the tusk of the elephant, of a fine ruby colour and having some resemblance in composition to what is called proteine. Pÿrŏpīna, æ, f. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 4. Fr. anal. pyropine, f.

Pÿro'ptĕrus, a, um. (Pref. Pÿro-; πτέρον, a wing.) Ornithol. Having yellow wings, as the Certhia pyroptera: pyro'pterous. Fr. anal. pyroptère, adj. Germ. syn. feuergeflugelt, adj.

Pÿrŏpus, a, um. (Πῦρ, fire; ὤψ, the eye.) Med. Having fiery eyes; fiery: pyro'pous. Fr. anal. pyrope, adj. Germ. syn. mit feurigen Augen.

Pÿroscŏ'pium, ii, n. (Πῦρ, fire; σκοπέω, to consider.) Chem., Nat. Philos. The same as Pyrometer.

Pÿrŏsōma, ătis, n. (Πῦρ, fire; σῶμα, a body.) Zoöl. A name for the Lampyris noctiluca, or glow-worm. Fr. anal. pyrosome, m. Germ. syn. Leuchtwurm, m.

Pÿrŏsŏ'phia, æ, f. (Πῦρ, fire; σόφια, wisdom.) Nat. Philos. Term for the knowledge of the nature and properties of fire or heat: pyro'sophy. Fr. anal. pyrosophie, f. Germ. syn. Feuerweisheit, f.; Feuerphilosophie, f.

Pyrosorbic A'cid. Chem. The same as Pyromalic Acid.

Pÿrōsis, is, f. (Πυρόω, to burn.) Med., Pathol. Term for a disease characterised by pain in the stomach with copious eructation of a watery, insipid fluid, being a form of Cardialgia: black-water; water-brash; watertomes; a genus of the Order Spasmi; Cl.

Neuroses, of Cullen's Nosology. See Cardialgia Sputatoria. Fr. anal. pyrose, f. Germ. syn. Sodbrennen, n.

Pyrosphyra, æ, f. (Πῦρ, fire; σφῦρα, a hammer.) Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for an instrument formed like a hammer, heated by being exposed to fire, or plunged into hot water, and employed as a cautery to produce irritation or vesication: the py'rosphyre. Fr. anal. pyrosphyre, f. Germ. syn. Brennhammer, m.

Pyrosteă'rĭcus, a, um. (Πῦρ, fire; στέαρ, fat; terminal -ικὸς.) Chem. Applied by Bussy to a peculiar crystallisable body (Spiritus pyrostearicus) which he obtained in distilling the stearate of lime: pyrostea'ric. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 6. Fr. anal. pyrostéarique, adj.

Pyroste'arin'. (Πῦρ, fire; στέαρ, fat.) Chem. Term by Berzelius for pyrogeneous oils when their consistence is firm as that of grease. Pyrosteārīna, æ, f. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 4. Fr. anal. pyrostéarine, f.

Pyrotarta'ric A'cid. Chem. Name for an acid discovered by Rose, obtained by the action of heat on tartaric acid; also called spirit of tartar. A'cĭdum Pyrŏtartă'ricum. Fr. anal. acide pyrotartrique. Germ. syn. brenzweinsäure, f.

Pyrotar'trate. (Pyrŏtartārĭcum acĭdum, Pyrotartaric acid; terminal -ate.) Chem. Term for a combination of pyrotartaric or pyrotartric acid with a salifiable base. Pyrŏtar'tras, ātis, f. Fr. anal. pyrotartrate, m. Germ. syn. brenzweinsauer Salz.

Pyrŏtech'nia, æ, f. (Πῦρ, fire; τέχνη, art.) Chem. Applied by Barchusen to designate chemistry because fire or heat is frequently employed in its operations; it is now applied to the art of making fireworks: pyrotech'ny. Fr. and Germ. anal. pyrotechnie, f. Germ. syn. die Kunst durch Feuer zu werken.

Pyrōtĭcos. } (Πυρόω, to burn; terminal
Pyrōtĭcus, a, um. } -ικὸς.) Med., Pharm. Having power to burn; caustic: pyro'tic; formerly applied to caustic substances, or pyrotica. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 6. Fr. anal. pyrotique, adj. Germ. syn. ätzend, part. adj.

Pyro-u'ric A'cid. Chem. Term the same as Pyro-lithic Acid.

Pÿ'ro-ūrĭcus, a, um. (Pref. Pÿro-; ūrĭcus, pertaining to urine.) Chem. See Pyrouric Acid.

Pyroxĕ'nĭcus, a, um. Chem. Containing disseminated crystals of pyroxene. Geol. Applied by Omalius to a genus which he established among the rocks. Fr. anal. pyroxénique, adj.

Pyroxĕnōsus, a, um. Geol. Applied to a rock which contains pyroxene in very distinct and predominating crystals: pyro'xenous. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. anal. pyroxéneux, adj.

Pyroxÿ'lĭcus, a, um. (Πῦρ, fire; ξύλον, wood; terminal -ic.) Chem. Applied to pyroacetic spirit, because obtained in the distillation of wood; applied to an acid: pyroxy'lic. Fr. anal. pyroxylique, adj. Germ. syn. brenzlichtholzsauer, adj.

Pyro'xÿlōsus, a, um. (Πῦρ, fire; ξύλον, wood; terminal -ous.) Chem. Applied to an acid of less power than the pyroxylic, obtained in the distillation of wood: pyro'xylous. Fr. anal. pyroxyleux, adj. Germ. syn. brenzlicht-holzichtsauer, adj.

Pyrozo'ate. (Pyrozōicum acĭdum, Pyrozoic acid; terminal -ate.) Chem. Term for a combination of pyrozoic acid with a salifiable base. Pÿrozōas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. pyrozoate, m. Germ. syn. animalischbrandsauer Salz.

Pyrozōĭcus, a, um. (Πῦρ, fire; ζωή, life; terminal -ic.) Chem. Applied by Unverdorben to an acid which he obtained from pyrogeneous, unrectified, animal oils: pyrozo'ic. Fr. anal. pyrozoïque, adj. Germ. syn. animalischbrandsauer, adj.

Pyrphorus. See Pyrophorus.

Pyrrha'crus, a, um. (Πυῤῥὸς, ruddy; ἄκρος, the end or tip.) Entomol. Having the tip (of the abdomen) of a reddish yellow, as the Laphria pyrrhacra. See Note Catarrh, Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. pyrrhacre, adj. Germ. syn. feuerfarben, adj.

Pyrrhelæum. See Pyrrholeum.

Pyrrhin'. (Πυῤῥὸς, ruddy.) Nat. Philos. Term by Nees von Esenbeck for a substance which he regards as the chief colourant of red snow; it is produced, according to him, by divers elements, and of a very volatile nature, existing at the organic surface of the earth; pertaining to the generating parts of the inferior atmosphere and united to organic life, it is presented in the form of exhalation and passes into the clouds which restore it to the same surface as a nutritive and protecting principle. Pyrrhīna, æ, f. See Note Catarrh, Diss. div. i. s. vi.; div. ii. s. vi. t. 4. Fr. anal. pyrrhine, f. Germ. anal. Pyrrhin, n.

Pyrrhŏ'cĕrus, a, um. (Πυῤῥὸς, ruddy; κέρας, a horn.) Entomol. Having red or ruddy antennæ, as the Trichina pyrocera: pyrrho'cerous. See Note Catarrh, Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. pyrrhocère, adj. Germ. syn. feuerfarbenhornig, adj.

Pyrrhŏgas'ter, tra, trum. (Πυῤῥὸς, ruddy; γαστὴρ, the belly.) Zoöl. Having a red or ruddy abdomen, as the Trichopoda pyrogaster. See Note Catarrh, Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. pyrrhogastre, adj. Germ. syn. feuerfarbenbauchig, adj.

Pyrrhŏleu'cus, a, um. (Πυῤῥὸς, ruddy; λευκὸς, white.) Ornithol., Zoöl. Applied to an animal that is red above and white below, as the Sylvia pyrrholeuca: pyrrholeu'cous. See Note Catarrh, Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. pyrrholeuque, adj. Germ. syn. feuerfarbenweissig, adj.

Pyrrho'leum, ei, n. (Πυῤῥὸς, ruddy; oleum, oil.) Chem. Term for a reddish, oily substance obtained by distillation of sea-coal. See Note Catarrh, Diss. div. i. s. vi. Germ. anal. Pyrrhöl, m.; syn. Rothöl, n.

Pyrrhŏnōtus, a, um. (Πυῤῥὸς, ruddy; νῶτος, the back.) Ornithol. Having the back ruddy coloured, in whole or in part, as the

Quack. See Medicaster, and Quackery.

Qua'ckery. (Allied to Saxon, Cveccan, to shake, or make a commotion.) The simplest definition of this term is "mean, or bad acts in physic", as it comprehends the absurd impostures of ignorant pretenders, the medicaster and even medicastra, charlatan, and quacksalver of former times; the universal-remedy, life-pill, and vegetable panacea trafficker of the present; as well as the mock assumptions of the "College of Health" nominee, herbalist and prescribing druggist, of the clairvoyant and rod-diviner, of the homœopath, hydropath, isopath and mesmerist, and the graver immoralities of the still more unprincipled. It must also be held to include unbecoming acts of professional men themselves, as the proclaiming to the public by circular, paragraph, or otherwise, abilities, attainments, or achievements in practice; the too liberal distribution of testimonials; advertisement of one's name directly or indirectly in connection with a secret remedy, patent medicine, tradesman's address, water-cure establishment, infinitesimal-dose institution, or with any newspaper puff whatever; in short, the adoption of any expedient to serve the purposes of notoriety. Empiricism is commonly, but incorrectly, used synonymously with this term. See Agyrta, Circulator, Circumforaneus. Fr. syn. charlatanère, f. Germ. syn. Quacksalberei, f.

Quadrangŭlāris, is, e. (Quadra, a square; angŭlus, a corner.) Geom. Having four equal sides and corners; four-cornered: quadran'gular. Fr. anal. quadrangulaire, adj. Germ. syn. viereckig, adj.

Qua'drans, tis, m. (Quadro, to make square.) The fourth part of any number, weight, or measure: a qua'drant. Fr. anal. quadrant, m.; quartier, m. Germ. syn. Viertheil, m.

Qua'drant. Geom. The half of a semicircle; the fourth part of a circle, or 90 degrees; applied to an instrument of great use in practical geometry. See Quadrans.

Quadrātĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Quadrātus, square; fĕro, to bear.) Mineral. Applied by Häuy to a variety of phosphated lime in which the facets produced by an increase upon the angles of the base of the primitive form, are cut by other facets arising from decrease upon the edges, so that they have the figure of a square. Fr. anal. quadratifère, adj. Germ. syn. viereckragend, part. adj.

Quadrātūra, æ, f. (Quadrātus, square.) Astron. Applied to the first and last quarters of the moon, i. e. to the points of its orbit where it is removed from the sun by a hundred and by three hundred degrees, reckoned in the sense of its proper movement, because in each of those phases the distance from the sun appears one-fourth of the zodiac. Fr. anal. quadrature, f. Germ. syn. Viereck, n.

Quadrātus, a, um. (Quadra, a figure of four equal sides.) Anat. Applied to certain muscles from their shape. Geom. Squared; of a square figure: qua'drate. Fr. syn. carré, adj. Germ. syn. viereckig, adj.

Qua'dri-. (Quadrus, four-square.) This word, used as a prefix in compound terms, signifies that there are four of the objects expressed by the adjective word to which it is prefixed, as quadri-lateral, four-sided, etc.

Qua'dri-artĭcŭlātus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; artĭcŭlātus.) Entomol. Applied to antennæ of four articulations. Fr. anal. quadri-articulé, adj. Germ. syn. viergelenkartig, adj.

Qua'drĭbă'sĭcus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; bă-sĭcus.) Chem. Applied by Berzelius to haloid salts, containing an atom of salt with four of the oxide of the same radical or base. Fr. anal. quadribasique, adj. Germ. syn. vierbasisch, adj.

Qua'drĭbīnāris, is, e. (Pref. Quadri-; bīnus, in couples.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a variety produced by four decreases, each of which occurs by two rows. Fr. anal. quadribinaire, adj.

Qua'drĭcapsŭlāris, is, e. (Pref. Quadri-; capsŭlāris, pertaining to a capsule.) Bot. Applied to a fruit formed by the union of four capsules: quadricap'sular. Fr. anal. quadricapsulaire, adj. Germ. syn. vierkapselig, adj.

Qua'drĭcarbūrētum, i, n. (Pref. Quadri-; carbūrētum.) Chem. Term for a combination of hydrogen with a simple body containing four times as much of hydrogen as another combination of the same bodies, as the quadricarburet of hydrogen, which has been discovered by Faraday. Fr. anal. quadricarbure, m.

Quadrĭcărīnātus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; cărīnātus.) Bot. Surmounted by four carinæ, as the Torritella quadricarinata. Fr. anal. quadricarène, adj.

Quadrĭ'cŏlor, ōris, adj. (Pref. Quadri-; cŏlor, colour.) Ornithol. Having plumage of four different colours, as the Trochilus quadricolor. Fr. anal. quadricolor, adj. Germ. syn. vierfarbig, adj.

Quadrĭcor'nis, is, e. (Pref. Quadri-; cornu, a horn.) Bot. Having four horns; applied by Mirbel to anthers when their lobes, terminating in a point and diverging, form four species of horns, as in the Gaulteria procumbens; to the Notoceras quadricorne, because each valve of its silicule is terminated in two points. Entomol. Applied by Duméril to a Family (Quadricornia, nom. pl. n.) of the Aptera, having four antennæ. See Polygnathus. Zoöl. Applied to the Antilope quadricornis, because it has four horns on its head. Fr. anal. quadricorne, adj. Germ. syn. vierhornig, adj.

Qua'drĭcŏtȳlēdŏ'neus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; cŏtȳlēdŏneus.) Bot. Applied to an embryo with four cotyledons, as in the Pinus Americana. Fr. anal. quadricotylédoné, adj.

Qua'drĭcuspĭdātus, a, um. Bot. (Quadri-; cuspĭdātus, pointed.) Zoöl. Having four points, as the Naïs quadricuspidata, the tail of which terminates by four quadrifid cirri. Fr. anal. quadricuspidé, adj. Germ. syn. vierspitzig, adj.

Qua'drĭdĕcĭmālis, is, e. (Pref. Quadri-; dĕcĭmālis, pertaining to ten.) Mineral. Applied to a crystal which has fourteen faces, as the Baryta sulphata quadridecimalis. Fr. anal. quadridécimal, adj.

Qua'drĭdĕcioctōnālis, is, e. (Pref. Quadri-; dĕcem, ten; octōni, eight.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a variety of topaz which has only one summit to fourteen faces, with an octagonal prism. Fr. anal. quadridécioctonal, adj.

Qua'drĭdens, tis, adj. } (Pref. Quadri-; den- Qua'drĭdentātus, a, um. } tātus.) Bot., Entomol. Having four teeth, points, or divisions, as the calyx of the Ligustrum vulgare; applied likewise to calathidia, petals, spathellules, antennæ, tubercles, etc. Fr. anal. quadridenté, adj. Germ. syn. vierzähnig, adj.

Qua'drĭdĭgĭtātŏpinnātus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; dĭgĭtātus, fingered; pinnātus, winged.) Bot. Applied to leaves the common petiole of which terminates by four secondary petioles, to the sides of which the folioles are attached. Fr. anal. quadridigitatipinné, adj. Germ. syn. vierfingergeflügelt, adj.

Qua'drĭdĭgĭtātus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; dĭgĭtātus, fingered.) Bot. Applied to a leaf, the petiole of which terminates in four folioles, as in the Marsilea quadrifolia: quadridi'gitate. Fr. anal. quadridigité, adj. Germ. syn. vierfingert, adj.

Qua'drĭdōdĕcahe'drus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; dōdĕcahedrus, pertaining to a dodecahedron.) Geom., Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a variety the faces of which present the combination of four dodecahedrons, as the Calx carbonata quadridodécahedra.

Qua'drĭduŏdĕcĭmālis, is, e. (Pref. Quadri-; duŏdĕcĭmālis, pertaining to twelve.) Geom., Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a variety of Magnesia borata, presenting the form of a rhomboidal dodecahedron, four solid angles of which, fixed among eight compounds of three planes, are each replaced by a facet. Fr. anal. quadriduodécimal, adj.

Qua'drierēmātus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; erēmus.) Bot. Applied by Mirbel to the Cenobium when it is formed by the union of four eremi, as in the Salvia. Fr. anal. quadriérémé, adj.

Qua'drĭfārius, a, um. (Quadrĭfāriam, in four ways.) Bot. Applied to a plant the leaves of which are disposed in four rows, as the Pteryginandum quadriforium. Fr. anal. quadriforié, adj. Germ. syn. viereckig, adj.

Quadrĭfasciātus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; fasciātus, having bands.) Entomol. Marked with four coloured bands, as the Musca quadrifasciata. Fr. anal. quadrifascié, adj. Germ. syn. vierbandirt, adj.

Quadrĭ'fĭdus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; findo, to cleave.) Bot. Applied to an organ divided, nearly to the middle of its length, into four equal portions, as the calyx of the Reseda luteola. Fr. anal. quadrifide, adj. Germ. syn. vierspaltig, adj.

Quadriflōrĭ'gĕrus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; flos, a flower; gĕro, to bear.) Bot. The same as Quadriflorus. Fr. anal. quadriflorigère, adj.

Quadriflōrus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; flos, a flower.) Bot. Containing four flowers, as the calathidium of certain Synantheræ; composed of four flowers, as the verticilli of the Westeringia rosmarinacea; or bearing four flowers, as the branches of the Misodendrum quadriflorum. Fr. anal. quadriflore, adj. Germ. syn. vierblümig, adj.

Quadrĭfŏliŏlātus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; fŏliŏlātus, having folioles.) Bot. Applied to leaves composed of four folioles. Fr. anal. quadrifoliolé, adj.

Quadrĭfŏ'lius, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; fŏliātus, pertaining to leaves.) Bot. Applied to a plant the leaves of which are verticillated, four by four, as the Lericera quadrifolium; the stem of which bears four leaves, as the Paris quadrifolia; the folioles of which are quaternate, as the Marsilea quadrifolia. Fr. anal. quadrifolié, adj. Germ. syn. vierblättrig, adj.

Quadrĭfor'mis, is, e. (Pref. Quadri-; forma, likeness.) Mineral. Applied to a crystal which presents the combination of four distinct forms, such as the cube, regular octahedron, etc., as the Calx fluata: quadriform. Fr. anal. quadriforme, adj. Germ. syn. vierförmig, adj.

Quadrĭ'fŏrus, a,um. (Pref. Quadri-; fŏro, to pierce.) Pierced with four holes. Zoöl. Applied by Latreille to a Family (Quadrifora, nom. pl. n.) of the Cirripedes Dibranchia, the opercule of the tube of which has four valves. Fr. anal. quadrifore, adj.

Quadrīga, æ, f. (As if Quadrijuga, from quatuor, four; jugum, a yoke; from resemblance to its trappings.) A cart drawn with four horses. Med., Surg. Term applied to a bandage. Fr. anal. quadriga, m. Germ. syn. Viergespann, n.

Quadrĭgĕ'mĭnus, a, um. (Prefix Quadri-; gĕmĭnus, double.) Four-double. See Tubercula Quadrigemina. Fr. anal. quadrigéminé, adj. Germ. syn. vierfach, adj.

Quadrĭguttātus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; gutta, a drop.) Entomol. Bearing spots, as the Nitidula quadriguttata. Fr. syn. quadrimouchetė, adj.

Quadrĭhexăgōnālis, is, e. (Pref. Quadri-; hexăgōnālis.) Crystall., Mineral. Applied to crystals that have fourteen faces: quadrihexa'gonal. Fr. anal. quadrihexagonal, adj.

Quadrĭ'jŭgus, a,um. (Pref. Quadri-; jŭgum, a yoke.) Bot. Applied to pennate leaves the common petiole of which bears four pairs of folioles, as the Trichilia quadrijuga. Fr. anal. quadrijugué, adj.

Quadrĭlătĕrālis, is, e. (Pref. Quadri-; lătĕrālis, pertaining to the side.) Bot. Presenting four sides, as the phyllous tetragons of the Acacia quadrilateralis. Fr. anal. quadrilatéral, adj. Germ. syn. vierseitig, adj.

Quadrĭlă'tĕrus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; lătus, a side.) Zoöl. Having four sides, as the shell of the Arca quadrilatera, the body of the Abyla quadrilatera. Applied by Cuvier, Latreille and Eichwald to a tribe (Quadrilatera, nom. pl. n.) of the Crustacea Decapoda Brachyura, having the shell almost square or cordiform. Fr. anal. quadrilatère, adj. Germ. syn. vierseitig, adj.

Quadrĭlŏ'bātus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; lŏbātus, lobed.) Bot. Divided into four lobes, as the stigmata of the Epilobium spicatum, the utricules of the pollen of the Azalea viscosa, etc. Fr. anal. quadrilobé, adj. Germ. syn. vierlappig, adj.

Quadrĭlŏcŭlāris, is, e. (Pref. Quadri-; lŏcŭlus, a cell.) Bot. Separated into four compartments, as the anther of the Liriodendrum tulipifera, the capsule of the Epilobium, etc. Fr. anal. quadriloculaire, adj. Germ. syn. vierfächerig, adj.

Quadrĭlūnŭlātus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; lūnŭla, a crescent.) Entomol. Marked with four spots in form of a crescent, as the Coccinella quadrilunulata. Fr. anal. quadrilunulé, adj. Germ. syn. vierhalbmondig, adj.

Quadrĭmăcŭlātus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; măcŭlātus, spotted.) Entomol. Marked with four spots, as the Scaphidium quadrimaculatum. Fr. anal. quadrimaculé, adj. Germ. syn. vierfleckig, adj.

Quadrĭ'mănus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; mănus, a hand.) Entomol. Applied by Cuvier to a Section (Quadrimani, nom. pl. m.) of the Carabœi, the males of which have the four anterior tarsi dilated. Fr. anal. quadrimane, adj. Germ. syn. vierhändig, adj.

Quadrīnātus, a, um. } (Quadrus, four square.)
Quadrīnus, a, um. } Bot. Applied to a leaf composed of four folioles, borne at the extremity of a peduncle, as in the Hedysarum tetraphyllum. Fr. anal. quadriné, adj. Germ. syn. vierzählig, adj.

Quadrioctōnālis, is, e. (Pref. Quadri-; octōni, eight.) Mineral. Applied to a variety in an octagon prism with dihedral summits. Fr. anal. quadrioctonal, adj. Germ. syn. vierachtig, adj.

Quadrĭpartītus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; partītus, divided.) Bot. Divided into four parts, as the calyx of the Gentiana campestris. Fr. anal. quadripartite, adj. Germ. syn. viertheilig, adj.

Quadrĭpen'nis, is, e. (Pref. Quadri-; penna, a wing.) Entomol. Having four wings, as the Salarias quadripennis, on which is observed a palmated appendix near each eye, and two similar upon the nucha. Applied by Latreille to a Section (Quadripennia, nom. pl. n.) of the Anelytra, having four wings. Fr. anal. quadripenne, adj. Germ. syn. vierflügelig, adj.

Quadrĭphyl'lus, a,um. (Pref. Quadri-; φύλλον, a leaf.) Bot. The same as Tetraphyllus.

Quadriplum'bĭcus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; plumbĭcus.) Chem. Applied by Berzelius to a subsalt in which the oxygen of the plumbic oxide is multiplied by four of that of the acid, as the Nitris plumbica. Fr. anal. quadriplombique, adj.

Quadrĭpunctātus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; punctum, a point.) Entomol. Marked with four coloured points, as the Tabanus quadripunctatus. Fr. anal. quadriponctué, adj. Germ. syn. vierspitzig, adj.

Quadrĭpustŭlātus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; pustŭla, a pustule.) Entomol. Marked with four red spots, as the Nitidula quadripustulata; synonymous with Quatuorpustulatus. Fr. anal. quadripustulé, adj. Germ. syn. viereiterblätterig, adj.

Quadrĭrădiātus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; rădius, a ray.) Zoöl. Marked with four lines or rays, as the Pecten quadriradiatus. Fr. anal. quadriradié, adj. Germ. syn. vierstrahlend, part. adj.

Quadrirhomboĭdālis, is, e. (Pref. Quadri-; rhomboĭdālis.) Mineral. Applied to a variety the faces of which present the combination of four rhomboids, as the Calx carbonatus. Fr. anal. quadrirhomboidal, adj.

Quadrĭsĕlēnis, ītis, f. (Pref. Quadri-; sĕlēnis.) Chem. Term by Berzelius for selenites in which the oxygen of the acid is multiplied by four of that of the base. Fr. anal. quadrisélénite, m.

Quadrĭsexdĕcĭmālis, is, e. (Pref. Quadri-; sexdĕcĭmālis, pertaining to sixteen.) Mineral. Applied to a crystal with twenty facets, as the Zircon quadrisexdécimale. Fr. anal. quadrisexdécimal, adj.

Quadristrĭgātus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; strĭga, a ridge.) Marked with four coloured rays. Fr. anal. quadrirayé, adj. Germ. syn. viergipfelig, adj.

Quadrĭsulcātus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; sulcus, a furrow.) Zoöl. Bearing four furrows, as the Cerithium quadrisulcatum. Fr. anal. quadrisilonné, adj. Germ. syn. vierfürchig, adj.

Quadrĭsul'cus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; sulcus, a furrow.) Zoöl. Applied to denote the ungulated mammifers (Quadrisulci, nom. pl. m.) which have their feet divided into four hoofs. Fr. anal. quadrisulce, adj. Germ. syn. vierfürchig, adj.

Quadrĭsulphūrētum, i, n. (Pref. Quadri-; sulphūrētum.) Chem. Term for a sulphuret which contains four times as much sulphur as another of the same base, as the Quadrisulphuretum potassicum: a quadrisul'phuret. Fr. anal. quadrisulfure, m.

Quadritrĭgĕsĭmālis, is, e. (Pref. Quadri-; trĭgĕsĭmālis, pertaining to thirty.) Mineral. Applied to a crystal having thirty-four facets, as the Baryta sulphata quadrigesimalis. Fr. anal. quadrigésimale, adj.

Quadrĭtūber'cŭlātus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; tūbercŭlum, a tubercle.) Entomol. Bearing four tubercles, as the corselet of the Macronychus quadrituberculatus. Fr. anal. quadrituberculé, adj. Germ. syn. mit vieren Tuberkeln.

Quadrĭval'vis, is, e. (Pref. Quadri-; valvæ, folding doors.) Bot. Separated into four valves, as the capsule of the Epilobium. Fr. anal. quadrivalve, adj. Germ. syn. vierthürig, adj.

Quadrĭvalvŭlātus, a, um. (Pref. Quadri-; valvŭla, a little valve.) Bot. Having four valves, as the anthers of the Laurus Persea. Fr. anal. quadrivalvulé, adj. Germ. syn. vierthürig, adj.

Quadro-. (Quătuor, four.) Chem. A prefix signifying four, or four times, that is, that four portions of the substance to the name of which it is prefixed, are used.

Quadro'xalate. (Pref. Quadro-; oxălas, an oxalate.) Chem. Term for an oxalate which contains four times as much acid as the corresponding neutral salt. Quadro'xălas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. quadroxalate, m.

Quadrŭ'mănus, a, um. (Quătuor, four; mānus, the hand.) Zoöl. Having four hands; applied to certain animals (quadrumana animalia, nom. pl. n.) that are so provided, as the monkey tribe: quadru'manate: quadru'manous. Fr. anal. quadrumane, adj. Germ. syn. vierhändig, adj.

Qua'drŭpes, pĕdis, adj. (Quătuor, four; pes, a foot.) Zoöl. Having four feet; applied generally to such of the Mammalia (quadrupedia animalia, nom. pl. n.) as have four feet: qua'druped. Fr. anal. quadrupède, adj. Germ. syn. vierfüssig, adj.

Qua'drŭplans, antis, adj. (Quadrŭplum, quadruple.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a variety the sign of which is composed of exposants in progression, with this difference, that the one is repeated four times, as the Calx carbonatus quadruplans.

Quæ ex Quĭbus. Med. A Hippocratic phrase by which was indicated the vicissitude, succession, and transmutation of diseases, of which change and succession four principal species are enumerated, viz. Epigenesis, Metaptosis, Metastasis, and Apostasis, or abscess.

Quan'dros. Med., Ornithol. Name of a stone or gem formerly said to be found in the brain of the vulture, of a white colour, said to fill the breasts with milk and to have power against hurtful accidents, according to Ruland and Johnson, and Aldrovand.

Quanli. Chem. Old name for Plumbum, or lead. Fr. syn. plomb, m. Germ. syn. Blei, n.

Qua'rantine. (Ital. Quaranta, forty; because it used generally to last forty days.) Med. Term for the period during which vessels arriving from infected or suspected ports, are debarred from entering into a healthy one, and from landing their goods, crew, or passengers, unless to be confined in a lazaretto. Quărantīna, æ, f. Fr. anal. quarantaine, f. Germ. anal. Quarantäne, f.; syn. die vierzigtägige Gesundheitsprobe.

Quars. Med., Pathol. Old name for a gallstone. Ruland and Johnson.

Quartānus, a, um. (Quartus, the fourth.) Occurring every fourth day: quar'tan. Med., Pathol. Applied to a kind of intermittent fever in which the paroxysm returns once in every seventy-two hours, or every fourth day, therefore termed quartana (febris), or quartan ague, which constitutes a genus of the Order Febres; Cl. Pyrexiæ, of Cullen's Nosology. Fr. anal. quarte, adj. Germ. syn. viertägig, adj.

Quartārius, ii, m. (Quartus, the fourth.) Med., Pharm. The fourth part of a gallon; a quart, or measure containing two pints. Fr. syn. quarte, f. Germ. syn. Viertelmass, f.

Quartātio, ōnis, f. (Quartus, the fourth.) Chem. An operation in assaying, by which the quantity of one thing is made equal to the fourth part of the quantity of another: quarta'tion. See Depart. Fr. anal. quartatio, f.

Quartīna, æ, f. (Quartus, the fourth.) Physiol. Sometimes the wall of the nucella of the ovule hangs from a lamina which ends by being detached and held only by its summit. This new envelope, well distinguished from the tercina by its inverse situation, and its mode of development being precisely contrary, is that which Mirbel thus terms the quartine. Fr. anal. quartine, f.

Quar'zĭcus, a, um. (Quartz: terminal -ĭcus.) Geol. Applied by Brongniart to a group of agalysian earths, of which quartz forms the base: quart'zic. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 6. Fr. anal. quarzique, adj. Germ. syn. zu Quarz gehörig.

Quarzĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Quartz; fĕro, to bear.) Geol. Containing quartz in a state of mixture more or less intimate, as the Calx carbonatus quarziferus: quartzi'ferous. Fr.

anal. quarzifère, adj. Germ. syn. quarzführend, part. adj.

Quarzifor'mis, is, e. (Quartz; forma, likeness.) Geol. Presenting the form of one of the varieties of quartz, as the Steatitis quarziformis: quart'ziform. Fr. anal. quarziförmig, adj.

Quarzō'sus, a, um. (Quartz; terminal -ōsus.) Having or full of quartz: quart'zous. Geol. Applied by Brongniart and Omalius to a group of earths which abound in siliceous rocks. Mineral. Applied to rocks which contain quartz, as quartzous gneiss. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. anal. quarzeux, adj. Germ. syn. quarzig, adj.

Quas'sia, æ, f. (Quassi, a slave who first used it as a remedy in malignant fevers at Surinam.) The pharmacopœial name (D.) of the wood of the Quassia excelsa; or (L. E.) chiefly of Picræna excelsa, but sometimes of Quassia amara; or (U.S.A.) of Simaruba excelsa. Fr. anal. quassia, m. Germ. syn. Quassie, f.

Quas'sia Amāra. M. Med. Systematic name of a tree from which the quassia wood is obtained. Fr. anal. quassia amère. Germ. syn. Bitterholz, n.

Quas'sia Excel'sa. Bot. Systematic name of the mountain damson, from which a great part of the quassia wood of the market is obtained.

Quas'sia Sīmărūba. M. Med. The systematic name of the simarauba tree; also termed Simaruba officinalis. Fr. anal. simarouba, m. Germ. syn. Simaruba, m.

Quassin'. (Quassia.) Chem. Term for a peculiar vegetable principle obtained from the Quassia simaruba. Quassīna, æ, f. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 4. Fr. anal. quassine, f.

Quăsĭrădiātus, a, um. (Quăsi, as if; rădiātus, having rays.) Bot. Applied by H. Cassini to the periclinium of the Synantheræ when it presents but one slightly perceptible radiation; to the calathidium when the flowers of the corona are longer than those of the disc and directed outwards to the summit, but all in a manner slightly manifest. Fr. anal. quasiradié, adj.

Quater'nary. (Quăterni, four by four.) Having, or consisting of four; disposed in fours. Quăternārius, a, um. Fr. anal. quaternaire, adj. Germ. syn. zum vier Zahl gehörig.

Quăternātus, a, um. (Quăterni, four by four.) Bot. Applied to verticillated leaves four by four, as in the Polycarpum tetraphyllum. Crystall., Mineral. Applied to a crystal with forty-four faces, as the Baryta sulphata quaternata: quater'nate. Fr. anal. quaterne, adj. Germ. syn. vierfach, adj.; vierzählig, adj.

Quăter'nĭfō'lius, a, um. (Quăterni, four by four; fŏlium a leaf.) Bot. Having quaternate leaves, as the Bouvardia quaternifolia: quaternifo'liate. Fr. anal. quaternifolié, adj. Germ. syn. vierfachblättrig, adj.

Quăter'nōbisūnĭtārius, a, um. (Quăterni, four by four; bis, twice; unus, one.) Crystall., Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a variety resulting from a decrease by four rows, and two by one row, as the Calx sulphatus quaternobisunitarius. Fr. anal. quaternobisunitaire, adj.

Qua'trio. (Quătuor, four; from its four sides.) Anat. Old term for the Astragalus.

Quătuorpustŭlātus, a, um. (Quătuor, four; pustŭla, a pustule.) Entomol. Marked with four red spots, as the Coccinella quatuorpustulata. See Quadripustulatus. Fr. anal. quatuorpustulé, adj. Germ. syn. viereiterblätterig, adj.

Que'brĭcum. Chem. Old term for Arsenic, according to some; to others, Sulphur.

Que'brith. Chem. An old name for Sulphur. Ruland and Johnson.

Queen's Root. Bot., M. Med. Common name (U.S.A.) for the root of Stillingua sylvatica.

Quer'cera. (Καρκαίρω, to quake.) Med. Applied as a name for the fever termed Epialos; also called Querquera. See Carcaros, Zerzera. Fr. anal. querquère, adj.

Quercĭ'cŏlus, a, um. (Quercus, the oak; cŏlo, to inhabit.) Bot. Living or growing as a parasite on the oak, as the Loranthus quercicolus: querci'colous. Fr. anal. quercicole, adj. Germ. syn. eichbewohnen, adj.

Quercin'. Chem. Term for an organic base which Scattergood believed he had discovered in the Quercus falcata. Quercīna, æ, f. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 4. Fr. anal. quercine, f.

Quercīneus, a, um. Bot. Applied to the Family (Quercineæ, nom. pl. f.) of the Cupuliferæ, because it contains the genus Quercus. Fr. anal. querciné, adj.

Quercitrin'. Chem. Term by Chevreul for the colouring matter of the Quercus tinctoria, which is not a pure immediate principle. Quercitrīna, æ, f. Fr. anal. quercitrin, m.

Quer'cŭla Calamandrina. (Dim. Quercus, the oak; from the likeness of its leaves.) A name for the Teucrium chamædrys, or common germander. Fr. syn. chamædrys, f.

Quer'curon Bark. Bot. Name for the bark of the Quercus tinctoria, used as a yellow dye.

Quer'cus, ûs, m. (Unascertained.) The pharmacopœial name (L.) of the bark of the Quercus pedunculata; (E.) the Quercus cortex, or oak bark, obtained from the same tree; or (D.) the bark of the Quercus roboris. A Linn. genus of plants, Cl. Monœcia; Ord. Polyandria. Juss. Cupuliferæ. Fr. syn. chêne, m. Germ. syn. Eiche, f.

Quer'cus Al'ba. M. Med. The pharmacopœial name (U.S.A.) for the bark of the Quercus alba; white oak bark, used as astringent and tonic. Fr. syn. chêne blanc.

Quer'cus Cer'ris. M. Med. The name of the tree which affords the gall-nut; the oak-gall is supposed to be the strongest astringent known; also called Quercus infectoria. Fr. syn. chêne des teinturiers.

Quer'cus Es'cŭlus. Bot. The Italian oak, the acorns of which, in times of scarcity, are said to afford meal, of which bread is made. Fr. anal. chêne mangeable.

Quer'cus Infectōria. Bot. The name of the tree which produces the excrescences called Galla, Galla maxima orbiculata, and Nux galla, or gallnut; also called Quercus cerris. Fr. syn. chêne des teinturiers.

Quer'cus Mărīna. Bot. The sea oak; a term for the Fucus vesiculosus, or sea-wrack. Fr. syn. varech, m. Germ. syn. Meerkraut, n.

Quer'cus Pedunc̆ūlāta. M.Med. A name for the Quercus robur. Fr. syn. chêne pédonculé; chêne ordinaire. Germ. syn. Loheiche, f.

Quer'cus Phellos. Bot. Systematic name of the willow-leaved oak, the acorns of which afford, by expression, an oil little inferior to oil of almonds.

Quer'cus Rōbur. M. Med. The systematic name of the oak tree, a decoction of the acorns of which is reputed efficacious against dysentery and colic; also called Quercus pedunculata. Fr. syn. chêne ordinaire. Germ. syn. Loheiche, f.

Quer'cus Sūber. Bot. Systematic name of the cork-tree, the fruit of which is more nutritious than our acorns. Fr. syn. liége, m. Germ. syn. Korkbaum, m.

Quer'cus Tinctōria. Bot. Name of a species, native of North America, which yields the quercitron bark, used as a yellow dye. M.Med. The pharmacopœial name (U.S.A.) for the bark of the Quercus tinctoria; black oak bark, used as astringent and tonic.

Queriāceus, a, um. Bot. Applied to a tribe Queriaceæ, nom. pl. f.) of the Paronychieæ having the Querca for their type: queria'ceous. Fr. anal. quériacé, adj.

Querquera. See Quercera.

Quibrith. See Quebrith.

Quicklime. (Sax. Cvic, living; lime.) A term for lime that is unslacked, or unquenched. Calx Vivum. See Abesum, Albeston, Annora, Bof, Gir, Git, Gith, Koma, Komartos. Fr. syn. chaux vive. Germ. syn. gebrannter Kalk.

Quicksilver. (Sax. Cvicseolfer, from cvic, living; seolfer, silver, because it seems quick, or living; from its extreme mobility.) See Argentum Vivum, Hydrargyrum. Fr. syn. hydrargyre, m. Germ. syn. Quecksilber, n.

Quid pro quo. Med. A term signifying, or rather intended to signify the substitution of one thing to supply the want of another: a succedaneum.

Quīna, æ, f. (Fr. Quinquīna, the name for Peruvian bark.) See Quinine.

Quinate. See Kinate.

Quīnātus, a, um. (Quīni, five.) Bot. Applied to leaves that are inserted five by five around the stem, as in the Myriophyllum verticillatum; that are composed of five folioles proceeding from the same point, as in the Cissus quinata, or that are deeply quinquefid, as in the Pelargonium quinatum. Fr. anal. quiné, adj. Germ. syn. fünfzählig, adj.

Quince. M. Med. Name of the fruit of the tree Pyrus Cydonia. Cydōnium, ii, n. Fr. syn. coing, m. Germ. syn. Quitte, f.

Quincunciālis, is, e. (Quincunx, an arrangement of trees in fives.) Bot. Applied to leaves when they are disposed around the stem in a simple spiral formed of five leaves, so that the sixth covers the first, the seventh the second, and so of the rest, as in the Pyrus; to estivation, according to de Candolle, when the parts of the corol, calyx, or perigon, being five in number, are disposed so that there are two external, one or two entirely internal, and two or one intermediary. Fr. anal. quinconcial, adj. Germ. syn. schrägzelig, adj.

Quincunx, cis, m. (Quinque unciæ, five ounces.) Bot. Term for a mode of planting trees, so that in whatever way they are viewed they stand directly against each other and equidistant. Med., Pharm. A measure of five ounces, or 5-12ths of a pound. Fr. anal. quinconce, m. Germ. syn. fünf ünzen.

Quinde'cagon. (Quinque, five; δέκα, ten; γωνία, an angle.) Geom. Term for a plane figure having fifteen sides and angles. Quindĕcāgōnum, i, n. Fr. anal. quindécagone, m. Germ. syn. Fünfzehneck, n.

Quindeca'gonal. (Quindĕcāgōnum, a quindecagon.) Geom. Of or belonging to a quindecagon. Quindĕcāgōnus, a, um. Fr. anal. quindécagone, adj.

Quin'dĕcimpunctātus, a, um. (Quindĕcim, fifteen; punctātus, pointed.) Entomol. Marked with fifteen coloured spots, as the elytra of the Galeruca quindecimpunctata. Fr. anal. quindécimponctué, adj.

Quindĕcioc'tōnālis, is, e. (Quindĕcim, fifteen; octōnus, eight.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a variety of topaz which presents but a single summit to fifteen faces, with an octagon prism. Fr. anal. quindécioctonal, adj.

Quīnīcus, a, um. (Quīnīna, quinine; terminal -ĭcus.) Chem. Applied by Berzelius to salts that have quinine for their base: qui'nic. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 6.

Quinidine. Chem., M. Med. An alkali of the cinchonas. Fr. syn. quinidine, f.

Quīniflōrus, a, um. (Quīni, five; flos, a flower.) Bot. Bearing five flowers, as the Capparis quiniflora: quiniflo'rous. Fr. anal. quiniflore, adj. Germ. syn. fünfblümig, adj.

Quinine. Chem., M. Med. One of the alkaline proximate principles (the other, Cinchonine) in which the medicinal virtues of the Peruvian bark reside; chiefly got from the bark of the Cinchona cordifolia. Quīna, Quīnia, or Quīnīna, æ, f. Fr. anal. quinine, f.

Quinine, Amor'phous. See Quinoidine.

Quinine, Disul'phate of. M. Med. A term for a combination of two equivalents of Quina, with one of sulphuric acid and eight of water, which is the preparation usually employed in medicine, and known in the shops as the sulphate of quinine.

Qui'nine, Sul'phate of. M. Med. A neutral sulphate, being a combination of one equivalent of Quina and of sulphuric acid, and eight of water. See the preceding term.

Qui'nīnism. (Quīna, or quīnīna, quinine; terminal -ismus.) Med. A term proposed for that disturbance of the nervous system caused by continued use, or large doses, of the disulphate of quinine. Quīnīnis'mus, i, m. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 7. Fr. anal. quininisme, m.

Quinoi'dine. (Quīna, or quīnīna, quinine; εἶδος, resemblance; because at first held to be a distinct organic base, similar and equal in all respects to quinine.) Chem. Name given to a resinous substance obtained from the mother liquor remaining after all the crystals which can be procured, are separated in the preparation of sulphate, or disulphate of quinine. It possesses the properties of a base, and neutralises acids perfectly, but the salts thereby formed have baffled all attempts at crystallization. It is therefore, and because its efficacy as a remedy depends on the quantity of quinine it contains, also called amorphous quinine. Quīnoīdīnia, æ, f. Fr. anal. quinoidinie, f.

Quīnoquăternārius, a, um. (Quīni, five; quăternārius.) Mineral. Applied to a variety which results from two laws of decrease, the one by four rows, the other by five, as the Calx carbonatus: quinoquaterna'rious. Fr. anal. quinoquaternaire, adj.

Quinquangŭlāris, is, e. (Quinque, five; angŭlus, an angle.) Bot. Having five angles, as the stem of the Cactus pentagonus, the branches of the Justitia quinquangularis: quinquan'gular. Fr. anal. quinquangulaire, adj. Germ. syn. fünfwinckelicht, adj.

Quinquangŭlātus, a, um. (Same as preceding.) Bot. Having five proper angles, as the border of the leaves of the Pelargonium peltatum: quinquan'gulate. Fr. anal. quinquangule, adj. Germ. syn. fünfwinckelicht, adj.

Quinquangŭlōsus, a, um. (Same as preceding; terminal -ōsus.) Bot. Having five angles, as the Astræa quinquangulosa: quinquan'gulous. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. anal. quinquanguleux, adj.

Quinquĕdentātus, a, um. (Quinque, five; dentātus, toothed.) Bot. Terminating in five teeth or serratures, as the calyx of the Stachys, the leaves of the Saxifraga ascendens: quinqueden'tate. Fr. anal. quinquedenté, adj. Germ. syn. funfzähnig, adj.

Quinquedĭgĭtātus, a, um. (Quinque, five; dĭgĭtātus, fingered.) Bot. Applied to a leaf the petiole of which terminates in five folioles, as the Cissus quinquefolia: quinquedi'gitated. Fr. anal. quinquedigité, adj. Germ. syn. fünffingert, adj.

Quinque-erēmātus, a, um. (Quinque, five; erēmus, a recluse.) Bot. Applied by Mirbel to the cenobium when composed of five eremi, as the Gomphia nitida. Fr. anal. quinque-éremé, adj.

Quinquĕfārius, a, um. (Quinque, five.) Bot. Applied to leaves disposed in five rows along the stem, as in the Lycopodium annotinum. Fr. anal. quinquefarié, adj. Germ. syn. fünfreihig, adj.

Quinquĕ'fĭdus, a, um. (Quinque, five; findo, to cleave.) Bot. Divided into five parts, as the style of the Hibiscus. Fr. anal. quinquefide, adj. Germ. syn. fünfspältig, adj.

Quinqueflōrus, a, um. (Quinque, five; flos, a flower.) Bot. Having five flowers, as the Enkianthus quinqueflorus. Fr. anal. quinqueflore, adj. Germ. syn. fünfblümig, adj.

Quinquĕfŏliŏlātus, a, um. (Quinque, five; fŏlĭŏlum, a foliole.) Bot. Applied to a leaf the common petiole of which terminates in five folioles, as in the Cissus quinquefoliolata. Fr. anal. quinquéfoliolé, adj. Germ. syn. mit fünf Blättchen.

Quinquĕfŏ'lium, ii, n. (Quinque, five; fŏlium, a leaf; from having five leaves on each footstalk.) Bot A name for the Potentilla reptans; or cinquefoil. Fr. syn. quintefeuille. Germ. syn. Potentille, f.; Fünffingerkraut, n.

Quinquĕ'fŏrus, a, um. (Quinque, five; fŏro, to pierce.) Bot. Having five holes: quinque'forous. Fr. anal. quinquéforé, adj. Germ. syn. fünfœffnungig, adj.

Quinquĕ'jŭgus, a, um. (Quinque, five; jŭgum, a yoke.) Bot. Applied to a pennate leaf the petiole of which bears five pairs of folioles, as in the Cassia fistula. Fr. anal. quinquéjugué, adj. Germ. syn. fünfgejochet, adj.

Quinquĕlŏbātus, a, um. (Quinque, five; lŏbus, a lobe.) Bot. That which is divided to the extent of one-half and even more deeply into five portions or lobes, as the cotyledon of the Tilia alba, the leaves of the Ipomœa quinqueloba, etc.: quinque'lobate. Fr. anal. quinquélobé, adj. Germ. syn. fünfläppig, adj.

Quinquĕlŏcŭlāris, is, e. (Quinque, five; lŏcŭla, a cell.) Bot. Containing five cells or compartments, as the berry of the Loricera quinquelocularis: quinquelo'cular. Fr. anal. quinquéloculaire, adj. Germ. syn. fünffächerig, adj.

Quinquĕner'vis, is, e. } (Quinque, five; ner- Quinquĕner'vius, a, um. } vus, a nerve.) Bot. Applied to a leaf having five longitudinal nervures separating from its base. Fr. anal. quinquénervé, adj. Germ. syn. fünfnerfig, adj.

Quinquĕpartītus, a, um. (Quinque, five; partītus, divided.) Bot. Composed of five parts produced by divisions prolonged almost to the base, as the calyx of the Digitalis purpurea, the hat of the Agaricus quinquepartitus, etc.: quinquepar'tite. Fr. anal. quinquepartite, adj. Germ. syn. fünftheilig, adj.

Quinqueplĭcātus, a, um. (Quinque, five; plĭcātus, plaited.) Bot. Presenting five plaits, as the columella of the Marginella quinqueplicatus: quinque'plicate. Fr. anal. qinquéplicé, adj. Germ. syn. fünffältig, adj.

Quinquĕpunctātus, a, um. (Quinque, five; punctātus, pointed.) Bot. Marked with five points, as the Coccinella quinquepunctata: quinquepunc'tate. Fr. anal. quinquéponctué, adj. Germ. syn. fünfgetüpfelt, adj.

Quinquĕsĕriātus, a, um. (Quinque, five; sĕriātus, pertaining to a series.) Bot. Applied by H. Cassini to quincuncial leaves because disposed along the stem in five longitudinal rows: quinquese'riate. Fr. anal. quinquésérié, adj. Germ. syn. fünfreihig, adj.

Quinquĕval'vis, is, e. (Quinque, five; valva, a valve.) Bot. Opening in five valves, as the capsule of the Rhododendron. Fr. anal.

quinquévalvé, adj. Germ. syn. fünfthürig, adj.

Quinquĕvīgēsĭmālis, is, e. (Quinque, five; vīgēsĭmālis, the twentieth.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a variety of tourmaline composed of a prism of twelve panes with one summit of seven and the other of six faces: quinquevige'simal. Fr. anal. quinquévigésimal, adj.

Quinquīna, æ, f. M. Med. Another name for Cinchona. Fr. anal. quinquina, m. Germ. syn. Chinabaum, m.

Quinqui'na, Mex'ican. Bot. Name for a febrifuge medicine obtained from the Iva frutescens.

Quin'sy. (Cynanche, sore throat.) Med., Pathol. A popular term for the disease Cynanche tonsillaris, or Tonsillitis phlegmonodes. See Cynanche. Fr. syn. tonsillite, f. Germ. syn. die Entzündung der Mandeln.

Quin'ta Essen'tia. Quintessence; an alchemical term for the active principle of any substance, in which its properties and virtues reside, separated by art from the inert matters with which it was combined. Fr. anal. quintessence, f. Germ. syn. die beste Krafft von etwas.

Quintānus, a, um. (Quintus, the fifth.) Med., Pathol. Pertaining to the fifth; applied to a fever (Quintana febris) the exacerbations of which occur every fifth day. Fr. anal. quintane, adj. Germ. syn. fünftägig, adj.

Quintessence. See Quinta Essentia.

Quintī'cŏlor, ōris, adj. (Quintus, the fifth; cŏlor, a colour.) Ornithol. Applied to birds having plumage of five colours, as the Loxia quinticolor. Fr. anal. quinticolor, adj. Germ. syn. fünffärbig, adj.

Quintidōdĕcăhe'drus, a, um. (Quintus, the fifth; dōdĕcăhedrum.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a variety the faces of which present the combination of five dodecahedrons, as the Calx carbonatus: quintidodecahe'drous, adj. Fr. anal. quintidodecaëdre, adj.

Quintĭfor'mis, is, e. (Quintus, the fifth; forma, a shape.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a variety the faces of which present the combination of five forms which are not of the same species, as the Calx carbonatus quintidodecahedrus: quin'tiform. Fr. anal. quintiforme, adj. Germ. syn. fünfförmig, adj.

Quintīna, æ, f. (Quintus, the fifth.) Bot. In many plants the ovule presents a fifth envelope which Mirbel names quintine; it commences by a kind of thin bowel, organized at the centre of the cellular tissue of the quartine when it exists, and which holds by one end to the summit of the nucella, by the other to the chalaza. The latter adherence usually breaks, the quintine swells into a pendent sac, in which a fine thread descends from the summit of the ovule, and bears at its extremity a globule, which is the newly formed embryo: the quin'tine. Fr. anal. quintine, f.

Quintioctăhe'drus, a, um. (Quintus, the fifth; octăhedrum.) Mineral. Applied to a variety the faces of which present the combination of five different octahedrons, as the Baryta sulphata quintioctahedra. Fr. anal. quintioctaëdre, adj.

Quin'tŭplans, antis, adj. (Quintus, the fifth.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a variety in the sign of which one of the exposants is repeated five times in a series which, without that, would be regular. Fr. anal. quintuplant, adj.

Quin'tŭplex, ĭcis, adj. (Quintus, the fifth; plĭco, to fold.) Bot. Applied by de Candolle to nervures of leaves when a little above their base they produce on each side two other nervures, so that there are reckoned five of them near the base, as the Melastoma discolor: quintu'ple. Applied to a stigma when it is parted into five divisions, as the Campanula aurea: fivefold. Fr. anal. quintuplé, adj. Germ. syn. fünffach, adj.

Quintŭplĭfor'mis, is, e. (Quintŭplex, fivefold; forma, a shape.) Bot. Applied by de Candolle to the nervures of the frond of the Fuci when they are quintupled: quintu'pliform. Fr. anal. quintupliforme, adj. Germ. syn. fünffachförmig, adj.

Quintŭplĭner'vius, a, um. (Quintŭplex, fivefold; nervus, a nerve.) Bot. Applied to a leaf having quintupled nervures, as that of the Lythrum quintuplinervium: quintupliner'vious. Fr. anal. quintuplinervé, adj. Germ. syn. fünffachnervig, adj.

Quŏtĭ'diānus, a, um. (Quŏtĭdie, daily.) Happening every day, or day by day; daily: quoti'dian. Med., Pathol. Applied to a kind of intermittent fever in which the paroxysm returns once in every twenty-four hours, therefore termed quotidiana (febris), or quotidian ague; a genus of the Order Febres; Cl. Pyrexiæ, of Cullen's Nosology. See Amphemerinus, Methemerinus. Fr. anal. quotidien, adj. Germ. syn. täglich vorkommend.

R.

R. Med. This letter, written (generally with a slight flourish at the end) as the commencement of a prescription, is intended for the initial of the word Recipe, signifying Take—of the substances and in the proportions afterwards stated. It was originally the sign ℞ of the planet Jupiter.

Note.—The adoption or rejection of the aspirate in the first syllable of such terms being so arbitrary and uncertain, the simple direction is necessary, that if any be not found under the initial Ra- let them be looked for under Rha-.

Racri. Chem. Old term for Sal ammoniacum.

Radesyge. (Danish.) Med., Pathol. Term for a bad, virulent and infectious disease; Scandinavian syphilis, with particular affection of the throat, the skin, and the bones.

Ra'diad. Anat. A term applied by Dr. Barclay the same as Radial, used adverbially.

Ra'dial. (Rădius, a bone of the arm.) Anat. Of, or belonging to the radius, applied by Dr. Barclay of Edinburgh, in his proposed Nomenclature, when treating of the aspects of the atlantal or upper extremities, as meaning—towards the Radius. Entomol. Jarine termed the cellula radialis a membranous interval in the wing of insects, which a nervure arising from the middle of the carpus and reaching to the tip of the wing, leaves between it and the external border of the latter. Rădiālis, is, e. Fr. anal. radial, adj.

Rădians, antis, part. (Rădio, to radiate.) Bot. Applied by H. Cassini to the corona of the Synantheræ when the flowers which constitute it exceed in length those of the disc. Entomol. Kirby terms areola radians, in an insect's wing, that, of a round form, which is a centre from which many other elongated areolæ part or diverge, as of the Stratyomis: ra'diant. Fr. anal. radiant, part. adj. Germ. syn. strahlenartig, adj.

Rădiārius, a, um. (Rădius, a ray.) Zoöl. Applied by Lamarck, Schweigger, Goldfuss, Ficinus and Carus to a Class (Radiaria, nom. pl. n.) of the animal kingdom, comprehending Invertebrata, all the parts of which, internal and external, present a radiated condition: ra'diary. Fr. anal. radiaire, adj. Germ. syn. strahlig, adj.

Rădiātiflōrus, a, um. (Rădius, a ray; flos, a flower.) Bot. Having radiated flowers, as the Cratæva radiatiflora: radiatiflo'rous. Fr. anal. radiatiflore, adj. Germ. syn. strahlenblümig, adj.

Rădiātifor'mis, is, e. (Rădius, a ray; forma, resemblance.) Bot. Applied by H. Cassini to the calathidium when the flowers are progressively longer as they remove from the centre, and when their superior part is directed outwards, as in the Lactuca: radia'tiform. Fr. anal. radiatiforme, adj. Germ. syn. strahlenförmig, adj.

Rădiātus, a, um. (Rădius, a ray, or spoke of a wheel.) Bot. Applied to a species of compound flower in which the florets of the disk are tubular and those of the radius, ligulate, as the daisy: ra'diated. Mineral. Disposed in rays departing from a common centre, as the articular crystals of the Mesotypa radiata. Zoöl. Applied to a Division (Radiata animalia, nom. pl. n.) of the animal kingdom, embracing animals the parts of which are arranged round an axis and on one or several radii, or on one or several lines extending from one pole to the other; they are also termed Zoöphyta, or zoöphytes. Fr. anal. rayonnant, part. adj. Germ. syn. strahlend, part. adj.

Ra'dical. (Rādix, a root, or ground of anything.) Bot. Applied to leaves springing from a root, as those of the cowslip. Chem. Applied to that which by its union with the acidifying principle, or oxygen, which is common to all acids, distinguishes one from another; as sulphur is the radical of sulphuric acid. Rādīcālis, is, e. Fr. and Germ. anal. radical, adj. Germ. syn. bis zur Wurzel gehend.

Rādīcans, tis, part. adj. (Rādīcor, to take root.) Bot. Applied to a stalk bending to the ground and taking root where it touches the earth, or clinging to any other body for support, and striking root by fibres which do not imbibe nourishment, as the ivy. Fr. anal. radicant, part. adj. Germ. syn. wurzelnd, part. adj.

Radica'tion. (Rādīco, to take root.) Bot. Term for that principle by which plants begin to germinate. Rādīcātio, ōnis, f. Fr. anal. radication, f. Germ. syn. Wurzelung, f.

Rādīcel'la, æ, f. (Dim. Rādix, a root.) Bot. Term by L. C. Richard for a rudiment of a root constituted by the prolongation of the internal substance of the radicle or of the base of the tigella of endorrhizous plants: a ra'dicel. Fr. anal. radicelle, f.

Rādīcellāris, is, e. (Rādīcella.) Bot. Relating to the radicel; having the form of a small root: radicel'lar. Fr. anal. radicellaire, adj.

Rādīcellātio, ōnis, f. (Radix, a root.) Bot. Term by L. C. Richard for all that which relates to the roots of plants: radicella'tion. Fr. anal. radicellation, f.

Rādīcĭ'cŏlus, a, um. (Rādix, a root; cŏlo, to inhabit.) Bot. Applied by de Candolle to plants that are parasites, by their base or root, upon the roots of other plants, as the Cytineæ, Monotropeæ, and Orobancheæ: radici'colous. Fr. anal. radicicole, adj. Germ. syn. wurzelbewohnend, part. adj.

Rādīciflōrus, a, um. (Rādix, a root; flos, a flower.) Bot. Having flowers that grow from the root or from a radiciform stock, as the Spadactis radiciflora: radiciflo'rous. Fr. anal. radiciflore, adj. Germ. syn. wurzelblümig, adj.

Rādīcĭfor'mis, is, e. (Rādix, a root; forma, likeness.) Bot. Resembling a root, or packet of roots, as the Pustulophora radiciforma: radi'ciform. Fr. anal. radiciforme, adj. Germ. syn. wurzelförmig, adj.

Rādīcĭ'vŏrus, a, um. (Rādix, a root; vŏro, to devour.) Entomol., Zoöl. Applied to an animal that devours the roots of plants, as the larve of the may-bug, etc.: radici'vorous. Fr. anal. radicivore, adj. Germ. syn. wurzelfressend, part. adj.

Rādīcŭla, æ, f. (Dim. Rādix, a root.) A little root, or rootlet. Anat. Applied to the origin of nerves and vessels. Bot. Applied to the rudiment of the root which is continuous downwards with the gemmule; also, applied to the small fibres that terminate the root inferiorly, which are always present and alone imbibe the nutritious matter from the soil, the absorbing power residing in the extremity of each radicle, by an expansion of cellular tissue, called a spongiole: a ra'dicule or ra'dicle. Fr. anal. radicule, f. Germ. syn. Wurzelchen, n.

Rādīcŭlĭfor'mis, is, e. (Rādīcŭla, a radicle; forma, likeness.) Bot. Having the form of radicles, as the prolongations by means of which certain lichenes and fuci fix themselves: radi'culiform. Fr. anal. radiculiforme, adj. Germ. syn. wurzelchenförmig, adj.

Rādīcŭlōdium, ii, n. (Rādīcŭla, a radicule.) Bot. Term by L. C. Richard for the inferior extremity of the blastus, from which proceed one or several radicellar tubercles: a radi'culode. Fr. anal. radiculode, m.

Rādīcŭlōsus, a, um. (Rādīcŭla, a radicle; terminal -ōsus.) Bot. Having or full of radicles; applied by L. C. Richard to endorhizous embryoes having a long radicle, or the gemmule of which is much elongated from the radicular end: radi'culous. Applied also to procumbent stems which send forth roots, as of the Pterygophyllum: radi'culous. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. anal. radiculeux, adj.

Rădiŏ'leus, a, um. (Rādio, to radiate.) Zoöl. Applied by Lamarck to a Family (Radiolea, nom. pl. n.) of the Mollusca Cephalopoda Polythalama, the shell of which contains cells radiant from the centre to the circumference: radio'leous. Fr. anal. radiolé, adj.

Rădi'ŏlus, a, m. (Dim. Rādius, a rod or spoke of a wheel.) Med., Surg. Term for a probe; also a sound. Fr. syn. sonde, f.; Germ. syn. Sonde, f.

Rădiōsus, a, um. (Rādio, to radiate; terminal -ōsus.) Nat. Philos. Applied to the point (punctum radiosum) whence emanate the luminous rays: ra'dious. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. anal. radieux, adj.

Ra'dish, Dwarf. Bot. Common name for the Chamæraphanus.

Ra'dish, Garden. Bot. Common name for the Raphanus sativus. Fr. syn. raifort cultivé. Germ. syn. gemeiner Garten-Rettig.

Ra'dish, Horse. M. Med. The common name for the plant Cochlearia armoracia, or Raphanus rusticanus. Fr. syn. raifort sauvage. Germ. syn. Meerrettig, m.; Strahl, m.

Rā'dius, ii, m. (Ῥάβδος, a rod, or staff.) The spoke of a wheel. Anat. The name of a bone which, with the Ulna, or cubits, gives form to the fore-arm, and supports the hand, or from its supposed resemblance to the spoke of a wheel; also called Arundo brachii minor and Cercis. See Focile Minus, Manubrium Manus. Astron. A line drawn from the centre to the circumference of a circle. Bot. The ray of a flower. See Ray. Fr. and Germ. anal. radius, m. Germ. syn. Ellenbogenspeichel, f.

Rādix, īcis, f. (Ῥάδιξ, a branch; because it branches out in the earth.) Bot. The root, or lower extremity of the plant by which it is fixed to the earth, or the substance whereon it grows, absorbing nutritious matter for its support; it consists of the caudex, body, or middle part; the life-knot, or place where the root and stem unite; and the radicles, or inferior terminating fibres of the root. Fr. syn. racine, f. Germ. syn. Wurzel, f.

Rādix Ursi'na. Bot. A name for the root of the Æthusa meum, or baldmoney.

Rādŭla, æ, f. (Rādo, to scrape.) Med., Pharm. Old term the same as Scalprum; it is applicable to any kind of spatula or scraper. See Raspatorium.

Ragwort. Bot. A common name for the Senecio Jacobæa, or St. James's-wort.

Ra'ia, æ, f. Ichthyol. Name of a genus of the Chondropterygii, of which there are several species, all inhabiting the sea. Fr. anal. raie, f. Germ. syn. Roche, f.

Ra'ia Bătis. Ichthyol. Systematic name of the skate, or ray, which grows to great size, weighing from 50 to 200 pounds; it is esteemed as wholesome and delicate. See Squatona. Germ. syn. Glattroche, f.

Rainbow Worm. Med., Pathol. A common name for Herpes iris.

Rai'sin. M. Med. The dried grape, or fruit of the plant Vitis vinifera; also called Uva passa, or passula. See Astaphis. Fr. anal. raisin, f. Germ. syn. Weinbeere, f.

Rak. An East Indian name for a spirit distilled from rue, hence Al Rak, Arrak, or Arack; rue-brandy. See Arack.

Rakasira. Med., M. Med. Term for Kapahu balsam, or the balsamum copaibæ.

Râle. (Fr. Râler, to rattle in the throat.) Med. Term for a rattle; applied to every kind of noise attending the circulation of air in the bronchia and vesicles of the lungs, different from the murmur produced by it in health; it is also termed Rhonchus.

Râle Crépitant. Med., Pathol. The crepitating rattle; a pathognomonic sign of the first degree of pneumonia, being a noise like that of butter boiling, or of particles of salt thrown on live coals or on heated iron; caused by the air passing through a fluid in the minute air-cells.

Râle Muqueuse. Med., Pathol. The mucous rattle; like the sound produced by blowing through a pipe into soapy water; caused by the air passing through sputa accumulated in the bronchia, or trachea, or through blood, mucus, pus, softened tuberculous matter, or a mixture of these.

Râle Sibilant. Med., Pathol. The sibilant, or hissing rattle; like the sound produced by suddenly separating two oiled surfaces; caused by the presence of mucosity not very abundant but thin, viscous, and obstructing more or less completely the small bronchial ramifications which the air must traverse to reach the air-vesicles.

Râle Sonore. Med., Pathol. The sonorous rattle; like the sound of the cooing of a dove, or sometimes the snoring of a sleeping man; owing to the contraction of the bronchial tubes by the swelling of their lining membrane, or to some change in the form of these canals.

Ral'lidæ, patron. m. pl. Ornithol. Applied by Vigors to a Family of the Grallatores, having the Rallus for their type. See Diss. div. i. s. iii. Fr. anal. rallides, m. pl.

Ramag. Chem. Old term for Cinis, or ashes. Ruland and Johnson.

Rāmālīneus, a, um. Bot. Applied by Fee to a tribe (Ramalineæ, nom. pl. f.) of the Lichenes, having the Ramalina for their type: ramali'neous. Fr. anal. ramaliné, adj.

Rāmālis Vēna. (Rāmāle, a dead bough.) Anat. A term applied to the Vena portæ, as in its numerous ramifications resembling a bough stripped of its leaves. Fr. syn. veine-porte, f. Germ. syn. Pfortader, f.

Rāmārius, a, um. The same as Ramealis and Rameus.

Rāmas'trum, i, n. (Rāmus, a branch.) Bot. Term by Jungius for the ramifications of the petiole, or the petioles of a pennate leaf. Fr. anal. ramastre, m.

Rāmeālis, is, e. (Rāmus, a branch.) Bot. Placed upon the branches, as the leaves of the Daphne mezereum: growing on branches, as the mushroom termed Agaricus ramealis: ra'meal. See Ramaris, Rameus. Fr. anal. raméal, adj. Germ. syn. astständig, adj.

Rāmeānus, a, um. (Rāmus, a branch.) Bot. Proceeding from a branch, or originating from metamorphosed branches, as the spines of the Prunus spinosa, the leaves of the Ruscus aculeatus. Fr. anal. raméen, adj. Germ. syn. astig, adj.

Rāmeārius, a, um. (Rāmus, a branch.) Bot. Applied to the aërial roots that grow on branches: ramea'rious. Fr. anal. raméaire, adj. Germ. syn. astständig, adj.

Ramed. M. Med. Old term for Rhabarbarum, or rhubarb.

Rāmel'lus, i, m. (Dim. Rāmus, a branch.) Bot. Applied by Link to the subdivisions of secondary petioles in pennate leaves. Fr. anal. ramelle, f. Germ. syn. astchen, m.

Rāmentāceus, a, um. (Rāmentum.) Bot. Applied to a stem that is covered with small membranous scales, dry and scattered, as the Erica ramentacea: ramenta'ceous. Fr. anal. ramentacé, adj.

Rāmen'tum. (Rādo, to scrape, or rub down.) Bot. Applied to a species of pubescence, consisting of hairs, in form of flat, strap-like portions resembling shavings. Chem. A term for everything which is reduced, or rubbed down by a file, or any other similar instrument; filings; raspings. See Xysis, Xysma. Med., Pathol. Applied, Gr. syn. ξύσματα, by Hippocrates, Aph. vii. 67, to the membraneous particles (Ramenta, nom. pl.) on the internal surfaces of the intestines or even of the bladder, which are scraped off or removed by the more acrid and corroding excrementitious matters in dysentery. See Epithelium, Rasura, Rhinema. Fr. syn. ratissure, f. Germ. syn. Schaben, n.

Rāmeus, a, um. The same as Ramealis.

Rāmex, ĭcis, m. (Rāmus, a branch.) Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for hernia, or rupture. Fr. syn. hernie, f. Germ. syn. Bruch, m.

Rāmĭcor'nis, is, e. (Rāmus, a branch; cornu, a horn.) Entomol. Having ramous antennæ, as those of the males of the Eulophus ramicornis. Fr. anal. ramicorne, adj. Germ. syn. asthörnig, adj.

Rāmĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Rāmus, a branch; fĕro, to bear.) Bot. Bearing branches; applied to buds which produce only leaves and wood: rami'ferous. Fr. anal. ramifère, adj. Germ. syn. asttragend, part. adj.

Rāmĭfĭcātio, ōnis, f. (Rāmus, a branch; făcio, to make.) Bot. Term for the division of an organ, especially of a stem, into many branches: ramifica'tion. Fr. anal. ramification, f. Germ. syn. Verzweigung, f.

Rāmĭfĭcātus, a, um. (Same as preceding.) Synonymous with Ramosus.

Rāmiflōrus, a, um. (Rāmus, a branch; flos, a flower.) Bot. Applied to a plant the flowers of which grow upon the branches, as the Rhamnus ramiflorus: ramiflo'rous. Fr. anal. ramiflore, adj. Germ. syn. astblüthig, adj.

Rāmĭfor'mis, is, e. (Rāmus, a branch; forma, likeness.) Bot. Resembling a twig or branch: ra'miform. Fr. anal. ramiforme, adj. Germ. syn. astförmig, adj.

Ramigri. Chem. Old term the same as Colophonia.

Rāmĭ'părus, a, um. (Rāmus, a branch; pārio, to bring forth.) Zoöl. Applied by Bonnet to polyparia the greater part of which produce ramifications: rami'parous. Fr. anal. ramipare, adj. Germ. syn. astgebärend, part. adj.

Ramollissement. (Fr. Ramollir, to soften again.) Med., Pathol. Term for a softening; appled to disease of the substance of the brain.

Rāmōsis'sĭmus, a, um. (Rāmōsus, much branched.) Bot. Very much branched; having branches repeatedly subdivided: ramosis'simal. Fr. anal. ramosissime, adj.

Rebus. Old term for the ultima rerum materia. Ruland, Dornæus and Johnson.

Receiver. Chem. A vessel fitted to the neck, or beak of a retort, alembic, or the like, for receiving the product of distillation. See Excipulum. Fr. and Germ. syn. récipient, m.

Recep'ta, æ, f. Med., Pharm. A barbarous term for a formula of a remedy or medicine prescribed by a medical practitioner, or for such as occurs in a dispensatory. Scherbius, Thes. Med. Disp. x. § 2, says, that to write long prescriptions (receptas), for the most part, does not seem so much to pertain to the safety or well-being of the sick as, perhaps, to vain glory and for purposes of gain; also called Receptum. See Recipe.

Rĕceptācŭlāris, is, e. (Receptācŭlum, a receptacle.) Bot. Applied by Mirbel to the style when, in place of being attached to the ovary, it is inserted upon the plain receptacle, as in the Borrago; and, according to Desvaux, to the nectary when situated on the receptacle: recepta'cular. Fr. anal. récceptaculaire, adj.

Rĕceptācŭlum, i, n. (Rĕcīpio, to receive.) A recep'tacle. Bot. The common basis on which the parts of fructification are connected. See Cisterna Chyli, Cisterna Lumbaris. Fr. anal. receptacle, m. Germ. syn. Behälter, m.; Fruchtboden, m.

Rĕceptācŭlum Chȳli. Anat. The receptacle of the chyle, or the somewhat expanded lower portion of the thoracic duct; also called Diversorium. Fr. syn. citerne du chyle. Germ. syn. Milchsaftsbehälter, m.

Rĕceptārii. (N. pl. of Rĕceptārius, a, um.) Old term applied by Langius, ii. ep. 23, to "Medici or physicians, who, without any reasoning of their own, collect and take from pharmacopœias, etc., entire fasciculi of formulæ" (receptorum. See Recepta,) "with which they might load a cart."

Receptum. Med. See Recepta.

Rĕces'sus, ūs, m. (Rĕcēdo, to retire or give way.) Med., Surg. Pathol. Old term the same as Apostasis.

Recha. Chem. Old term for Marmor, or marble. Ruland and Johnson.

Rĕ'cĭpe. (Imperative mood of rĕcĭpio, to take.) Med. A word constantly used in abbreviated form, ℞, as the commencement of formulæ of remedies; it corresponds with the ancient word Sume, which was always written entire, as is seen in very old formulæ. See R.

Reclination. (Reclīno, to lie upon.) Anat. A voluntary movement of the muscles. See Cataclisis. Med., Surg. Term for one of the operations for cataract, in which the lens is thrown backwards into the middle and towards the bottom of the vitreous humour, so that its ascent behind the pupil will not again happen. Reclīnātio, ōnis, f. Fr. anal. réclination, f. Germ. syn. Zurückbeugung, f.

Reclīnātus, a, um. (Reclīno, to lie upon.) Bot. Bending downwards; reclining: recli'nate. Fr. anal. récliné, adj. Germ. syn. niedergebogen, adj.

Reclūsor, ōris, m. (Reclūdo, to open.) Anat. Applied to the Levator palpebræ superioris, and termed R. palpebrarum, the opener of the eyelids.

Reclūsus, a, um. (Reclūdo, to open or reveal.) Bot. Applied to the vegetable embryo when it is contained in the perisperms, as in the Anagallis arvensis: recluse. Fr. anal. reclus, adj.

Rĕconvălescen'tia, æ, f. (Re, again; convălesco, to recover health.) Med. The state of recovered or renewed health: reconvales'cence. See Refectio. Fr. anal. réconvalescence, f. Germ. syn. Wiedergenesung, f.

Recrēmen'tum, i, n. Chem. Old term for Scoria, or dross of metals. Ruland and Johnson. Physiol. Formerly used the same as Excrementum: re'crement. Fr. recrément, m. Germ. syn. Auswurf, m.

Recrudes'cence. (Recrūdesco, to wax new, worse, or sore.) Growing worse, or sore again. Med., Pathol. Applied to the period in certain diseases when the pain extends from the part first affected towards the central portions of the body, as the sense of pain communicated in hydrophobia, after the original wound, by which the virus creating the disease was imbibed, has quite healed. Fr. syn. l'action de se rouvrir. Germ. syn. das Wiederaufbrechen einer Wunde; die Rückkehr des Schmerzes.

Rectal'gia, æ, f. (Rectum, the straight gut; ἄλγος, pain.) Med., Pathol. Term the same as Proctalgia, or pain of the anus or of the rectum: rectal'gy. Fr. and Germ. anal. Rectalgie, f.

Rectan'gle. (Rectus, right; angŭlus, an angle.) Geom. A right angle, or corner; applied to a parallelogram whose angles are right, or to a square whose sides as well as angles are all equal. Rectan'gŭlus, i, m. Fr. anal. rectangle, m. Germ. syn. Rechtwinkel, m.

Rectangŭlāris, is, e. (Rectus, straight; angŭlus, an angle.) Crystall. Applied by Brochart to a prism, the dihedral, lateral angles of which are always equal: rectan'gular. Fr. anal. rectangulaire, adj. Germ. syn. rechtwinkelig, adj.

Rectem'bryus, a, um. (Rectus, straight; embryon, an embryo.) Bot. Applied to a Section (Rectembryæ, nom. pl. f.) established by de Candolle, of the Leguminosæ, and which contains those the radicle of the embryo of which is straight. Fr. anal. rectembryé, adj.

Rectĭcor'nis, is, e. (Rectus, straight; cornu, a horn.) Entomol. Applied by Latreille to a Section (Recticornes, nom. pl. m.) of the Coleoptera Rhyncophora, having straight antennæ. Fr. anal. recticorne, adj. Germ. syn. geradhornig, adj.

Rectĭfĭcātio, ōnis, f. (Rectĭfĭco, to make right.) Chem. Term for a second distillation in which substances are purified by their more volatile parts being raised by heat carefully managed: rectifica'tion. Fr. anal. rectification, f. Germ. syn. Verbesserung, f.

Rectĭfĭcātus, a, um. (Rectĭfĭco, to make right.) Chem. Made more pure, or stronger; rectified. Fr. anal. rectifié, adj. Germ. syn. rectificirt, adj.; verbessert, adj.

Rectified Spirit. M. Med. See Spiritus Rectificatus.

Rectiflōrus, a, um. (Rectus, straight; flos, a flower.) Bot. Applied by H. Cassini to the calathidium of the Synantheræ, when all the flowers that constitute it are parallel to its axis: rectiflo'rous. Fr. anal. rectiflore, adj. Germ. syn. geradblümig, adj.

Recti'grădus, a, um. (Rectus, straight; grădior, to walk.) Entomol. Applied to spiders which, in their march, walk always straight before them: rec'tigrade. Fr. anal. rectigrade, adj. Germ. syn. geradschrittig, adj.

Rectĭlīneus, a, um. (Rectus, straight; līnea, a line.) Bot. Lengthened in a straight line and presenting neither curves nor sinuosities, as the aculei of the Rosa spinosissima, the antheræ of the Datura arborea, etc.: rectili'neous. Fr. anal. rectiligne, adj. Germ. syn. geradlinig, adj.

Rectĭner'vis, is, e. (Rectus, straight; nervus, a nerve.) Bot. Applied to leaves the nervures of which are prolonged in a straight line, as of the Betula alnus. Fr. anal. rectinerve, adj. Germ. syn. geradnervig, adj.

Rectiros'tris, is, e. (Rectus, straight; rostrum, a beak.) Conchol., Ornithol., Zoöl. Applied to shells, as the Rostellaria rectirostris; to birds, as the Dendrocopus rectirostris; to crustaceæ, as the Daphnia rectirostris: rectiro'strate. Fr. anal. rectirostre, adj. Germ. syn. geradschnabelig, adj.

Rectītis, ĭdis, f. (Rectum, the straight gut; terminal -ītis.) Med., Pathol. Term for inflammation of the rectum. See Proctitis.

Rectius'cŭlus, a, um. (Rectus, straight; terminal -ŭlus.) That which is almost but not completely straight: rectius'culous. Fr. anal. rectiuscule, adj.

Rectostenosis. See, as more correct, Proctostenosis.

Rec'trix, trīcis, f. (Rĕgo, to rule, or guide.) Ornithol. Applied to the plumes (nom. pl.) of the tail of birds. Fr. anal. rectrice, f. Germ. syn. Schwanzfeder, f.; Steuerfeder, f.

Rec'tum, i, n. (Rectus, right, or straight; because it was erroneously supposed to be straight.) Anat. A term for the last portion of the large intestine, terminating at the anus. See Apeuthysmenos, Archos, Longanon. Fr. anal. rectum, m. Germ. syn. Mastdarm, m.

Rec'tus, a, um. (Rĕgo, to rule, or govern.) Anat., Bot. Right; straight; applied to muscles and to parts of plants from their direction. See Obelæus. Fr. syn. droit, adj. Germ. syn. gerade, adj.

Rĕcur'rens, entis, part. (Rĕcurro, to run back.) Anat. Turning or running back; applied to a nerve and to branches of arteries, nerves, etc., from their course: recur'rent. Fr. anal. recurrent, adj. Germ. syn. zurücklaufend, part. adj.

Rĕcurvātio, ōnis, f. (Re, again; curvo, to bend.) Anat., Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for a bending backwards; applied to the vertebral column: recurva'tion. Fr. anal. récurvation, f. Germ. syn. Rückwärtsbiegung, f.

Rĕcurvātus, a, um. } (Rĕcurvo, to bend back.)
Rĕcur'vus, a, um. } Bot. Bent, or bowed backwards; reflected: recur'vate. Fr. anal. recourbé, adj. Germ. syn. gekrümmt, adj.; abwärts gebogen.

Rĕcurvifō'lius, a, um. (Rĕcurvus, bent backwards; fŏlium, a leaf.) Bot. Having leaves recurved or reflected at their extremity, as the Saxifraga recurvifolia: recurvifo'lious. Fr. anal. récurvifolié, adj. Germ. syn. gekrümmtblättrig, adj.

Rĕcurvĭros'tris, is, e. (Rĕcurvus, bent backwards; rostrum, a beak.) Bot. Applied to the Weissia recurvirostris, because its opercules are prolonged into a somewhat arched beak. Ornithol. Having the beak bent downwards, as the Œdicnemus recurvirostris, Anas recurvirostris: recurviros'trate. Fr. anal. récurvirostre, adj. Germ. syn. gekrümmtschnabelig, adj.

Rĕcŭtītio, ōnis, f. (Re, back; cŭtis, the skin.) Med., Surg. Old term for an operation or expedient by which a defect of the prepuce, whether circumcised, destroyed by disease, or naturally absent, might be renewed, the instrument for accomplishing which was called Spathester, according to D. Ammannus; but Johannes Rhodius well wrote that in Recutiti the prepuce never could be restored either spontaneously or by art. Fr. anal. récutition, f. Germ. syn. an der (Vor-)Haut beschnittung.

Rĕcŭtītus, a, um. (Re, back again; cūtis, the skin.) Med., Surg. By senecdoche, this term is applied to one in whom the prepuce is cut off; properly, however, it means one in whom the skin is turned backwards from the glans, because the portion of skin left after ablation of the prepuce is retracted; it also means circumcised, or having the skin exulcerated; also, applied formerly to him that was without a prepuce, and in whom it had new-grown again. See Recutitio. Fr. anal. recutite, adj. Germ. syn. an der (Vor-)Haut beschnitten.

Red. (Sax. Reád.) A lively colour representing the quality of fire. Rūber, bra, brum. See Phœniceus. Fr. syn. rouge, adj. Germ. syn. roth, adj.

Red Behen. Bot. A common name for the Statice limonium, or sea-thrift.

Red, Blood. Nat. Philos. See Sanguineus.

Red, Bright. Nat. Philos. See Puniceus.

Red Cedar. Bot., M. Med. Common name for the Juniperus Virginiana (Pharm. U.S.A.).

Red, Dark. Nat. Philos. See Atrorubeus.

Red, Dull. Nat. Philos. See Miniatus.

Red, Fiery. Nat. Philos. See Rutilus.

Red Gown. } Med., Pathol. Popular terms for Red Gum. } the disease Strophulus intertinctus, the first, because the skin when covered by the characteristic papulæ resembles some printed cotton, or other stuff; the latter, from the general red appearance of the papulæ, elevated above the cuticle and distinct from each other.

Red Gum, Rank. Med., Pathol. Common name for the Strophulus confertus.

Red Lead. Chem. Common name for Minium, or the red oxide of lead. See Cauda Vulpis, Rubicundi Miltos. Fr. syn. plomb rouge. Germ. syn. rothes Bleioxyd.

Red, Light. Nat. Philos. See Cinnabarinus.

Red Preci'pitate. M. Med. The common name for the Hydrargyri nitrico-oxydum, or nitric oxide of mercury. See Corallatum.

Red Sandal. }
Red Sanders. } M. Med. Common names for the wood of the tree Pterocarpus santalinus.
Red Saunders. }

Reddle. Med., Pharm. Name of a kind of ochre, or argillaceous earth of a dark red colour; used as antacid and tonic.

Redibia. See Reduvia.

Rĕdintegrātio, ōnis, f. (Re, again; integer, entire.) Med., Physiol. Term for a reforming of a part or organ; complete restitution; regeneration: redintegra'tion. See Refectio. Fr. anal. rédintégration, f. Germ. syn. Erneuerung, f.; Wiederherstellung, f.

Rĕdintegrātus, a, um. (Same as preceding.) Med., Physiol. Re-formed; renewed; restored; redin'tegrate. Fr. anal. rédintégré, adj. Germ. syn. erneuert, adj.; wiederhergestellt, adj.

Redness. See Rubedo, Rubor.

Redubia. See Reduvia.

Reduc. Chem. Old term for a flux or powder by which calcined metals or minerals are melted, again reducing them to a metallic regulus; also called Redux.

Reduc'tion. (Rĕdūco, to bring back.) Chem. The process by which metals that may have been changed or disguised by a union with other substances, are restored to their metallic state. Med., Surg. The returning of a dislocated bone into its natural situation is so termed. Rĕduc'tio, ōnis, f. See Apothesis, Arthrombole, Catartismus, Catastasis, Catatasis, Cathedrysis, Diorthosis, Embole, Mochlia, Perisphalsis. Fr. anal. réduction, f. Germ. syn. Wiederherstellung, f.

Rĕduc'tor, ōris, m. (Rĕdūco, to bring back.) Anat. A bringer or leader back; applied to a muscle of the vertebral column. Fr. anal. réducteur, m. Germ. syn. Rückführer, m.

Rĕdun'dans, antis, part. (Rĕdundo, to overflow.) Zoöl. Applied by Terassac to certain helices, the animal of which is too voluminous for its shell, into which it has difficulty in entering: redun'dant. Fr. anal. rédondant, adj. Germ. syn. überflüssig, adj.

Reduplica'tion. (Rĕduplĭco, to double.) A redoubling; applied to a figure in rhetoric where one verse ends with the same word that the following one begins with. Med. Applied to the paroxysms of ague of a double type. Rĕduplĭcātio, ōnis, f. See Anadiplosis. Fr. anal. réduplication, f.

Rĕduplĭcātīvus, a, um. (Rĕduplĭco, to double.) Bot., Physiol. Applied by de Candolle to æstivation when the parts of a floral tegument, being rigorously verticillated upon a single row, are disposed in a circle, but each having its replicated border and rolled from the outside, as the petals of certain Umbelliferæ: reduplica'tive. Fr. anal. reduplicatif, adj. Germ. syn. verdoppelnd, part. adj.

Rĕdŭ'via, æ, f. Med., Surg. Pathol. Old term for Paronychia; also called Redibia and Redubia. Keuchen.

Rĕdŭvīnus, a, um. Entomol. Applied by Latreille to a Division (Reduvini, nom. pl. m.) of the Hemiptera Cimicidæ, having the Reduvius for their type. Fr. anal. réduvine, adj.

Rĕdux, ūcis, m. (Rĕdūco, to lead back.) Chem. See Reduc.

Reed. (Sax. Hreod.) Bot. Common name for the Arundo phragmites. See Donax.

Reed-mace. Bot. Common name for a species of Typha.

Rĕfec'tio, ōnis, f. (Rĕfĭcio, to repair or amend.) Med. Old term used the same as Analeptus, Reconvalescentia, Redintegratio: refec'tion. Fr. anal. refection, f. Germ. syn. Wiederherstellung, f.

Rĕfectīvus, a, um. } (Rĕfĭcio, to repair.)
Rĕfĭ'ciens, entis, part. } Med., Pharm. Renewing or repairing; applied to remedies (Refectiva or Reficientia remedia); restorative: refec'tive: refi'cient. Fr. anal. réficient, adj. Germ. syn. wiederherstellend, part. adj.

Reflec'tion. (Reflecto, to turn, or bend again.) Nat. Philos. Term for the phenomenon which takes place when a body, of a certain softness, in meeting another that forms an obstacle to it has the power of resuming its course, or following another direction; or for the turning back of a ray of light when it falls on a hard or polished body in an angle equal to that of its incidence. Fr. anal. reflexion, f. Germ. syn. Zurückwerfung, f. Physiol. Applied to meditation, or a series of thoughts or considerations that succeed each other. Germ. syn. Nachdenken, n.; Ueberlegung, f. Surg. Pathol. Term applied to bending back of the uterus. See Retroversio Uteri. Also, applied to eversion or bending back of the eyelids. See Ectropium. Reflec'tio, ōnis, f. Fr. anal. réflexion, f. Germ. syn. Zurückbeugung, f.

Reflec'tion, Angle of. Nat. Philos. Term for the angle made by the line of direction of the reflected body at the point of contact where it flies off. Fr. anal. angle de reflexion. Germ. syn. Reflexions-Winkel, m.

Reflec'tive Fa'culties. Phrenol. Term for those faculties which produce ideas of abstract relation, or which reflect, ministering to the direction of all the other powers and constituting what we call reason or reflection, viz. Comparison and Causality. Fr. anal. facultés réflectives.

Re'flex. (Reflecto, to turn, or bend back again.) Med., Physiol. A term applied to certain actions and functions of living beings; also to certain of the spinal system of nerves. Refle'xus, a, um. See Reflex Action, Reflex Function, and Reflex Spinal Nerves. Fr. anal. réfléchi, adj. Germ. syn. zurückgebeugt, adj.

Re'flex Ac'tion. Med., Physiol. A term applied to those pathological movements caused by irritation of the origin of the incident spinal nerves, by which the impression is conveyed to the true spinal marrow, and from it is brought back by the reflex spinal nerves producing the movements in question. This may be exemplified in a case of paraplegia, if cold or heat be applied to the limb; if the skin be pinched, a hair plucked, or the sole of the foot tickled, a movement will be immediately observed. Reflex actions embrace those formerly called sympathetic, as sneezing, coughing, vomiting, etc. Fr. anal. action réfléchie.

Re'flex Arc. Med., Physiol. The same as Diastaltic arc.

Re'flex Func'tion. Med., Physiol. A term applied to certain of the functions of living beings, as distinguished from reflex actions, which are pathological, and not embracing any part of the sympathetic actions of former days, as coughing, sneezing, vomiting, etc., which belong to reflex actions. Fr. anal. fonction réfléchie.

Re'flex Spi'nal Nerves. Med., Physiol. Applied to those of the spinal system of nerves which convey motor phænomena from the true spinal marrow, consequent on impressions upon, or irritation of the surface of the body, or mucous membranes, brought to it by the incident spinal nerves. See Spinal System of Nerves.

Reflexi'bilis, is, e. (Reflexus, bent back.) That which is susceptible of being bent backwards: refle'xible. Fr. syn. reflexible, adj. Germ. syn. Zurückstrahlungfahig, adj.

Reflexibi'litas, ātis, f. (Reflecto, to bend back.) The power or faculty of reflecting. Nat. Philos. The reflexibility of the ray of the solar spectrum is not always the same, and this circumstance explains, to a certain degree, the blue colour of the heavens, the atmosphere reflecting with greater facility, and, in consequence, in greater quantity the violet, indigo, and blue rays, the whole of which produces that tint: reflexibi'lity. Fr. anal. reflexibilité, f. Germ. syn. Zurückstrahlung, f.

Reflex'iflōrus, a, um. (Reflexus, bent back; flos, a flower.) Bot. Applied to a plant having the divisions of the calyx reflected outwards, as the Jacksonia reflexiflora: reflexiflo'rous. Fr. anal. réflexiflore, adj. Germ. syn. Zurückgeschlagenblümig, adj.

Reflе'xus, a, um. (Reflecto, to turn, or bend back again.) Anat., Bot., Physiol. Bent back; reflected: re'flex. See Recurvatus. Fr. anal. réfléchi, adj.; rébroussé, adj. Germ. syn. zurückgebeugt, adj.

Reflu'xus, i, m. (Refluo, to flow back.) Nat. Philos. Term for the movement of the sea when it retires after the flux or flow; the ebb; the re'flux. Fr. anal. réflux, m. Germ. syn. Ebbe, n.; Zurückflüss, m. Med., Physiol. Applied to the return of the blood from the head, or from the lower half of the body to the heart. Germ. syn. der Rückfluss des Bluts.

Refractārius, a, um. (Refrāgor, to resist.) Chem. Applied to a substance which it is difficult or impossible to melt: refracta'rious. Fr. anal. réfractaire, adj. Germ. syn. schwerflüssig, adj.; stringflüssig, adj.

Refrac'tion. (Refringo, to break.) Nat. Philos. In dioptrics, the variation of a ray of light from that right line in which its motion would have continued were it not for the resistance made by the thickness of the medium through which it passes. Refractio, ōnis, f. Fr. anal. réfraction, f. Germ. syn. Strahlenbrechung, f.

Refractīvus, a, um. (Refringo, to break.) Nat. Philos. Newton terms refractive power that which diaphanous bodies exercise upon the luminous rays to divert them from their primitive direction, and which is an accelerating power acting perpendicularly on the surface of those bodies: refrac'tive. Fr. anal. réfractif, adj. Germ. syn. brechend, part. adj.

Refrac'tus, a, um. (Refringo, to break.) Bent, as if broken; refrac'ted. Fr. syn. qui souffre réfraction. Germ. syn. gebrochen, adj.

Refrangi'bilis, is, e. (Refringo, to break.) Nat. Philos. That which is susceptible of refraction. The different rays of the spectrum are not refrangible in the same degree; violet possesses the greatest refrangibility, and red the least: refran'gible. Fr. anal. réfrangible, adj. Germ. syn. brechbar, adj.

Refrangibi'litas, ātis, f. (Refringo, to break.) Nat. Philos. Term for a property of the luminous rays of removing or approaching from the perpendicular, raised to the point of immersion, when they fall obliquely from a diaphanous medium into another: refrangibi'lity. Fr. anal. réfrangibilité, f. Germ. syn. Brechbarkeit, f.

Refri'gerant. (Refrīgĕro, to cool.) Med., Pharm. Applied to medicines which cool the body, or the blood. Refrīgĕrans, tis, part. See Psychticus, Psygma, Psycterius, Psycticus. Fr. anal. réfrigerant, adj. Germ. syn. kühlend, part. adj.

Refrīgĕrātio, ōnis, f. (Refrīgĕro, to cool.) Med., Chem., Nat. Philos. Term for the lowering of the temperature of a body by parting with its caloric to the less warm bodies that surround it: refrigera'tion. Fr. anal. réfrigération, f.; syn. refroidissement, m. Germ. syn. Abkühlung, f.; Erkältung, f.

Refrīgĕrātōrium, ii, n. (Refrīgĕro, to cool.) Chem. Term for a vessel filled with cool water, for condensing vapours, or cooling substances that are made to pass through it. Fr. syn. réfrigeratoire, m.

Refrin'gens, entis, part. (Refringo, to break.) Mineral. The term refringent faces is applied to the only two faces across which most minerals that have double refraction, present two images of the same object; and refringent angle to that which forms the two faces, one of which receives the luminous ray which is refracted in the interior of the body, and the other presents to it an issue for its return into the air. Nat. Philos. The term refringent medium is applied to that which changes the route to the luminous rays at the point where they enter to traverse it. Newton termed the refringent power of a body the quotient of its refractile power by its density. Fr. anal. réfringent, adj. Germ. syn. brechend, part. adj.

Rĕgĕnĕrātio, ōnis, f. (Rĕgĕnĕro, to beget again.) Med. Term the same as Palingenesia: regenera'tion. Fr. anal. régénération, f. Germ. syn. Wiedererzeugung, f.

Rĕ'gĭmen, ĭnis, n. (Rĕgo, to govern.) Med. The plan, or regulation of the diet. Fr. anal. régime, m. Germ. syn. Lebensordnung, f.

Rēgīna, æ, f. (A queen.) Chem. Old name for the Luna philosophorum or Lapis philosophicus, transforming the baser metals, copper, tin, iron, into the purest silver. Pharm. A former name of a liquid composition for the eyes; also called Reparatrix by Galen.

Rēgīna Prāti. Bot. The queen of the meadow; a name for the Spiræa ulmaria, or meadow-sweet. Fr. syn. reine de prairie. Germ. syn. Mehlkraut, n.; Wiesenköniginn, f.

Re'gion. (Rĕgo, to govern; because a region or district was governed by an appointed officer.) Anat. Term for a particular portion of the body according to the division of anatomists; also applied to any portion in reference to a particular organ, or viscus, as the region of the liver, heart, kidney, etc. Rē'gio, ōnis, f. Fr. anal. région, adj. Germ. syn. Gegend, f.

Rēgius, a, um. (Rex, a king.) Chem., Med., Pathol., Pharm. Royal; regal; applied to metals, diseases, medicines, etc., by way of eminence. Fr. syn. royal, adj. Germ. syn. königlich, adj.; herrlich, adj.

Rēgma, ătis, n. (Ῥῆγμα, a rupture.) Bot. Term by Mirbel for the dieresilious fruits which are usually freed from their pannex-terna at the period of maturity, and which divide themselves into many cells, the two valves opening by an elastic movement. Fr. anal. regmate, m.

Rēgŭlāriflōrus, a, um. (Rēgŭlāris, regular; flos, a flower.) Bot. Applied by H. Cassini to the calathidium and the discus of the Synanthereæ, when composed of flowers with regular corols: regulariflo'rous. Fr. anal. régulariflore, adj. Germ. syn. regularblüthig, adj.

Rēgŭlārifor'mis, is, e. (Rēgŭlāris, regular; forma, shape.) Bot. Applied by H. Cassini to corols of the Synanthereæ which are slightly regular: regula'riform. Fr. anal. régulariforme, adj. Germ. syn. regularförmig, adj.

Rēgŭlāris, is, e. (Rēgŭla, a rule.) Bot. Applied to cellular tissue the cellules of which present, in every respect, a form sensibly hexagonal; to flowers in which pieces of the same nature, composing each of the organic systems, are absolutely similar among themselves; and corols, in which the petals or lobes are sensibly equal and similar, whatever their form otherwise; to calyces in the same circumstances; to corymbs, the peduncles of which are lengthened in such proportion that all the flowers form an equal surface, plain or convex, as in the Achillea millefolium. Entomol. Applied to antennæ when their articulations follow a progressive order in the modifications which they experience. Mineral. Applied to a prism the cutting of which, perpendicular to the axis, is a regular hexagon, or of which two lateral adjacent faces are inclined between them to 120 degrees. Zoöl. Applied to an inequivalve shell when all the individuals of the same species are absolutely alike. Applied by Latreille to a Family (Regularia, nom. pl. n.) of the Echinodermata Echinoida, having the mouth and anus diametrically opposed to each other: re'gular. Fr. anal. régulier, adj. Germ. syn. regelmässig, adj.

Rēgŭlīnus, a, um. (Rēgŭlum, old term for pure metal.) Chem. Applied synonymously with Metallicus: re'guline. The reguline state of a metal is that of its perfect purity. Fr. anal. régulin, adj.

Rēgŭlum, i, n. (Rēgŭlus, a pure metal.) Chem. Formerly employed as a synonyme sometimes of a demi-metal, sometimes of the pure. Fr. anal. régule, m.

Rēgŭlus, i, m. (Dim. Rex, a king.) Chem. A term applied to a pure metal which has been reduced from its ore. Fr. anal. régule, m Germ. syn. reguliniches Metall.

Rēgŭlus Joviālis. Chem. Old term for an alloy of antimony and tin.

Rēgŭlus Vĕ'nĕris. Chem. Old term for an alloy of antimony and copper.

Regurgĭtātio, ōnis, f. (Re, again; gurgĭto, to swallow.) Med., Physiol. Term used synonymously with Eructatio. Fr. anal. régurgitation, f. Germ. syn. Wiederauswurgen, n.

Rĕlātīvus, a, um. (Rĕfĕro, to refer.) Having relation to; applied to properties when compared among themselves, in many bodies that are subject to one or more determinate conditions: re'lative. Fr. anal. rélatif, adj. Germ. syn. beziehend, part. adj.

Relaxa'tion. (Rĕlaxo, to loosen.) Med. Languor; debility. Rĕlaxātio, ōnis, f. See Chalasis. Fr. anal. rélaxation, f. Germ. syn. Erschlassung, f.; Nachlassen, n.

Relhanie'us, a, um. Bot. Applied by Lessing to a sub-tribe (Relhanieæ, nom. pl. f.) of the Senecionideæ, having the Relhania for their type. Fr. anal. relhanié, adj.

Rĕlĭ'quiæ, ārum, f. pl. (Rĕlinquo, to leave.) Things that are left; remains. Geol. Applied to the organic remains found in the earth, as the fossil Zöophyta, shells, Crustaceæ, etc. Fr. anal. réliques, f. pl. Germ. syn. Uberbleibsel, n. pl.; Uberrest, m. pl.

Rēma, ătis, n. ((Rēmus, an oar.) Zoöl. Term by Savigny applied to two parts, the one superior, the other inferior to the lateral line, which present appendages at the sides of the rings of certain Chetopoda, as the Nereis, because they appear effectually to serve the animal in swimming. See Latirematus. Fr. anal. rame, f.

Remansio. The same as Emansio.

Rĕmĕ'dium, ii, n. (Re, back; mĕdeor, to heal or cure.) Med. That which is employed in the treatment of diseases, whether palliative, preventive, or curative: a re'medy. See Rhyona. Fr. anal. remède, m. Germ. syn. Arzeneimittel, n.; Heilmittel, n.

Rĕmĕ'dium Dīvīnum. Bot., Med. A term formerly applied to the Imperatoria ostruthium, from its supposed efficacy.

Rēmĭfer, *a, um. } (Rēmus, an oar.) Zoöl.
Rēmĭ'fĕrus, a, um. } Having a rema; applied to the Sorex remifer, because its tail is flat and like a rema at its extremity: remi'ferous. Fr. anal. rémifère, adj. Germ. syn. rudertragend, part. adj.

Rēmĭges, f. pl. (Rēmĭgo, to row.) Ornithol. Applied to lengthened, strong, and stiff feathers in the wings, which answer the purpose of oars. Fr. anal. rémiges, f. pl. Germ. syn. Ruderfedern, f. pl.; Schwingfedern, f. pl.

Rēmĭpes, pĕdis, adj. (Rēmus, an oar; pes, a foot.) Entomol. Having feet like oars, because of the broad hairs which garnish them, as those of the Culex remipes. Applied by Duméril to a Family (Remipedes, nom. pl. m.) of the Coleoptera having tarsi proper for natation: re'mipede. See Nectopodus. Fr. anal. rémipède, adj. Germ. syn. ruderfüssig, adj.

Remis'sion of Disease. Med. See Diadosis, Endosis.

Rēmĭtar'sus, a, um. (Rēmus, an oar; tarsus.) Entomol. Applied by Duméril to a Family (Remitarsi, nom. pl. m.) of the Hemiptera, having their hind feet formed so as to enable them to swim. See Hydrocoreus. Fr. anal. rémitarse, f. Germ. syn. ruderfuss-wurzelig, adj.

Remit'tent. (Rĕmitto, to abate.) Med., Pathol. Applied to disorders the symptoms of which abate considerably and then return again and again until the disease is overcome, or proves fatal. Rĕmit'tens, tis, part. Res Nātūrāles. Med., Physiol. The naturals, or natural things; comprehending, according to Boerhaave, life, its cause and its effects, which remain in some degree notwithstanding all disease. Fr. syn. choses naturales.

Res Non-nātūrāles. Physiol. The non-naturals, or non-natural things; a term signifying those principal things and substances which though they do not form components of the body, still are necessary to its existence, they are "six in number, viz. air, meat and drink, motion and rest, sleep and wakefulness, and lastly, the secreta and retenta. They are called non-natural, because any excess in respect to them occasions disorder." Greenhill, from Blancard's Lex. Med. See Necessariæ Res. Fr. syn. choses non-naturales.

Rescis'sion. (Rescindo, to cut in sunder.) Surg. A term for repeated amputation; a cutting off again. Rescis'sio, ōnis, f. Fr. anal. réscission, f. Germ. syn. Aufdehnung, f.; Umstopffung, f.

Resec'tion. (Rĕsĕco, to pare, or cut off.) Surg. Term for a variety of amputation. Rĕsec'tio, ōnis, f. Fr. anal. résection, f. Germ. syn. Wegschneiden, n.

Resedāceus, a, um. Bot. Applied to a Family (Resedaceæ, nom. pl. f.) of plants established by de Candolle, having the Reseda for their type: reseda'ceous. Fr. anal. résédacé, adj.

Resela Luteŏla. Bot. A name of Linnæus, for weld, or woad, used as a yellow dye.

Rĕsĭden'tia, æ, f. (Rĕsĭdĕo, to sit down.) Med. Old term used the same as Subsidentia, as in the urine. See Hypostasis. Fr. anal. résidence, f. Germ. syn. Bodensatz, m.

Resin. M. Med., Pharm. See Resina.

Re'sin, Elas'tic. A name for caoutchouc. Fr. syn. résine élastique.

Re'sin of Copper. Chem. Name given by Boyle to the protochloride of copper from its appearance. Fr. syn. résine de cuivre.

Rēsīna, æ, f. (Ῥητίνη, from ῥέω, to flow; because it is exuded from trees.) M. Med., Pharm. The pharmacopœial name (L. E. and U.S.A.) for a vegetable, solid, inflammatory substance, soluble in alcohol and in oil but not in water, and yielding a large quantity of soot by combustion; the residuum of the turpentines of various species of Pinus and Abies: re'sin. See Peucine. Fr. anal. résine, f. Germ. syn. Harz, n.

Rēsīna Al'ba. M. Med. White resin; being the inspissated juice obtained by exudation from incisions in the bark of the Pinus sylvestris, etc.; also the residuum of the distillation of turpentine in a particular state of purity. Fr. anal. résine blanche. Germ. syn. das weisse gemeine Harz.

Rēsīna Flāva. M. Med. Yellow resin, being the residuum of the distillation of oil of turpentine. Fr. synl résine jaune.

Rēsīna Ni'gra. Chem. Black resin, a name for the residuum in the retort after distilling oil of turpentine from common turpentine; also called Colophonia. See Pix Nigra. Fr. syn. résine noire.

Rēsīna Nŏvi Bel'gii. Bot. Botany Bay gum; a name for a resin found in round tears, from the size of a pea to that of a marble, under the long grassy leaves at the top of the trunk of the Xanthorrhœa hastilis; these tears, when softened by the heat of the sun, frequently fall to the ground, adhering to whatever they come in contact with, hence the gum is often found mixed with earth, sand, wood, bark, etc.

Rēsīnālis, is, e. } The same as Resinatus.

Resi'nate. (Rēsīna, a resin; terminal -āte.) Chem. Term by Berzelius for combinations of the resins with bases. Rēsīnas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. résinate, m.

Rēsīnātus, a, um. (Rēsīna, resin.) Bot., Pharm. Of or belonging to resin; formerly applied as an epithet of certain wines impregnated with odorous resins, as mentioned by Celsus and Pliny. Fr. anal. résiné, adj. Germ. syn. mit Harzbestrehen oder überzegen.

Rēsīnidæ, patron. m. pl. M. Med. Name by Guibourt for a Family of ternary organic compounds, including the resins. See Diss. div. i. s. iii. Fr. anal. resinides, f. pl.

Rēsīnĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Rēsīna, resin; fĕro, to bear.) Bot. Bearing, or affording resin, as the Eucalyptus resiniferus: resini'ferous. See Acarois Resinifera. Fr. anal. résinifère, adj. Germ. syn. harztragend, part. adj.

Rēsīnĭfor'mis, is, e. (Rēsīna, a resin; forma, likeness.) Having the appearance of a resin: resi'niform. Fr. anal. résiniforme, adj. Germ. syn. harzförmig, adj.

Rēsīnītēs, adj. (Rēsīna, a resin.) Mineral. Applied to a body having the aspect of a resin. Fr. anal. résinite, adj. Germ. syn. harzähnlich, adj.

Rēsīnŏcērum, i, n. (Rēsīna, resin; cēra, wax.) Med., Pharm. Old term for a mixture of resin with wax, mentioned by Galen.

Rēsīnōdeus, a, um. (Rēsīnōdēs, resinous.) Med., Pharm. Applied to remedies (Resinodea remedia) containing resins. Should be Resinodes, or its analogue, Resinosus. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. syn. resineux, adj. Germ. syn. harzartig, adj.

Rēsīnoīdēs, adj. (Rēsīna, a resin; terminal -īdēs.) M. Med., Pharm. Resembling a resin: re'sinoid. See Diss. div. i. s. i. Fr. anal. résinoïde, adj. Germ. syn. harzähnlich, adj.

Rēsīnoīdēus, a, um. (Rēsīna, a resin; terminal -īdeus.) Med., Pharm. Applied by Béral, the same as Resinodeus, to a plaster and salve containing resin. See Diss. div. i. s. ii. Fr. syn. résineux, adj. Germ. syn. harzartig, adj.

Rēsīnŏ'leus, a, um. (Rēsīna, a resin; oleum, oil.) Med., Pharm. Applied by Béral to solutions (Resinolea medicamenta) of resin. Germ. syn. Harzauflosung, f.

Rēsīnŏ'lĭcus, a, um. (Rēsīna, a resin.) Med., Pharm., Surg. Applied by Béral to resinous dressings for wounds: resino'licous. Fr. anal. résinolique, adj. Germ. syn. Harzverbindung, f.

Re'sinous. (Rēsīna, resin; terminal -ōsus.) Belonging to, or of the nature of resin; full of resin, or having resin. Rēsīnōsus, a, um. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. anal. résineux, adj. Germ. syn. harzartzig, adj.

Rēsīnŭla, æ, f. (Dim. Rēsīna, a resin.) M. Med. Term sometimes used for the body which Boncastre designates a subresin.

Resis'tance. (Rĕsisto, to withstand.) Nat. Philos. Name given in mechanics to all the force which cannot be balanced or overcome by employing another force for its displacement. Phrenol. Rĕsistantia, æ, f. See Weight. Fr. anal. résistance, f. Germ. syn. Widerstand, m.

Resistantia.
Resistentia. } See Resistance.

Rĕsōlūtio, ōnis, f. Med. Formerly used the same as Dialysis, Institutio, Lysia, Paralysis. See Resolution.

Rĕsōlūtio Nervōrum. Med., Pathol. Old term for Paralysis, or palsy.

Resolu'tion. (Rĕsolvo, to undo.) Med., Pathol. One of the terminations of inflammation, in which it gradually disappears without abscess, mortification, etc. Rĕsōlūtio, ōnis, f. Fr. anal. résolution, f. Germ. syn. Auflösung, f.

Resol'vent. (Rĕsolvo, to undo.) Med., Pharm., Surg. Applied to such substances as discuss inflammatory, or other tumours; discu'tient. Rĕsol'vens, tis, part. Fr. syn. résolutif, adj. Germ. syn. auflösend, part. adj.

Re'sonance. (Rĕsŏno, to sound with an echo.) Med., Pathol. Term for a more than naturally sonorous resounding of the voice, existing in a part in which it cannot be perceived in the healthy state. Fr. anal. résonance, f. Germ. syn. Ruck-klang, m.; Wiederklang, n.; Wiederschall, m.

Rĕsŏ'nĭtus, ūs, m. (Rĕsŏno, to resound.) Surg. Old term the same as Contrafissura. Fr. syn. contre-coup, m. Germ. syn. Gegenspalt, m.

Rĕsor'bens, entis, part. (Rĕsorbeo, to swallow or sup up again.) Med., Pharm. Applied to medicines (Resorbentia medicamenta) that are supposed to have an absorbing power, and so the same as Absorbens. Fr. syn. aufsaugend, part. adj.

Resorp'tion. (Rĕsorbeo, to swallow or sup up again.) Med., Surg. Pathol. A term nearly synonymous with absorption; applied to that degeneration of an organ, or part, resulting in atrophy. Resorp'tio, ōnis, f. Fr. anal. résorption, f. Germ. syn. Wiederaufsaugung, f.

Respīrābĭlis, is, e. (Respīro, to breathe again.) Chem. Applied to a gas fitted for respiration: respi'rable. Fr. anal. respirable, adj. Germ. syn. einathembar, adj.

Respīrābĭ'lĭtas, ātis, f. (Respīro, to breathe again.) Chem. Term for the quality of a gas which is proper for respiration: respi'rabi'lity. Fr. anal. respirabilité, f. Germ. syn. Einathembarkheit, f.

Respira'tion. (Respīro, to breathe again.) Physiol. Term for the function of breathing, including both inspiration and expiration, consisting in the reception and discharge of air by the regular expansion and contraction of the lungs. Respīrātio, ōnis, f. See Anapneusis, Anapnoe. Fr. anal. respiration, f. Germ. syn. Athmen, n.; Athemholen, n.

Respira'tion, Bron'chial. Med., Pathol. Term for a particular sound of the respiration, caused by the air passing through the bronchial tubes without entering the minute air-cells, these being compressed, condensed, or solidified. Fr. anal. respiration bronchiale.

Respira'tion, Ca'vernous. Med., Pathol. Term for a particular sound of the respiration caused by the air passing from the bronchia into large morbid cavities, instead of the air-cells. Fr. anal. respiration caverneuse.

Respira'tion, Pu'erile. Med., Pathol. Term for a particular sound of the respiration, like that in infants; applied to the increased intensity of the respiratory murmur, heard in the healthy parts of a lung which is partially diseased, the action being increased to supply the loss of the diseased part. Rhīzōmătōsis, is, or eos, f. (Rhizōma.) Bot. Term by Link for the conversion of a root into a trunk or rhizome, which frequently takes place in biennial plants, and even sometimes in perennial vegetables when the medulla penetrates from the stem into the root, the top of which thus takes the character of a root. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhizomatose, f.

Rhīzomor'pheus, a, um. Bot. Applied by Fries to a tribe (Rhizomorpheæ, nom. pl. f.) of the Byssaceæ, having the Rhizomorpha for their type: rhizomor'pheous. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhizomorphé, adj. Germ. syn. wurzelförmig, adj.

Rhīzŏmor'phus, a, um. ('Ρίζα, a root; μορφὴ, form.) Bot. Having the form of, or bearing resemblance to a root: rhizomor'phous. Applied to several species of plants which grow in dark moist places, as mines, caverns, pits, etc., where the light of day does not enter; having long pliant stems which branch out and mingle together in a close network, and possessing a peculiar luminous property whereby, extending as they do for several hundred feet along the walls and pillars of some mines (in Bavaria), they afford a considerable degree of light. Applied by Sprengel to a section (Rhizomorphi, nom. pl. m.) of the Gasteromycites, the thallus of which is formed by intercrossed filaments. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. anal. rhizomorphe, adj. Germ. syn. wurzelförmig, adj.

Rhīzŏmyzīdis, is, e. ('Ρίζα, a root; μυῖα, a fly. Jourdan.) Entomol. Applied by Fallin to a Family (Rhizomyzides, nom. pl. m.) of the Diptera, the larves of which are rhizophagous. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhizomyzide, adj.

Rhīzŏnў'chia, æ, f. ('Ρίζα, a root; ὄνυξ, a nail.) Anat. Term for the root of the nail of the finger or toe. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhizonychie, f. Germ. syn. Nagelwurzel, f.; die Wurzel der Finger- oder Zehennägel. Med., Surg., Pathol. A term for disease of the root of a nail. Germ. syn. Krankheit an der Nagelwurz.

Rhīzŏnў'chium, ii, n. (Same as preceding.) Comp. Anat. Term by Illiger for the phalanx that bears the nail. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhizonychion, m. Germ. syn. Klauenglied, n.; Nagelglied, n.

Rhīzŏ'phăgus, a, um. ('Ρίζα, a root; φάγω, to eat.) Entomol. Eating roots; applied by Robineau-Desvoidy to a Section (Rhizophagæ, nom. pl. f.) of the Myodariæ Mesomydæ, the larves of which live in the roots of marsh-plants: rhizo'phagous. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhizophage, adj. Germ. syn. wurzelnfressend, adj.

Rhīzŏ'phĭlus, a, um. ('Ρίζα, a root; φιλέω, to live.) Bot. Living on roots or their fibrils, as the Racodium rhizophila: rhizo'philous. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhizophile, adj. Germ. syn. Wurzeln liebend.

Rhīzophlœ'īna, æ, f. ('Ρίζα, a root; φλοιός, bark.) Chem. The same as Phlœorrhizina.

Rhīzophlœ'um, i, n. (Same as preceding.) Chem. The former name for Rhizophlœina, or Phlœorrhizina.

Rhizŏ'phŏra, æ, f. ('Ρίζα, a root; φέρω, to bear or carry.) A Linn. genus of plants, Cl. Decandria; Ord. Monogynia. Fr. anal. rhizophore, f.

Rhīzŏ'phŏra Gymnorhe'zia. Bot. Name of the mangrove-tree, the juice of the root of which is applied in the East to the bites of serpents.

Rhīzŏphŏ'reus, a, um. (Same as preceding.) Bot. Applied to a Family (Rhizophoreæ, nom. pl. f.) established by R. Brown, having the Rhizophora for their type: rhizopho'reous. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhizophore, adj. Germ. syn. Wurzeln tragend.

Rhīzŏ'phŏrus, a, um. (Same as preceding.) Bot. Bearing or having roots; applied to the Peziza rhizophora, because the inferior surface and the borders of its receptacle are provided with numerous radicles. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhizophore, adj. Germ. syn. wurzeln tragend.

Rhīzŏphyl'lus, a, um. ('Ρίζα, a root; φύλλον, a leaf.) Bot. Having leaves bearing roots, as the Asplenium rhizophyllum, the fronds of which end in an appendage which inserts itself into the earth and takes root there: rhizophyl'lous. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhizophylle, adj. Germ. syn. wurzelblättrig, adj.

Rhīzŏ'phўsis, is, or eos, f. ('Ρίζα, a root; φύω, to throw.) Bot. Applied to an appendage observed at the extremity of certain radicles, as in the Nymphæa. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhizophyse, f.

Rhīzŏ'pŏdis, is, e. } ('Ρίζα, a root; πούς, a Rhīzŏ'pŏdus, a, um. } foot.) Bot. Applied by Fries to a Section (Rhizopodes, nom. pl. m.) of the Agaricus, having the stipes supplied with roots, as the Agaricus radicatus; by Bridel to a Family (Rhizopodi, nom. pl. m.) of the Musci, having the fructification near the roots: rhizo'podous. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhizopode, adj. Germ. syn. wurzelfüssig, adj.

Rhīzŏpŏ'dium, ii, n. (Same as preceding.) Bot. Term by C. G. Ehrenberg for the byssoid base or assemblage of tubulous intercrossed filaments which originate from the development of the sporules of mushrooms, and, according to him, form the cryptogamous plant itself, whilst the part named mushroom is but the organ of fructification, the flower or fruit of that byssoid plant, which most frequently remains hidden in the earth: a rhi'zopode. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhizopode, m. Germ. syn. Wurzelfuss, m.

Rhīzōsis, is, or eos, f. ('Ρίζα, root.) Bot. Term for a making to take root. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhizose, f. Germ. syn. Bewurzelung, f.

Rhīzosper'meus, a, um. ('Ρίζα, a root; σπέρμα, a seed.) Bot. Applied by Roth, de Candolle and Marquis to the Marsileaceæ (Rhizospermeæ, nom. pl. f.) of Robert Brown, the Salvinieæ of Jussieu, and Hydropterides of Willdenow, because the fructification grows in the axilla of the ramifications of the root. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhizospermé, adj. Germ. syn. wurzelsämig, adj.

Rhizospermus. The same as Rhizospermeus.

Rhīzo'spŏrus, a, um. ('Ρίζα, a root; σπείρω, to sow seed.) Bot. Applied K. H. Schultz to plants (Rhizosporæ plantæ, nom. pl. f.) that propagate themselves by their roots: rhizo'sporous. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhizospore, adj. Germ. syn. durch die Wurzeln fortpflanzend.

Rhīzostŏmidæ, patron. m. pl. Zoöl. Applied by Eschenholtz to a Family of the Acalepha, having the Rhizostoma for their type. See Diss. div. i. s. iii. vi. Fr. anal. rhizostomides, m. pl.

Rhīz'ostŏmus, a, um. ('Ρίζα, a root; στόμα, a mouth.) Zoöl. Applied to the Cephea

rhizostoma, a species of Medusa, because it has many mouths on its eight bilobate arms: rhizo'stomous. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhizostome, adj.

Rhīzŏtŏ'mia, æ, f. } Rhīzŏtŏ'mĭce, es, f. } ('Ρίζα, a root; τέμνω, to cut.) Bot., Med., Pharm. Term for a cutting and gathering of roots. Anciently used for Pharmacia and Pharmacopœia. Fr. anal. rhizotomie, f. Germ. syn. Wurzelschneiden, n.

Rhīzŏtŏmūmĕna. (τὰ 'Ριζοτομούμενα, from ῥιζοτομέω, to cut and gather roots.) Med., Pharm. Term for a collection or series of cut roots, especially for medical purposes. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Germ. syn. Bücher die von geschittenen Wurzeln, bes. zum Arzneibrauch.

Rhīzŭla, æ, f. (Dim. 'Ρίζα, or root.) Bot. Term by Link for the very fine roots of mushrooms: a rhi'zule. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhizule, f. Germ. syn. Wurzelchen, n.

Rhodacne. See Rhodinacne.

Rho'date. Chem. Term for a combination of rhodic oxide with a salifiable base. Rhodas, ātis, f. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhodate, m.

Rhŏdĕlæ'on. } Rhŏdĕlæ'um, i, n. } ('Ρόδον, a rose; ἔλαιον, oil.) Term for rose-oil. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. syn. huile de rose. Germ. syn. Rosenöl, n.

Rhŏ'dia, æ, f. ('Ρόδον, a rose.) A name for the Rhodiola rosea, or rosewort.

Rhŏdi'ăcon. ('Ρόδον, a rose.) Med., Pharm. Old name of a compound plaster, according to Asclepiades, Gr. anal. ῥόδινον, described by Galen, de C. M. per Gen. ii. 17, fin.

Rhŏ'dĭco-. (Rhodium; terminal -ic.) Chem. A prefix in several compound terms, applied by Berzelius to double salts resulting from the combination of a rhodic salt with a salt indicated by the remainder of the compound term, as Rhodico-ammonĭcus, -potassĭcus, -sodicus. Fr. anal. rhodico-.

Rhŏ'dĭcus, a, um. (Rhŏdium; terminal -ic.) Chem. Berzelius terms rhodic oxide the second degree of oxidation of Rhodium, rhodic salts, the combinations of Rhodium with halogenous bodies, and of the rhodic oxide with acids: rho'dic. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhodique, adj.

Rhŏdi'ŏla, æ, f. (Dim. Rhŏdia.) A Linn. genus of plants, Cl. Diœcia; Ord. Octandria. Fr. anal. rhodiole, f.

Rhŏdi'ŏla Rŏ'sea. Bot. The plant rosewort, the root of which, called Radix rhodiæ, has a very agreeable smell like that of the damask rose, hence its name. Fr. anal. rodiole rosé.

Rho'dion. Med., Pharm. Old name of a dry medicine in form of a sharp and corrosive powder, variously described by Paulus Æginetа, vii. 13; Adams's Transl., vol. iii. p. 5, etc.; Aëtius, xiv. 36. Gorræus.

Rhŏdis, ĭdis, f. ('Ρόδον, a rose.) Med., Pharm. Old name for a pastil made from roses, described by Dioscorides.

Rhŏdītēs. ('Ρόδον, a rose.) Old term, vinum being understood, for wine impregnated with roses.

Rhŏ'dium, ii, n. ('Ρόδον, a rose.) Chem. Name given to a metal found in 1803 by Dr. Wollaston among the grains of crude platina, from the rose-colour of some of its compounds. Fr. anal. rhodium, m.

Rhŏ'dium Lig'num. Bot. Name for the beautiful wood of the Physocalymnia floribunda, according to Don; the powder of it has been used as errhine; rosewood. Fr. anal. rhodium, m. Germ. anal. Rhodium, n.

Rhŏ'dius, a, um. ('Ρόδον, a rose.) Chem., Nat. Philos. Of a rose colour; rose-red; the same as Rosaceus. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. syn. rosacé, adj. Germ. syn. rosenfarben, adj.; rosenroth, adj.

Rhŏdi'zĭcus, a, um. ('Ροδίζω, to tinge of a rose-colour.) Chem. Of or belonging to a rose colour; applied to a particular acid: rhodi'zic. Fr. anal. rhodizique, adj. Germ. syn. rhodizonsauer, adj.

Rhŏdŏcan'thus, a, um. ('Ρόδον, a rose; ἄκανθα, a spine.) Bot. Having roseous spines, as the Acacia rhodocantha: rhodocan'thous. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhodocanthe, adj. Germ. syn. rosenrothdornig, adj.

Rhŏ'dŏdac'tylus, a, um. ('Ρόδον, a rose; δάκτυλος, a finger.) Entomol. Having digitated and roseate wings, as the Pterophorus rhododactylus: rhododac'tylous. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhododactyle, adj. Germ. syn. rosenfingert, adj.

Rhŏdŏda'phne, es, f. ('Ρόδον, a rose; δάφνη, the laurel.) Bot. Term for the rose-laurel, either the oleander or the rhododendron, See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rododaphne. f. Germ. syn. Lorbeerrose, f.

Rhŏdŏden'dreus, a, um. ('Ρόδον, a rose; δένδρον, a tree.) Bot. Applied by some to the Rhodoraceæ: rhododen'dreus. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhododendré, adj. Germ. syn. rosenbaumig, adj.

Rhŏdŏden'dron, i, n. ('Ροδόδενδρον, from ῥόδον, the rose; δένδρον, a tree.) A Linn. genus of plants, Cl. Decandria; Ord. Monogynia. Juss. Ericaceæ. Fr. anal. rhododendron, m. Germ. syn. Rosenbaum, m.

Rhŏdŏden'dron Chrysan'thum. M. Med. The plant dwarf rosebay, or yellow-flowered rhododendron. See Diss. div. i. s. vi.

Rhŏdŏgas'trus, a, um. ('Ρόδον, a rose; γαστήρ, the belly.) Ornithol. Having a rose-red belly, as the Muscicapa rhodogastra: rhodogas'trous. Fr. anal. rhodogastre, adj.

Rhŏdŏgrăphia, æ, f. ('Ρόδον, a rose; γράφω, to write.) Bot. Term for a description of roses; a work was published, in 1606, under this title, by J. Wittich: rhodo'graphy. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. and Germ. anal. rhodographie, f.

Rhŏdŏleu'cus, a, um. ('Ρόδον, a rose; λευκός, white.) Bot. That which is red and white, as the Peziza rhodoleuca. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhodoleuque, adj. Germ. syn. rothenweissig, adj.

Rhŏdŏlŏ'gia, æ, f. ('Ρόδον, a rose; λόγος, a discourse.) Bot. Term for a treatise on roses; a work was published, under this title, in 1620, by J. C. Rosenberg: rhodo'logy. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. and Germ. anal. rhodologie, f.

Rhŏdŏ'mĕli. Indecl. ('Ρόδον, a rose; μέλι, honey.) Med., Pharm. Old term for a preparation of honey and the juice of roses; Mel rosaceum or rosarum. Fr. anal. rhodomel, m.

Rhŏdŏmēlon. } ('Ρόδον, a rose; μῆλον, Rhŏdŏmēlum, i, n. } an apple.) Bot. Term for a rose-apple. Fr. anal. rhodomélon, m. Germ. syn. Rosenapfel, m. Med., Pharm. Term for a confection of roses and quinces. Germ. syn. Rosen -oder Quittenmarmelade.

Rhŏdŏ'ptĕrus, a, um. ('Ρόδον, a rose; πτέρον, a wing.) Ornithol. Having rose-coloured wings, as the Motacilla rhodoptera: rhodo'pterous. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhodoptère, adj. Germ. syn. rosenflügelig, adj.

Rhŏ'dŏpus, a, um. ('Ρόδον, a rose; πούς, a foot.) Entomol., Ornithol. Having rose-coloured feet. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhodope, adj. Germ. syn. rosenfüssig, adj.

Rhŏdŏrāceus, a, um. Bot. Applied to a Family (Rhodoraceæ, nom. pl. f.) established by Jussieu, having for their type the Rhododendron, and which R. Brown considered as a simple tribe of the Ericineæ: rhodora'ceous. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhodoracé, adj. Germ. syn. rosenartig, adj.

Rhŏdŏsac'chărum, i, n. ('Ρόδον, a rose; σάκχαρον, sugar.) Med., Pharm. Old name of either the conserve of roses, or of a preparation of the juice of roses, and sugar. Fr. anal. rhodosaccharon, m. Germ. syn. Rosenzucker, m.

Rhŏdŏsorhŏ'dĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to an oxide resulting from the combination of the rhodous oxide with the rhodic oxide, which may occur in many different proportions. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhodosorhodique, adj.

Rhŏdosper'mus, a, um. ('Ρόδον, a rose; σπέρμα, seed.) Bot. Having seeds or sporidia of a rose-colour, as the Actinocladium: rhodospe'rmous. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhodosperme, adj. Germ. syn. rosensämig, adj.

Rhŏdostac'ton. } ('Ρόδον, a rose; στάζω, Rhŏdostac'tum, i, m. } to drop.) Med., Pharm. Old term the same as Rhodosaccharum, according to Paulus Ægineta, vii. 15, Adam's Transl. vol. iii. p. 546.

Rhŏdostag'ma, ătis, n. ('Ρόδον, a rose; στάζω, to drop.) Med., Pharm. Old term for the Liquor rosarum.

Rhŏdo'stŏmus, a, um. ('Ρόδον, a rose; στόμα, a mouth.) Zoöl. Having a rose-coloured mouth or opening, as the Trochus rhodostomus: rhodo'stomous. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhodostome, adj. Germ. syn. rosenmundig, adj.

Rhœă'deus, a, um. (Rhœas, the red poppy.) Bot. Of or belonging to the red poppy; applied to an Order (Rhœadeæ, nom. pl. f.) of Linnæus's Fragments of a Natural Method, consisting of the poppy, etc., the capsule of which is caducous, and the fruit a capsule. Fr. anal. rhœadé, adj.

Rhœadin'. Chem. Term by Riffard for the colouring matter of the Papaver rhœas. See Diss. div. i. s. vi.; div. ii. s. vi. t. 4.

Rhœădĭna, æ, f. Fr. anal. rhœadine, f.

Rhœ'as, ădos, m. ('Ρέω, to flow; its juice flowing from incisions made in it.) M. Med. The pharmacopœial name (L. D.) for the fresh petals of the Papaver Rhœas, (E.) the Rhœados petala. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. syn. coquelicot, m. Germ. syn. wilder rother Mohn.

Rhœbdēsis, is, or eos, f. ('Ροιβδέω, to suck down.) Med., Physiol. Term for absorption. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Anarrhophesis. Fr. anal. rhœbdèse, f. Germ. syn. Einschlürfen, n.

Rhœ'zos. } ('Ροΐζος.) Med., Pathol. Old
Rhœ'zus, i, m. } term for a snoring or grating sound of the respiration; also the same as Stridor.

Rhōgma, ătis, n. } Med., Surg. Pathol. The Rhōgme, ēs, f. } same as Rhegma; also a term for the Fissura longa cranii. Fr. anal. rhogme, f. Germ. syn. ein langer Schädelspalt.

Rhog'mos. } ('Ρέγχω, to snort.) Med.
Rhog'mus, i, m. } Old term the same as Stertor, or a snoring noise in breathing. The same as Rhegma.

Rhoïdārion. } ('Ροιδάριον.) Med., Pharm.
Rhoïdārium, ii, n. } Old name for a certain dry medicine, described by Aëtius, ii. 68. Gorræus.

Rhoïdion. The same as Rhoidarion.

Rhoïtēs, f. ('Ροΐα, the pomegranate.) Med., Pharm. Term, vinum being understood, for wine made from pomegranates. Fr. anal. rhoïte, m. Germ. syn. Guanatapfelwein, n.

Rhombedron. See Rhombohedrum.

Rhom'bĕus, a, um. ('Ρόμβος, a rhomb.) Bot., Geom., Ornithol. Presenting four parallel sides, two by two, forming two acute angles and two obtuse, as the leaves of the Peperomia rhombea, the spots sprinkled on the plumage of the Falco rhombeus, etc.: rhom'beous. Fr. anal. rhombé, adj. Germ. syn. rhombenartig, adj.

Rhombicus, a, um. See Rhomboides.

Rhombĭ'fĕrus, a, um. ('Ρόμβος, a figure of four equal sides, with two acute angles and two obtuse; fĕro, to bear.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a variety having true rhomboid facets, though from the way in which they are cut by neighbouring facets, they do not appear so at first glance from their being of symmetrical figure, as the Smaragdus rhombiferus. Zoöl. Applied to the Crocodilus rhombifer, because it has a ridge on its head like a lozenge; to the Crotalus rhombifer, because the rays marked on its back are regular lozenges: rhombi'ferous. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhombifère, adj. Germ. syn. rhombtragend, part. adj.

Rhombĭfō'lius, a, um. ('Ρόμβος, see preceding; fŏlium, a leaf.) Bot. Having rhombeous leaves, as Hibiscus rhombifolius, etc.: rhombifo'liate. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhombifolié, adj. Germ. syn. rhombblättrig, adj.

Rhombĭfor'mis, is, e. ('Ρόμβος, see preceding; forma, shape.) Geom. Having the form of a rhomb: rhom'biform. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhombiforme, adj. Germ. syn. rhombenförmig, adj.

Rhombĭ'pŏrus, i, m. (Ῥόμβος, see preceding; pŏrus, a pore.) Zoöl. Having rhombiform pores, as the Polyporus rhombiporus: rhombi'porous. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhombipore, adj. Germ. syn. rhombenöffnungig, adj.

Rhomboctahĕ'drum, i, n. (Ῥόμβος, see preceding; octahedrum, an eight-sided body.) Crystall., Geom., Mineral. Term for a crystal or body with eight rhombiform sides: a rhomboctahe'dron. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhomboctaëdre, m. Germ. anal. Rhombenoktaëder, m.

Rhombōdēs, adj. (Ῥόμβος, see preceding; terminal -ώδης.) Geom., Mineral. Having or full of rhombs: rhom'bous. The same as Rhombeus. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. anal. rhombeux, adj. Germ. syn. rautenartig, adj.

Rhombŏdōdĕcăhĕ'drum, i, n. (Ῥόμβος, see preceding; dōdĕcăhedrum, a twelve-sided body.) Geom. Term for a body with twelve rhombiform sides: a rhombodo'decahe'dron. See Diss. div. i. s. iv., vi. Fr. anal. rhombododécaëdre, m. Germ. syn. rhombododekaëder, m.

Rhombohe'dral. } (Rhombŏhedrum, a rhom-Rhombohe'drical. } bohedron.) Geom., Mineral. Of or belonging to a rhombohedron; applied to a system derived from the rhombohedron. Rhombŏhe'drus, a, um. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhomboëdrique, adj.

Rhombohe'dron. (Ῥόμβος, an equal-sided, quadrilateral figure, with two opposite angles acute and two obtuse; ἕδρα, a basis.) Geom., Mineral. Term for a solid figure which has six rhomboid faces placed similarly in regard to a line between two opposing angles. Rhombohe'drum, i, n. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhomboèdre, n.

Rhomboīdālis, is, e. (Rhomboīdēs, resembling a rhomb.) Crystal, Geom., Mineral. A superfluous form of Rhomboides, having the same application; its strict meaning would be pertaining to a rhomboid figure. Fr. anal. rhomboidal, adj. Germ. syn. zu einem Rhomboide gehörig.

Rhomboīdēs, adj. (Ῥόμβος, a geometrical figure, equal sided, but with two opposite angles acute and two obtuse; terminal ĭdēs.) Geom. Resembling a rhomb figure: rhom'boid; rhomboidal is also used, but incorrectly and unnecessarily. See Diss. div. i. s. i. vi. Fr. anal. rhomboïde, adj. Germ. syn. rautenförmig, adj.

Rhomboīdĕus, a, um. (Ῥόμβος, a geometrical figure, equal-sided, but with two opposite angles acute and two obtuse; terminal -ĭdēus.) Belonging to the form of a rhomb; shaped of a rhomboid figure: rhomboi'dean. Anat. Applied to two muscles of the back, major and minor. Bot. Applied to leaves, etc., that are nearly diamond-shaped, or of a rhomboid form. See Diss. div. i. s. ii. vi. Fr. anal. rhomboïde, adj. Germ. syn. rautenförmig, adj.

Rhombo'spŏrus, a, um. (Rhombus; σπόρα, seed.) Bot. Having rhomboid seminules, as the Mucor rhombospora: rhombo'sporous. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. rhombospore, adj. Germ. syn. rautenkeimkornig, adj.

Rhomma, ătis, n. The same as Rophema.

Rhon'chus, i, m. (Ῥόγχος.) Term for a rattling sound in the throat, or a very strong wheezing. See Rále, Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. syn. rale, m.

Rhoödēs, adj. (Ῥοή, a flowing; terminal -ώδης.) Med., Pathol. Having or full of discharges; applied to a fever, as the Febris cum fluxionibus; synonymous with Rhoicus. See Diss. div. i. s. iv., vi. Fr. anal. rhöeux, adj. Germ. syn. ausflussig, adj.

Safety Lamp. Chem. Nat. Philos. Name given to a lamp invented by Sir H. Davy, consisting of a common oil-lamp completely surrounded with a cage of fine wire gauze, for the use of miners, to indicate the precise moment of danger from explosion of firedamp. That object is answered by the wire gauze being quite impermeable to flame, so that when the lamp is carried into an atmosphere charged with firedamp, its flame begins to enlarge, and the mixture, if highly explosive, takes fire as soon as it has passed through the gauze, and burns on its inner surface, while the light in the centre of the lamp is extinguished. So long as the texture of the lamp remains entire, all is safe; but the heat of the combustion within is so great, that the wire, if exposed to it for a few minutes, would suffer oxidation and fall to pieces, and instant explosion take place.

Sēnŏquăternārius, a, um. (Sēni, six; quăternārius.) Mineral. Applied by Häuy to a variety resulting from two decreases, the one of which takes place by four, the other by six rows. Fr. anal. sénoquaternaire, adj.

Sensa'tion. (Sentio, to feel.) Physiol. The consciousness of the approach of any foreign body, from its contact with the extremities of our nerves being communicated to the sensorium; the impression thus produced is termed an external sensation; but when an impression on the sensorium is the effect of some change or operation within the system, as thirst, hunger, etc., it is called an internal sensation. Sensātio, ōnis, f. Fr. syn. æsthème, m.; anal. sensation, f. Germ. syn. Empfindung, f.

Sense. (Sentio, to feel, discern, or perceive.) Physiol. A faculty by which a living being receives the impression caused by contact with external objects, according to the organ which may be involved. Man is endowed with five senses, viz. hearing, seeing, smelling, tasting, and feeling; the mental powers of imagination, attention, judgment, memory, and the passions, have been called internal senses. Sen'sus, ūs, m. Fr. anal. sens, m. Germ. syn. Sinn, m.

Sensĭ'bĭlis, is, e. (Sentio, to discern or perceive.) That which is endowed with sensibility, or, by extension, that which enjoys an exquisite, larger, more perfect sensibility. Also, that which seems to act upon some one of our senses. Bot. Applied to plants that close up their leaves when touched, as the Mimosa sensitiva; or have their leaves so delicate that they seem as if they cannot be touched without bruising or injuring them, as the Onoclea sensibilis. Zoöl. Applied by Lamarck to a Section (Sensibilia, nom. pl. n.) of animals that feel, but obtain from their sensations only perceptions of objects, a species of simple ideas which they cannot combine in order to obtain those of a complex character. Fr. anal. sensible, adj. Germ. syn. empfindlich, adj.; merkbar, adj.; merklich, adj.

Sensibi'lity. (Sentio, to discern by the senses.) Physiol. Term for that faculty by which the brain perceives an impression received by it; the power which living parts possess, by which they receive impressions from the different bodies placed in contact with them. Sensĭbĭ'lĭtas, ātis, f. See Æsthesis. Fr. syn. æsthésie, f.; sensibilité, f. Germ. syn. Empfindlichkeit, f.; Empfindungsvermögen, n.

Sensĭtīvus, a, um. (Sentio, to discern by the senses.) Physiol. Having the power of sensation: sen'sitive. Fr. anal. sensitif, adj. Germ. syn. fühlend, part. adj.; zum Fühlen tauglich oder geschickt.

Senso'rial. (Sensōrium, the seat or organ of the senses.) Entomol. Applied by Robineau-Desvoidy to the vertebræ in the skeleton of insects, one for each of the six organs of sense with which, according to him, they are endowed, as sight, smell, hearing, taste, bruissement, or a dull murmuring sound, and motion. Physiol. Of or belonging to the sensorium; having the power of feeling, perceiving, or discerning. Sensōriālis, is, e. Fr. anal. sensorial, adj.

Sensōrium, ii, n. (Sentio, to discern or perceive.) Anat., Med., Physiol. Term for the organ which receives the impressions made on the senses; the brain. See Æstheterium, Sensorium Commune. Fr. anal. sensorium, m. Germ. anal. Sensorium, n.

Sensōrium Commūne. Anat., Med., Physiol. The common seat or centre of all the senses, where the nerves proper to their respective organs take their origin. The term has been applied by various physiologists to different parts of the brain, and of the Medulla oblongata, each as being the true Sensorium commune; and more recently it has been supposed to comprise portions only of the Cerebrum, Cerebellum, Medulla oblongata, Crura cerebri et cerebelli, and the whole spinal marrow; in short, the origin of the nerves. See Æstheterium. Fr. syn. æsthétère, m. Germ. syn. Empfindungssitz, m.; das innere allgemeine Sinnesorgan.

Sen'sus, ūs, m. (Sentio, to feel, discern, or perceive.) Med., Physiol. A sense. See Sense.

Sentĭcōsus, a, um. (Sentis, a briar; terminal -ōsus.) Like a briar or thorn; full of thorns; thorny: sen'ticose. Bot. Applied to an Order (Senticosæ, nom. pl. f.) of plants in Linnæus's fragments of a Natural method, comprising such as are like the bramble, rose, thorn, etc. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. anal. senticeux, adj. Germ. syn. empfindlich, adj.

Sen'tient. (Sentio, to feel or perceive.) Med., Physiol. Applied to that which is particularly susceptible of sensation, as the sentient extremities of the nerves. Sen'tiens, tis, part. Fr. syn. sentant, part. adj. Germ. syn. empfindend, part. adj.

Sentimen'talism. Pathol. The affection Alusia elatio. Fr. anal. sentimentalisme, m.

Sen'timents. Phrenol. A term for those faculties which do not form specific ideas, but produce merely a propensity joined with an emotion or feeling of a certain kind. The faculties commonly classed as sentiments are self-esteem, love of approbation, cautiousness, benevolence, veneration, firmness, conscientiousness, hope, wonder, ideality, wit, and imitation. Fr. anal. sentiments, m. pl. Germ. syn. Meinungen, f. pl.

Sen'tis, is, m. (Uncertain.) Bot. A briar or bramble. Fr. syn. ronce, f. Germ. syn. Brombeerstrauch, m.

Sen'tis Cănīnus. Bot. A name for the Rosa canina, or dog-rose.

Sēpălum, n. (Sēpar, divided.) Bot. Name given to the separate parts or divisions of which the calyx consists: a se'pal. See Phyllum. Fr. anal. sépale, m. Germ. syn. Kelchblatt, n.

Sēpă'lŭlum, i, n. (Sēpălum, a sepal.) Bot. Name by F. Campdera for the heces of the calyculus, or of the external floral envelope of the Rumex: a sepa'lule. Fr. anal. sépalule, m. Germ. syn. Kelchblattchen, n.

Se'parate. (Sēpăro, to divide.) Bot. When stamens and pistils are found on the same plant (of the Monœcia), but in different flowers, they are said to be separate. Sēpărātus, a, um. Fr. anal. séparé, adj.

Sēpărātōrium, ii, n. (Sēpăro, to divide or separate.) Chem. Name of a vessel used for separating liquors from the materials with which they have been mixed, or the essential from the less important parts; a se'paratory. Surg. Name of an instrument for separating the pericranium from the skull in post mortem examination or dissection. Fr. anal. séparatoire, m.

Sēpēdōn, ōnis, f. (Σήπω, to be putrid.) Chem., Med. Term for rottenness or putridity.

Sēpēdōnŏgĕ'nēsis, is, or eos, f. (Sēpēdon; γένεσις, production.) Med., Pathol. Term for the commencement of putridity, or signs of putrid disease. Fr. anal. sépédonogénésie, f. Germ. syn. die Erzeugung (Entstehung) der Fäulniss.

Sēpĕ'tōnōdēs, adj. (Sēpēdon; terminal -ōdēs.) Chem., Med. Having or full of putridity: sepe'tonous. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. anal. sépétoneux, adj. Germ. syn. faulicht, adj.

Sephiros. (Arab.) Surg. Old term the same as Scleroma or Sclerosis; a hard and dry apostem, or false scirrhus.

Sēpia, æ, f. (Σήπω, to putrify; because of the dark colour of the blood.) Ichthyol., Zoöl. Name of a genus of Mollusca Cephalopoda. The cuttle-fish. Fr. syn. sèche, f. Germ. anal. Sepia, m.; syn. Kuttelfisch, m.; Tintenfisch, m.

Sēpia Offĭcĭnālis. Ichthyol., Zoöl. Systematic name of the cuttle-fish; the bone or internal shell of which, consisting of membranous layers hardened by carbonate of lime, is called Os sepiæ; also called Præcipitans magnum. Fr. syn. sèche officinale. Germ. syn. Apothekersepie, f.

Sēpiāceus, a, um. Ichthyol., Zoöl. Applied by Blainville to a Family (Sepiaceæ, nom. pl. f.) of univalve shells, having the Sepia for their type: sepia'ceous. Fr. anal. sépiacé, adj.

Sēpiæ, Os. Ichthyol., Pharm., Zoöl. The bone, or rather internal shell of the Sepia officinalis, or cuttle-fish, formerly used in medicine, but now only employed as a dentrifice; also called Sepium. Fr. syn. os de sèche. Germ. syn. Tintenfischknochen, m.; das weisse Fischbein.

Sēpiæ'phŏrus, a, um. (Sēpia; φέρω, to bear.) Ichthyol., Zoöl. Applied by Gray to an Order (Sepiæphora, nom. pl. n.) of the Anthobrachiophora, having the Sepia for their type. Fr. anal. sépiæphore, adj.

Sēpiārius, a, um. (Sēpes, a hedge.) Anat. A row, or series; applied to the teeth. Bot. Of or belonging to a hedge or fence: se'piary; applied to an Order (Sepiariæ, nom. pl. f.) of plants in Linnæus's Fragments of a Natural Method, embracing woody plants which form a hedge-like appearance, the flowers being mostly a thymus or pannicle. Fr. anal. sépiare, adj.

Sēpi'cŏlus, a, um. (Sēpes, a hedge; cŏlo, to inhabit.) Bot. Living in hedges; applied to the Limboria sepicola which grows on the palings forming enclosures in the country: sepi'colous. Fr. anal. sépicole, adj. Germ. syn. zaunbewohnend, part. adj.

Sēpiīdeus, a, um. Zoöl. Applied by Leach to a Family (Sepiideæ, nom. pl. f.) of the Mollusca, having the Sepia for their type. Fr. anal. sépiidé, adj.

Sēpioīdēs, adj. (Sēpia; terminal -ĭdēs.) Ichthyol., Zoöl. Resembling the Sepia, or cuttle-fish: se'pioid. Fr. anal. sépioïde, adj. Germ. syn. kuttelfischähnlich, adj.

Sepiolideus, a, um. Zoöl. Applied by Leach to a Family (Sepiolidea, nom. pl. n.) of the the Mollusca Cephalopoda, having the Sepiola for their type. Fr. anal. sépiolide, adj.

Sēpiostārium, ii, n. (Σηπία, the cuttle-fish; ὀστέον, a bone.) Comp. Anat. Term by Blainville for the Sepium, or Os sepiæ.

Sēpium, ii, n. Zoöl. A name for the Os sepiæ, or internal shell of the Sepia officinalis, or cuttle-fish.

Seplāsiārius, ii, m. (Seplāsia, a marketplace or a shop where sweet ointments are sold.) Pharm. Old term for a seller of sweet powders, ointments, etc., ranked amongst the medicastri. Fr. anal. séplasiaire, m.

Seplum'bĭcus, a, um. (Sex, six; plumbĭcus.) Chem. Applied by Berzelius to salts where the oxygen of the plumbic oxide is multiplied by six of that of the acid, as the Nitras seplumbica: seplum'bic. Fr. anal. séplombique, adj.

Sepsichymia. See Chymosepsis.

Sep'sis, is, or æ, f. (Σήπω, to putrify.) Chem. Term for Putrefaction.

Septem'angŭlātus, a, um. (Septem, seven; angŭlus, an angle.) Bot. Applied to a leaf the border of which presents seven prominent angles, as the Hibiscus abelmoschus. Fr. anal. septemangulé, adj. Germ. syn. siebeneckigt, adj.

Septem'dĕcĭduodĕ'cĭmālis, is, e. (Septemdĕcem, seventeen; duŏdĕcĭmālis.) Mineral. Applied by Häuy to a variety of topaz with only one summit to seventeen faces, with a dodecahedral prism. Fr. anal. septemdéciduodécimale, adj.

Septem'dĕcioctŏnālis, is, e. (Septemdĕcem, seventeen; octŏnālis.) Mineral. Applied by Häuy to a variety of topaz with only one summit to seventeen faces, with an octagonal prism. Fr. anal. septemdécioctonal, adj.

Septemdentātus, a, um. (Septem, seven; dentātus.) Zoöl. Having seven teeth. Fr. anal. septemdenté, adj. Germ. syn. siebenzähnung, adj.

Septemdĭ'gĭtātus, a, um. (Septem, seven; dĭgĭtatus.) Bot. Applied to a leaf the common petiole of which terminates by seven folioles. Fr. anal. septemdigité, adj. Germ. syn. siebenfingert, adj.

Septemduŏdĕ'cĭmālis, is, e. (Septem, seven; duŏdĕcĭmālis.) Mineral. Applied by Häuy to a variety of topaz having but one summit to seven faces, with a dodecahedral prism. Fr. anal. septemduodécimal, adj.

Septemfŏ'liōlātus, a, um. (Septem; fŏlĭōlātus.) Bot. The same as Septemdigitatus.

Septemlŏbātus, a, um. (Septem, seven; lŏbātus.) Bot. Having seven lobes, as the leaves of the Acer septemlobatum. Fr. anal. septemlobé, adj. Germ. syn. siebenlappig, adj.

Septemmăcŭlātus, a, um. (Septem; seven; măcŭlātus.) Entomol. Marked with seven spots, as the Coccinella septemmaculata. Fr. anal. septemmaculé, adj. Germ. syn. siebenfleckicht, adj.

Septemner'vis, is, e. (Septem, seven; nervus, a nerve.) Bot. Having seven nerves; applied to leaves, as of the Hedera septemnervia. Fr. anal. septemnervé, adj. Germ. syn. siebennervig, adj.

Septempunc'tātus, a, um. (Septem, seven; punctātus.) Entomol. Having seven coloured points, as the Coccinella septempunctata. Fr. anal. septemponctué, adj. Germ. syn. siebenspitzig, adj.

Septĕnātus, a, um. (Septem, seven.) Bot. Applied to a pedatisected leaf with seven lobes, as of the Passiflora septenata, or to a palmated leaf with seven folioles, as of the Bombax septenatum. Fr. anal. septené, adj. Germ. syn. siebenfaltig, adj.

Septen'trio, ōnis, m. (Septem, seven; triōnes, oxen in the plough.) Astron. Name for the constellation Ursa major; also the north. Fr. anal. septentrion, m.; syn. nord, m. Germ. syn. Norden, m.

Septentriōnālis, is, e. } (Septentrio, the Septentriōnārius, a, um. } north.) Bot., Zoöl. That which grows in or inhabits the north; northern: septentrio'nal. Fr. anal. septentrional, adj. Germ. syn. nordisch, adj.

Septfoil. Bot. Common name for the genus Tormentilla.

Sep'tic. (Σήπω, to putrify; terminal -ικὸς.) Pertaining to putrifaction; causing to putrify. Sep'tĭcus, a, um. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 6. Fr. anal. septique, adj. Germ. syn. faulend, part. adj.

Septici'dal. (Septum, a partition; cādo, to decay or perish.) Bot. Breaking the dissepiments; applied to the dehiscence when the pericarp bursts vertically in a line with the union of the sides of the carpels, the layers forming the dissepiments being separated from each other, the valves alternate with the dissepiments, their margins turned inwards, and the cells remaining closed at the dorsal suture. Septĭcīdus, a, um. Fr. anal. septicide, adj.

Septĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Septum, a partition; fĕro, to bear.) Bot. Bearing septa; applied to the tegmentum when thrown within the appendices in form of incomplete septa which separate the kernel into many lobes, as of the Fagus Castanea. Fr. anal. septifère, adj. Germ. syn. siebentragend, part. adj.

Septĭfor'mis, is, e. (Septum; forma, likeness.) Bot. Formed like a septum; applied by Mirbel to the placentarium when enlarged into a septum: sep'tiform. Fr. anal. septiforme, adj. Germ. syn. scheidewandförmig, adj.

Septĭ'frăgus, a, um. (Septum, a partition; frango, to break.) Bot. Applied by Richard to valvar dehiscence when the rupture occurs at the anterior border of the septa, which remain free and entire to the instant when the valves are separated, as in the Bignonia: septi'fragous. Fr. anal. septifrage, adj. Germ. syn. scheidewandbrechend, part. adj.

Septĭhexăgōnālis, is, e. (Septem, seven; hexăgōnālis.) Mineral. Applied by Häuy to a variety of topaz having but one summit to seven faces, with a hexahedral prism: septihexa'gonal. Fr. anal. septihexagonal, adj.

Septĭlis, is, e. (Septum.) Bot. Applied to the placentarium when attached to the septa, as in the Papaver septile. Fr. anal. septile, adj.

Septĭmāna, æ, f. Term for a week. Fr. syn. semaine, f. Germ. syn. Siebenzahl, f.

Septĭmes'tris, is, e. (Septem, seven; mensis, a month.) Enduring seven months; applied to pregnancy or a fetus. Fr. anal. septimestre, adj. Germ. syn. 7 Monat daurend; 7 Monat alt.

Septioctōnālis, is, e. (Septem, seven; octo, eight.) Mineral. Applied by Häuy to a variety of topaz having but one summit to seven faces with an octagonal prism: septioc'tonal. Fr. anal. septioctonal, adj.

Septŏchēmia, æ, f. (Σήπω, to putrify; chēmia.) Chem. Term for the advanced activity of putridity. Fr. anal. septochémie, f. Germ. syn. die Faulniss befördernde Thätigkeit.

Septŏdiarrhœ'a, æ, f. (Σήπω, to putrify; diarrhœa.) Med., Pathol. Terms for putrid diarrhœa. Fr. anal. septodiarrhée, f. Germ. syn. die faulichte Durchfall.

Septŏdysentĕ'ria, æ, f. (Σήπω, to putrify; dysentĕria.) Med., Pathol. Term for putrid dysentery. Fr. anal. septodysenterie, f. Germ. syn. der faulichte Ruhr.

Septŏ'mўca, æ, f. (Σήπω, to putrify; μύκης, a mushroom.) Bot. Term for the Fungus mucedo.

Septŏ'pўra, æ, f. (Σήπω, to putrify; πῦρ, a a fever.) Med., Pathol. Term for putrid fever. Fr. anal. septopyre, f. Germ. syn. Faulfieber, n.

Septorrhe'pўra, æ, f. (Σήπω; ῥέπω, to sink; πῦρ.) Med., Pathol. Term by Swediaur the same as Septopyra.

Sep'tŭlātus, a, um. (Septŭlum, a little septum.) Bot. Applied by de Candolle to siliquæ and siliculæ which have transverse prolongations proceeding from the interior of the valves between the seeds, as in the Sisymbrium stipulatum. Fr. anal. septulé, adj.

Sep'tŭlĭfer, era, erum. } (Septŭlum, a little sep- Sep'tŭlĭ'fĕrus, a, um. } tum; fĕro, to bear.) Bot. The Mytilus septulifer has a part of the cavity of its hamus covered by the anterior of a lamina in form of a septum: septuli'ferous. Fr. anal. septulifère, adj. Germ. syn. scheidewandtragend, part. adj.

Sep'tŭlum, i, n. (Dim. Septum.) Bot. A small septum; applied by J. C. Richard to a lamina which divides the anther of the Orchideæ into two cavities: a sep'tule. Fr. anal. septule, m. Germ. syn. Scheidewandchen, n.

Sep'tum, i, n. (Sēpio, to hem in.) Anat. A partition; applied to bones, cartilage, membranes, etc. See Interseptum. Fr. anal. septum, m.; syn. cloison, f. Germ. syn. Scheidewand, f.

Sep'tum Cĕrĕbel'li. Anat. Name of the process of the Dura mater dividing the Cerebellum perpendicularly into symmetrical halves. Fr. syn. faux du cervelet; septum médian du cervelet. Germ. syn. die Sichel des kleinen Gehirns.

Sep'tum Cĕ'rĕbri. Anat. A name for the falciform process of the Dura mater. Fr. syn. faux du cerveau; septum médian du cerveau.

Sep'tum Cor'dis. Anat. Name for the partition between the ventricles of the heart. Fr. syn. septum du cœur. Germ. syn. Herzscheidewand, f.

Sep'tum Lūcĭdum. Anat. The clear or lucid partition; applied to a thin triangular portion of the brain which forms the partition between the lateral ventricles. See Medianum. Fr. syn. cloison lucide. Germ. syn. die durchsichtige Hirnscheidewand.

Sep'tum Nārium. Anat. Name for the partition between the nostrils. Fr. syn. cloison des fosses nasales. Germ. syn. Nasenscheidewand, f.

Sep'tum Pectĭnĭfor'me. Anat. The comb-like partition; an imperfect tendinous septum separating the Crura penis, composed of parallel fibres, with such intervals between them that the cavity of one crus communicates with and can be injected from that of the other. Fr. syn. septum pectiniforme.

Sep'tum Pellūcĭdum. Anat. The same as Septum Lucidum.

Sep'tum Thōrācis. Anat. A name given to the Mediastinum.

Sep'tum Transver'sum. Anat. A name for the Diaphragm.

Sĕquēla, æ, f. (Sĕquor, to follow.) A consequence or sequel.) Med., Pathol. Sequelæ (nom. pl.) is a term for those morbid affections which, in many instances, succeed to diseases when the latter have abated, as œdema of the legs after scarlet fever, etc. Fr. anal. séquelle, f. Germ. syn. Erfolg, m.

Sĕques'trum, i, n. (Sĕquestro, to separate from.) Med., Surg. Term for any dead portion of bone in a wound, abscess, or ulcer, being cast off by necrosis. Fr. anal. séquestre, m.

Sĕrangōdēs, adj. (Σήραγξ, a cavern; terminal -ώδης.) Having or full of caverns. Anat., Surg. Old term the same as Cavernous and Fistulous. Fr. anal. sérangeux, adj. Germ. syn. hohlig, adj.

Sĕrāpias, ădis, f. (Sĕrāpis, a certain lascivious idol; or because from the testiculated appearance of its roots it was considered aphrodisiac.) Bot. A Linn. genus of plants, Cl. Gynandria; Ord. Diandria. Also a name for Salep, or the dried root of the Orchis morio.

Sĕrāpīnum, i, n. Bot. A name for Sagapenum.

Sĕrāpīnus. M. Med. Old name for gum arabic. Ruland and Johnson.

Sĕrāpium, ii, n. Pharm. Old term the same as Syrupus.

Serex. Old term for Lac acetosum. Ruland and Johnson.

Sergētĭcum. Pharm. Old epithet of an ointment made from the Iris, or flower-de-luce.

Sĕriālis, is, e. (Sĕries, order or succession.) Applied to parts that are produced by following in a determinate order, or by forming distinct rows: se'rial. Fr. anal. sérial, adj.; sérié, adj.

Sĕribran'chius, a, um. (Sĕries, order or succession; βράγχια, the branchiæ.) Zoöl. Applied by Latreille to a Family (Seribranchia, nom. pl. n.) of the Gasteropoda Nudibranchia, in which the branchiæ are disposed in series along the back or upon the sides. Fr. anal. nudibranche, adj.

Sĕrĭ'ceus, a, um. (Sĕrĭcum, silk.) Bot. Having an appearance like silk; silky: seri'ceous; applied to the pubescence of plants. Fr. anal. sériçé, adj.; soyeux, adj. Germ. syn. seiden, adj.; seidenartig, adj.

Sĕrĭci'ăcum. Chem., M. Med. An old name for Arsenicum, or arsenic. Ruland and Johnson.

Sĕrĭcĭfō'lius, a, um. (Sĕrĭcum, silk; fŏlium, a leaf.) Bot. Having silken leaves, as the Spathella sericifolia. Fr. anal. séricifolié, adj. Germ. syn. seideblättrig, adj.

Sĕrĭcŏcĕrātus, a, um. (Sĕrĭcum, silk; κέρας, a horn.) Entomol. Applied by Robineau-Desvoidy to a Section (Sericoceratæ, nom. pl. f.) of the Myodaria Calyptera, the antennæ of which have the last joint of the chetum villous or plumous. Fr. anal. séricocéré, adj. Germ. syn. seidehornig, adj.

Sērictērium, ii, n. (Sĕrĭcum, silk; τηρέω, to preserve.) Entomol. Applied by Kirby to the secretory organs of silkworms. Fr. anal. sérictère, m.

Sĕrĭcum, i, n. (Σηρικὸν.) Silk. Bot. Applied to a kind of soft, hairy pubescence of a white, shining, silky appearance. Chem. An old name for Minium, or red lead, according to Ruland and Johnson. M. Med., Nat. Hist. Silk, the product of several animals, but chiefly the silkworm, or Bombyx mori; it was formerly used in medicine as alexipharmic and cordial. Fr. syn. soie, f. Germ. syn. Seide, f.

Sĕrĭcum Tos'tum. Pharm. Burnt silk, formerly used in medicine.

Seridie'us, a, um. Bot. Applied by H. Cassini to a series (Serideæ, nom. pl. f.) of the Centaurieæ Calcitrapeæ, having the Seridia for their type. Fr. anal. séridié, adj.

Seriphie'us, a, um. Bot. Applied by H. Cassini to a group (Seriphieæ, nom. pl. f.) of the Inuleæ gnaphalieæ, having the Seriphium for their type. Fr. anal. seriphié, adj.

Sĕris, ĭdis, f. (Σέρις.) Bot. A name for the Cichorium endivia, or endive. In the plural (Serides) it was formerly applied as an epithet of esculent potherbs.

Sermountain. Bot. Common name for the Laserpitium siler, or hartwort.

Se'rolin'. (Sĕrum, whey, or the liquor sanguinis deprived of its fibrin; oleum, oil.) Chem. Name given to a fatty matter discovered in the blood, and obtained by treating dry serum with strong, boiling alcohol, and setting the solution aside for a time, when it is deposited in the form of very minute microscopic crystals. Sĕrōlīna, æ, f. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 4. Fr. anal. séroline, f.

Sero'sity. (Sĕrum, whey.) Physiol. Another term for the serum of the blood, or whey of milk. Sĕrōsĭtas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. sérosité, f.

Sērōtĭnus, a, um. (Sērus, late.) Late; lateward; late in the evening. See Membrana Serotina. Fr. anal. sérotin, adj. Germ. syn. langsam, adj.

Se'rous. (Sĕrum, whey, or the serum of the blood.) Med., Physiol. Of or belonging to, or of the nature of serum; full of serum. Sĕrōsus, a, um. Fr. anal. séreux, adj. Germ. syn. molkicht, adj.

Ser'pens, tis, part. (Serpo, to creep.) Zoöl. Creeping; applied to a Family (Serpentia, nom. pl. n.) of the Ophidia, comprising the true serpents. Fr. syn. rampans, adj. Germ. syn. kriechend, part. adj.

Serpentāria, æ, f. (Serpens, a serpent or snake; from the roots of the plant first bearing this name resembling the tail of the rattlesnake.) M. Med. The pharmacopœial name (L.E.) for the root of the Aristolochia serpentaria; (U.S.A.) of A. Serpentaria, A. reticulata, and other species of Aristolochia; (D.) the Aristolochiæ serpentariæ radix. Virginian snake-root. Fr. anal. serpentaire, f.

Serpentāria Gallōrum. Bot. A name for the Arum dracunculus, or dragon's-wort.

Serpentāria Hispānĭca. Bot. A name for the Scorzonera Hispanica, or esculent viper's grass.

Serpentāria Virgĭnĭāna. Bot. A name for the Aristolochia serpentaria, or Virginian snakeroot.

Serpentārie'us, a, um. Ornithol. Applied by Lherminier and Lesson to a Family (Serpentariei, nom. pl. m.) having the Serpentarius for their type. Fr. anal. serpentarié, adj.

Serpentĭfor'mis, is, e. (Serpens, a serpent; forma, likeness.) Zoöl. Having the form of a serpent, as the Cepola serpentiformis: serpen'tiform. Fr. anal. serpentiforme, adj. Germ. syn. schlangenförmig, adj.

Ser'pentine. Winding about like the folds of a serpent. See Repandus. Bot., Conchol. Applied to plants supposed to be efficacious against the bite of serpents, as the Ophioxylum serpentinum; or to shells marked by longitudinal waved lines, as the Mitra serpentaria. Serpentīnus, a, um. Fr. anal. serpentin, adj.

Serpentinum Lignum. See Lignum Serpentinum.

Serpentum, Radix. See Radix Serpentum.

Serpīgo, ĭnis, f. (Serpo, to creep; terminal -īgo, as if the effect of over-feeding.) Med., Pathol. Term for the disease ringworm, or tetter. See Herpes, Álbora, Asaphatum.

Serpŭ'leus, a, um. Zoöl. Applied by Savigny, Lamarck, Goldfuss, Latreille, Eichwald, Ficinus and Carus to a Family (Serpuleæ, nom. pl. f.; Serpulea, nom. pl. n.) of the Annulata, having the Serpula for their type. Fr. anal. serpule, adj.

Serpŭ'lĭdæ, patron. m. pl. Zoöl. Applied by Blainville to an Order of the Chetopoda Heterocricii, having the Serpula for their type. Fr. anal. serpulides, m. pl.

Ser'pŭlus, a, um. (Serpo, to creep.) Zoöl. Applied by J. A. Ritgen to a Family (Serpulæ, nom. pl. f.) of the Reptilia, having the Anguis, or serpent, for their type. Fr. anal. serpule, adj.

Serpyllīnus, a, um. Bot. Of or belonging to the Serpyllum: serpyl'line. Fr. anal. serpylline, adj. Germ. syn. zum Serpyllum gehörig.

Serpyl'lum, i, n. (Serpo, to creep; from the manner in which it grows.) Bot. The specific name of the wild thyme. See Thymus Serpyllum.

Serpyl'lum Vulgāre. Bot. A name for the Thymus vulgaris, or common thyme.

Serpyl'lum Vulgāre Mī'nus. Bot. A name for the Thymus serpyllum, or wild thyme.

Serræfō'lius, a, am. (Serra, a saw; fŏlium, a leaf.) Bot. Having dentated or notched leaves, as the Corchorus serræfolius. Fr. anal. serræfolié, adj. Germ. syn. sägeblättrig, adj.

Serrated. See Serratus.

Serrātĭfŏlĭātus, a, um. Same as Serræfolius.

Serrātĭfor'mis, is, e. (Serra, a saw; forma, likeness.) Entomol. Applied to antennæ when their articulations are equal, but each terminates by one or two teeth giving to the whole the appearance of a saw: serra'tiform. Fr. anal. serratiforme, adj. Germ. syn. sägeförmig, adj.

Serrātistĭpŭlātus, a, um. (Serrātus; stĭpŭlātus.) Bot. Having stipules dentilated like a saw, as the Passiflora serratistipulata. Fr. anal. serratistipulé, adj. Germ. syn. sägenafterblättrig, adj.

Serrātŭla, æ, f. (Serra, a saw; from its serrated leaves.) A Linn. genus of plants, Cl. Syngenesia; Ord. Polygamia æqualis. Saw-wort. See Cirsium, Serrula. Fr. anal. serratule, f. Germ. syn. Schartenkraut, n.

Serrātŭla Amāra. Bot. Systematic name of a species of saw-wort said to cure agues; also called Serrula. Fr. anal. serratule amare.

Serrātŭla Arven'sis. Bot. Systematic name of the common creeping wolf-thistle, formerly applied to scirrhous tumours as resolvent, and now used against piles.

Serrātŭ'leus, a, um. Bot. Applied by H. Cassini to a Section (Serratuleæ, nom. pl. f.) of the Carduineæ; by Lessing to a Section of the Cynareæ Centaurieæ, having the Serratula for their type: serratu'leous. Fr. anal. serratulé, adj.

Serrātūra, æ, f. Bot. Term proposed by Desvaux in place of Dens: a ser'rature. Fr. anal. serrature, f. Germ. syn. Sägezahn, m.

Serrātus, a, um. (Serra, a saw.) Toothed like a saw: ser'rated. Anat. Applied to muscles, etc. Bot. Applied to leaves and petals having this resemblance. See Prionodes. Fr. anal. serré, adj. Germ. syn. gesägt, part. adj.; sägezähnig, adj.

Serrĭcaudātus, a, um. (Serra, a saw; cauda, a tail.) Entomol. Applied by Duméril to a Family (Serricaudati, nom. pl. m.) of the Hymenoptera, the females of which have a terebella in form of a saw at the extremity of the body: serricau'date. See Uropristis. Fr. anal. serricaude, adj. Germ. syn. sägeschwanzig, adj.

Serrĭcol'lis, is, e. (Serra, a saw; collum, the neck.) Entomol. Having the neck or corselet dentated, as the Inca serricollis. Fr. anal. serricolle, adj. Germ. syn. sägehalsig, adj.

Serrĭcor'nis, is, e. (Serra, a saw; cornu, a horn.) Entomol. Saw-horned; applied to a Family (Serricornes, nom. pl. f.) of the Coleoptera, in which the antennæ are toothed like a saw: serricor'nate. Fr. anal. serricorne, adj. Germ. syn. sägehornig, adj.

Serrĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Serra, a saw; fĕro, to bring.) Zoöl. The Tridacna serrifera is thus named because it bears two ribs presenting a row of small vaulted scales disposed like the teeth of a saw: serri'ferous. Fr. anal. serrifère, adj. Germ. syn. sägetragend, part. adj.

Serrĭ'gĕrus, a, um. (Serra, a saw; gĕro, to carry.) Bot. The Cardium serrigerum is raised with ribs dentelated like a saw: serri'gerous. Fr. anal. serrigère, adj. Germ. syn. sägetragend, part. adj.

Serri'ŏla, æ, f. (Dim. Serra, a saw.) Bot. A name for the Lactuca sylvestris.

Ser'rĭpes, pĕdis, adj. (Serra, a saw; pes, a foot.) Entomol. Having the fore-feet, as of the Myodochus serripes, or hind-feet, as of the Laphria serripes, spinous or toothed like a saw: ser'ripede. Fr. anal. serripède, adj. Germ. syn. sägefüssig, adj.

Serrĭros'tris, is, e. (Serra, a saw; rostrum, a beak.) Ornithol. Having the beak dentelated like a saw on the edges, as the Trochilus serrirostris. Applied by Duméril, Goldfuss, Ficinus and Carus, to a Family (Serrirostres, nom. pl. m.) of the Palmipedes, having the beak dentelated. Fr. anal. serrirostre, adj. Germ. syn. sägeschnäbelig, adj.

Serrŏpal'pĭdes, m. pl. Entomol. Name by Cuvier for a tribe of the Coleoptera Stenelytra Securipalpi, having the Serropalpus for their type. Fr. anal. serropalpides, m. pl. Germ. syn. sägefressspitig, adj.

Ser'rŭla, æ, f. The same as Serratula.

Serrŭlātus, a, um. (Serrŭla, a little saw, dim. Serra, a saw.) Bot. Minutely serrated; applied to leaves which have a minute toothed edging like a fine saw: ser'rulate. Fr. anal. serrulé, adj. Germ. syn. feingesägt, adj.

Ser'tŭla Campāna. Bot. A name for the Trifolium melilotus-officinalis.

Sertŭlārie'us, a, um. Bot. Applied by Lamoureux and Blainville to a Family (Sertularieæ, nom. pl. f.) of the Polypiaria, having the Sertularia for their type. Fr. anal. sertularié, adj.

Sertŭlātus, a, um. Bot. The Nereis sertulata is thus named because of its locomotive appendages, which are collected into bundles or bouquets. Fr. anal. sertulé, adj.

Sertŭlĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Sertŭlum, a bouquet; fĕro, to bear.) Bot. Bearing bundles or bouquets, as the Faramea sertulifera: sertuli'ferous. Fr. anal. sertulifère, adj.

Ser'tŭlum, i, n. (Dim. Sertum, a garland of flowers.) Bot. Term by L. C. Richard and de Candolle for a simple umbel, i. e. an assemblage of flowers the unifloral peduncles of which proceed from a single point, as in the Primula: a ser'tule. Fr. anal. sertule, m.

Sĕrum, i, n. (Serus, because it is the last that is left after the butter and cheese are separated from the milk.) Med., Physiol. The greenish yellow fluid which separates from the blood when cold and at rest; the liquor sanguinis deprived of its fibrin or coagulable matter; serosity. Fr. anal. serosité, f. Germ. syn. Blutwasser, n. Also, the whey of milk. See Orrhos, Serosity. Germ. syn. Molke, f.

Sĕrum Alūmĭnōsum. Med., Pharm. Alum-whey; an astringent preparation made by boiling alum in cow's milk.

Sĕrum Căthar'tĭcum. Med., Pharm. Purging whey, made by putting damask rosebuds into common whey at night, straining and drinking it in the morning; said by Quincy to work kindly and thoroughly.

Sĕrum Lac'tis. The serum of milk, or what is termed whey. Fr. syn. sérosité, f. Germ. syn. Molke, f.

Sĕrum Scorbūtĭcum. Pharm. Name for a preparation made of succory and sorrel leaves, fir tops, scurvy-grass, water-cresses, and coriander seeds, bruised and put in common whey, with some orange-juice.

Sĕrum Sĭnāpīnum. Pharm. Mustard whey, made by boiling bruised mustard-seed in milk, and straining; used as diuretic in dropsy.

Service-tree. Bot. See Sorbus.

Service-tree, Wild. Bot. Common name for the Sorbus aucuparia.

Sēsă'meus, a, um. Bot. Applied to a Section admitted by Kunth into the Bignoniaceæ, having the Sesamum for their type, and which R. Brown has erected into a Family: sesa'meous. Fr. anal. sesamé, adj.

Sēsămi, Fŏ'lia. M. Med. Pharmacopœial name (U.S.A.) for the leaves of Sesamum Indicum and S. Orientale. Benne leaves.

Se'samoid. (Σήσαμον, a grain of Indian corn; terminal -ĭdēs.) Anat. Resembling a grain of Indian corn; applied to certain small bones at the joints of the great toes (see Albadara) and sometimes of the thumbs; also, to small bodies in the valves of the aorta and of the pulmonary artery, which are otherwise termed Corpora Arantii. Sēsămoīdēs, adj. Fr. anal. sésamoïde, adj. Germ. syn. den Sesamkörnen ähnlich.

Sēsămoīdeus, a, um. A term which has been improperly substituted for Sesamoides.

Sēsămum, i, n. (Egypt.) A Linn. genus of plants, Cl. Didynamia; Ord. Angiospermia. Juss. Pedaliaceæ. Fr. anal. sésame, m. Germ. syn. Sesamsamen, m.

Sēsămum In'dĭcum. } Bot., M. Med. Syste-
Sēsămum Orientāle. } matic names of two plants the seeds of which are greatly esteemed (U.S.A.), where they are called oily grain, and are made into soaps, etc.; when fresh they afford a considerable quantity of a warm pungent oil; the leaves are also used medicinally, being of a mucilaginous quality. See Oleum Sesami. Fr. anal. sésame orientale.

Sĕ'sĕli, leos, n. (Σέσελι.) A name for the Laserpitium siler, or hartwort. Also a Linn. genus of plants, Cl. Pentandria; Ord. Digynia.

Sĕ'sĕli Crētĭcum. Bot. A name for the Tordylium officinale.

Sĕ'sĕli Marsilien'se. Bot. A name for the S. tortuosum.

Sĕ'sĕli Tortuōsum. Bot. A name for the hartwort of Marseilles, the seeds of which are used medicinally, being more pungent than those of the Laserpitium siler; also called S. Marsiliense, Fœniculum sylvestre or tortuosum.

Sēsēlĭneus, a, um. Bot. Applied to a tribe (Seselineæ, nom. pl. f.) of the Umbelliferæ established by de Candolle, having the Seseli for their type. Fr. anal. séséliné, adj.

Sesiārius, a, um. Entomol. Applied by Latreille to a tribe (Sesiariæ, nom. pl. f.) of the Lepidoptera crepuscularia, having the Sesia for their type. Fr. anal. sésiaire, adj.

Sesqui-. Indecl. (As if Semisque, from Semis, half of; que, also; because it is a half in addition to a whole.) Chem. Used to denote compounds (in the doctrine of definite proportions) in which an equivalent and a half of one ingredient is combined with one equivalent of another, as Sesqui-carbonate, Sesqui-oxide, etc. Pharm. This word signifies one and a half of any measure, number, or weight, as Sesqui-granum, a grain and a half, etc. See Hemiolios. Fr. anal. sesqui-. Germ. syn. anderthalb.

Sesquiammōnĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to ammoniac salts, containing one and a half times as much of the base as the neutral salts of the same genus, as the Boras sesquiammonica: sesquiammo'nic. Fr. anal. sesquiammonique, adj.

Sesquiargen'tĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to argentic salts, having one and a half times as much of the base as the neutral salt of the same genus, as the Phosphas sesquiargentica: sesquiargen'tic. Fr. anal. sesquiargentique, adj.

Sesquiarse'niate. Chem. Name by Berzelius for super-salts containing one and a half times as much arsenic acid as the neutral salts of the same bases. Sesquiarsē'nias, atis, f. Fr. anal. sesquiarséniate, m.

Sesquibărytĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to barytic sub-salts having one and a half times as much as neutral salts of the same genus, as the Sulpharsenias sesquibarytica: sesquibary'tic. Fr. anal. sesquibarytique, adj.

Sesquiba'sĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to a sub-salt containing one and a half times as much of base as the corresponding neutral salt, for the quantity of acid: sesquiba'sic. Fr. anal. sesquibasique, adj.

Sesquĭcal'cĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to sub salts containing one and a half times as much of calcic oxide as the neutral salts of the same genus, as the Phosphas sesquicalcica: sesquical'cic. Fr. anal. sesquicalcique, adj.

Sesquĭcarbōnas, ātis, f. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to super-salts in which the carbonic acid is one and a half times as much as the base in the corresponding neutral salt, as the Sesquicarbonas barytica: a sesquicar'bonate. Fr. anal. sesquicarbonate, m.

Sesquĭcŏbal'tĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to sub-salts which contain the same quantity of acid with one proportion and a half of cobaltic oxide, as exists in the neutral salt, as the Arsenias sesquicobaltica: sesquicobal'tic. Fr. anal. sesquicobaltique, adj.

Sesquĭcu'prĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to sub-salts containing one and a half times as much of cupric oxide as in other corresponding neutral salts, as the Acetas sesquicuprica: sesquicu'pric. Fr. anal. sesquicuprique, adj.

Sesquĭfēr'rĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to sub-salts containing one and a half times as much ferric oxide as neutral salts of the same genus, as the Arsenias sesquiferrica: sesquifer'ric. Fr anal. sesquiferrique, adj.

Sesquĭferrōsus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to sub-salts containing one and a half times as much ferrous oxide as the corresponding neutral salts: sesquifer'rous. Fr. anal. sesquiferreux, adj.

Sesquiflōrus, a, um. Bot. Applied by Trinius to the locusta or spicula of the Gramineæ when it contains but one flower, of which the palea is provided at the base of the peduncle with a second aborted flower, as in the Hordeum. Fr. anal. sesquiflore, adj.

Sesquihy'drĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to a compound discovered by Faraday in which hydrogen is to carbon :: 3 : 2, and which he termed Carburetum sesquihydricum: sesquihy'dric. Fr. anal. sesquihydrique, adj.

Sesquĭli'thĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to sub-salts containing one and a half times as much of lithin as the corresponding neutral salts, as the Sulpharseniate sesquilithicus: sesquili'thic. Fr. anal. sesquilithique, adj.

Sesquĭmagne'sĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to sub-salts containing one and a half times as much magnesia as is in neutral salts of the same genus, as the Boras sesquimagnesica: sesquimagne'sic. Fr. anal. sesquimagnésique, adj.

Sesquĭmangănōsus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to sub-salts containing one and a half times as much manganous oxide as the corresponding neutral salts, as the Silicas sesquimanganosa: sesquiman'ganous. Fr. anal. sesquimanganeux, adj.

Sesquioxȳdātus, a, um. Chem. Applied to a simple body, especially a metal, in the state of a sesquioxide, as the Manganesium sesquioxydatum. Fr. anal. sesquioxidé, adj.

Sesquio'xȳdum, i, n. Chem. Term for a metal that is combined with a proportion and a half of oxygen: a sesquio'xide. Fr. anal. sesquioxide, m.

Sesquiphos'phas, ātis, f. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to super-salts in which the phosphoric acid is one and a half times as much as in the neutral salts of the same genus, as the Sesquiphosphas calcica. Fr. anal. sesquiphosphate m.

Sesquiphosphūrētum, i, n. Chem. Term for a phosphuret in which for one proportion of metal there are one and a half of phosphorus: a sesquiphos'phuret. Fr. anal. sesquiphosphure, m.

Sesquiplum'bĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to sub-salts containing one and a half times as much plumbic oxide as the corresponding neutral salts, as the Vanadas sesquiplumbica: sesquiplum'bic. Fr. anal. sesquiplombique, adj.

Sesquĭpōtas'sĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to sub-salts containing one and a half times as much potass as the neutral salts of the same genus, as the Sulpharsenias sesquipotassica: sesquipotas'sic. Fr. anal. sesquipotassique, adj.

Sesquĭsodĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to sub-salts that contain one and a half times as much soda as is in the corresponding neutral salts, as the Sulpharsenias sesquisodica: sesquiso'dic. Fr. anal. sesquisodique, adj.

Sesquĭsulphūrētum, i, m. Chem. Term for a sulphuret containing a proportion and a half of sulphur to one of the other simple body, as the sesquisulphuret of cobalt: a sesquisul'phuret. Fr. anal. sesquisulphure, m.

Sesquiyt'trĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to subsalts containing one and a half times as much of Yttria as the corresponding neutral salts, as the Phosphas sesquiyttrica. Fr. anal. sesquiyttrique, adj.

Sessĭliflōrus, a, um. (Sessĭlis; flos, a flower.) Bot. Applied to a plant with sessile flowers, as the Ranunculus sessiliflorus: ses'siliflo'rous. Fr. anal. sessiliflore, adj. Germ. syn. sitzendblümig, adj.

Sessĭlifō'lĭātus, a, um. Bot. Applied by de Candolle to a Section (Sessilifoliatæ, nom. pl. f.) of the genus Oxalis, having sessile leaves. Fr. anal. sessilifolié, adj. Germ. syn. sitzendblättrig, adj.

Sessĭlifō'lĭus, a, um. (Sessĭlis; fŏlium, a leaf.) Bot. Having sessile leaves, as the Loranthus sessilifolius. Fr. anal. sessilifolié, adj. Germ. syn. sitzendblättrig, adj.

Sessĭlĭŏ'cŭlus, a, um. (Sessĭlis; ocŭlus, an eye.) Zoöl. Applied by Lamarck to an Order (Sessilioculi, nom. pl. m.) of the Crustaceæ, comprehending those the eyes of which are sessile, and which he has afterwards divided. Fr. anal. sessiliocule, adj. Germ. syn. sitzendaugig, adj.

Ses'sĭlis, is, e. (Sĕdeo, to sit.) Bot. Sitting close to the stem, without a footstalk: ses'sile. Fr. anal. sessile, adj. Germ. syn. stiellos, adj.; ungestielt, adj.

Sesulpharsĕ'nias, ātis, f. (Sex, six; sulpharsĕnias.) Chem. Name by Berzelius for a supersulpharseniate containing six times as much of arsenic sulphide as the corresponding neutral sulpharseniate, as the Sesulpharsenias barytica. Fr. anal. sésulfarséniate, m.

Sesuvie'us, a, um. Bot. Applied to a Section (Sesuvieæ, nom. pl. f.) of the Ficoideæ, admitted by A. Richard, having the Sesuvium for a type. Fr. anal. sesuvié, adj.

Sēta, æ, f. A bristle. Bot. Applied to a species of pubescence covering certain plants. Zoöl. The stiff setæ (nom. pl.) that issue from certain of the Articulata annulata are either simple or in fasciculi, which serve in lieu of feet. Fr. syn. soie, f. Germ. syn. Borste, f.

Sētăceum, i, n. (Sēta, a bristle, or strong hair; horsehairs having first been used for the purpose of establishing setons.) Surg. Term for a small canal or artificial passage made under the skin by means of an instrument called a seton-needle, being flat, and pointed like a lancet, with an eye-hole at the opposite end for the purpose of introducing several threads of silk, cotton, or other suitable material, which is left in the sinus or canal thus formed, and a new portion of it drawn through daily for the purpose of maintaining a degree of irritation and consequent discharge from the wound; a se'ton. Fr. syn. séton, m. Germ. syn. Haarseil, n.; Haarschnur, f.

Sētāceus, a, um. (Sēta, a bristle.) Bot. Having bristles; bristly; applied to parts of plants presenting this appearance: seta'ceous. Fr. anal. sétacé, adj. Germ. syn. borstig, adj.

Sēti-. (Sēta, a bristle.) Bot., Zoöl. A prefix entering into many compound terms, and denoting the existence of bristles or objects like them, in addition to the quality indicated by the other portion of the words, and easily understood by reference to the latter in their proper places; any that do not appear elsewhere will be found inserted here. Fr. anal. séti-.

Sētĭ'cĕrus, a, um. (Sēti-; κέρας, a horn.) Zoöl. Applied by Latreille to a Family Seticera, nom. pl. n.) of the Crustacea Lophyropoda, having the superior antennæ long and setaceous. Fr. anal. séticère, adj. Germ. syn. borsthornig, adj.

Sētĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Sēti-; fĕro, to bring.) Bot., Zoöl. The same as Setiger.

Sētĭfor'mis, is, e. (Sēta, a bristle; forma, likeness.) Bot. Formed or shaped like a bristle; applied to parts of plants so formed: se'tiform. Fr. anal. sétiforme, adj. Germ. syn. borstförmig, adj.

Sētĭger, *ĕra, ĕrum. } (Sēta, a bristle; gĕro, to Sētĭ'gĕrus, a, um. } bear.) Bot. Bearing or yielding bristles; applied to a Family (Abranchiata Setigera, nom. pl. n.) of the Articulata Annulata, certain of which are furnished with stout setæ: seti'gerous. Fr. anal. sétigère, adj. Germ. syn. borsttragend, part. adj.

Sētĭpen'nis, is, e. (Sēti-; penna, a wing.) Entomol. Having wings charged with hairs. The Tachina setipennis has the nervures of the wings hairy. Fr. anal. sétipénne, adj. Germ. syn. borstflugelt, adj.

Sētĭpes, pĕdis, adj. (Sēti-; pes, a foot.) Bot. Applied to a mushroom with a long filiform pedicle, as the Agaricus setipes: se'tipede. Fr. anal. sétipède, adj. Germ. syn. borstfüssig, adj.

Sētĭ'pŏdus, a, um. (Sēti-; πούς, a foot.) Zoöl. Applied originally by Blainville to animals (Setipoda, nom. pl. n.) which he has since called Chetopoda. Fr. anal. sétipode, adj. Germ. syn. borstfüssig, adj.

Seton. Surg. See Setaceum.

Sētōsus, a, um. (Sēta, a bristle; terminal -ōsus.) Bot. Having many bristles; full of bristles; bristly: se'tose; applied to parts of plants so provided. See Diss. div.

i. s. iv. Fr. anal. séteux, adj. Germ. syn. mit Borsten besetzt.

Setterwort. Bot. A common name for the Helleborus fœtidus, or stinking hellebore.

Seviparous. Anat. Physiol. See Sebiparous.

Sēvum, i, n. (As if Suevum, from sus, a swine or hog; because its carcase is loaded with fat.) M. Med. The pharmacopœial name (L.E. and U.S.A.) for the prepared fat of the Ovis aries, (D.) the Adeps ovilli. Tallow; suet; fat; also termed Sebum. See Adeps, Axungia, Stais, Stear. Fr. syn. suif, m. Germ. syn. Talg, m.

Sēvum Cēti. M. Med. The fat of the whale; a term for the substance spermaceti, obtained from the Physeter macrocephalus of Linnæus, and other species of the Physeter, or Cachalot. Fr. syn. spermàcéti. Germ. syn. Wallrath, m.

Sēvum Ovil'lum. M. Med. The fat of the sheep, or mutton suet. Fr. syn. suif de mouton.

Sex-. (Sex, six.) *Chem., Nat. Signātus, a, um. (Signo, to mark.) Entomol. Applied by Lamarck to the chrysalis, the body of which not being transparent does not show the parts already formed of the perfect insect, but presents many which are seen in relief, as in the Lepidoptera. Fr. anal. signé, adj.

Sig'num, i, n. (Σημή, a point, or mark.) Med., Pathol. A sign or symptom of disease. See Sign.

Sil. Chem. Old term for ochre, or argil coloured with oxide of iron.

Sĭlāceus, a, um. (Sil, a term for ochre.) Chem. Pertaining to ochre. Fr. anal. silacé, adj. Germ. syn. ochrig, adj.

Sĭlēne Inflāta. Bot. Term for the Cucubalus behen.

Sĭlēneus, a, um. Bot. Applied to a tribe (Seleneæ, nom. pl. f.) of the Caryophylleæ admitted by de Candolle, having the Silene for their type. Fr. anal. silené, adj.

Sĭler, ĕris, n. (Cĕler, quick; from its rapid growth.) Bot. The hartwort, or sermountain. See Laserpitium Siler.

Sĭler Montānum. Bot. Another name for Laserpitium siler.

Sĭlērīneus, a, um. Bot. Applied to a tribe (Silerineæ, nom. pl. f.) established by de Candolle in the Umbelliferæ, having the Siler for their type: sileri'neous. Fr. anal. silériné, adj.

Sĭlex, ĭcis, m. and f. (Χάλιξ.) Flint. Fr. syn. caillou, m. Germ. syn. Kieselstein, m.

Sĭlexĭfor'mis, is, e. (Sĭlex, flint; forma, likeness.) Chem. Having the appearance of common silex or of flint, as the Petrosilex silexiformis: sile'xiform. Fr. anal. silexiforme, adj. Germ. syn. kieselförmig, adj.

Sĭ'lĭca, æ, f. (Sĭlex, flint; because it constitutes the chief part of that substance.) Chem. Name for one of the primitive earths which enters into the composition of almost all compound earths and stones, and of sand; it is also found in many plants, especially grasses, etc. Fr. anal. silice, f. Germ. syn. Kieselerde, f.

Si'licate. (Sĭlĭcĭcum acĭdum; Silicic acid; terminal -ate.) Chem. Term for a combination of silicic acid with a salifiable base. Sĭ'lĭcas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. silicate, m.

Sĭlĭcetus. Med., Pathol. Old epithet of tartar in too great excess in the kidneys or in the bladder.

Sili'ciate. Chem. The same as Silicate.

Sili'cic. (Sĭlĭca, one of the primitive earths; terminal -ic.) Chem. Of or belonging to silica; applied to an acid supposed to exist in alkaline solutions of this substance, because these combine with several of the metallic oxides. Sĭlĭ'cĭcus, a, um. Fr. anal. silicique, adj. Germ. syn. kieselsauer, adj.

Sĭlĭ'cĭco-. (Sĭlĭcĭcus, pertaining to silex, or flint.) Chem. A prefix in many compound terms by Berzelius, applied to double salts resulting from the combination of a silicic salt with a salt, indicated by the latter portion of such compounds, as Silicico-ammonicus, or a silicic with an ammonic salt, etc. Fr. anal. silicico-.

Sĭlĭ'cides, m. pl. Mineral. Applied by Beudant to a Family of minerals composed of oxide of silicium, either alone or combined with various other oxides. Fr. anal. silicides, m. pl.

Sĭlĭcĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Sĭlĭca; fĕro, to bear.) Chem. Applied by Häuy to mineral substances accidentally containing silica, as the Zincum oxydatum siliciferum: silici'- ferous. Fr. anal. silicifère, adj. Germ. syn. kieselhaltend, part. adj.

Sĭlĭ'ciobōras, ātis, f. Chem. Name given to the combinations of borosilicic acid with the bases: a siliciobo'rate. Fr. anal. silicioborate, m.

Sĭlĭ'ciofluōrūrētum, i, n. Chem. Term for a combination of silicium and fluor with an electro-positive metal: a siliciofluo'ruret. Fr. anal. siliciofluorure, m.

Sĭlĭcĭōsus, a, um. (Sĭlĭca; terminal -ōsus.) Geol. Containing, having, or full of silica; applied to a rock which has silicious nuclei in a mass or body of freestone, or the like, or which is composed of fragments of jasper or agate united by a silicious cement: sili'cious. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. anal. silicieux, adj. Germ. syn. kieselig, adj.

Sĭlĭ'cioti'tanātis, ātis, f. Chem. Applied to compounds in which silica and titanic acid are combined together with a base, as the siliciotitanate of lime: a silicioti'tanate. Fr. anal. siliciotitanate, m.

Sĭlĭ'ciphthorūrētum, i, n. Chem. Name by Beudant for the combinations of the fluoruret or phthoruret of silicium with a simple body: a sili'cipththo'ruret. Fr. anal. siliciphthorure, m.

Sĭlĭ'cium, ii, n. Chem. Name given to the base of silica. Fr. anal. silicium, m.

Sĭlĭ'ciūrētum, i, n. Chem. Term for a combination of silicium with a combustible body, especially with a metal: a sili'ciuret. Fr. anal. siliciure, m.

Sĭlĭ'cŭla, æ, f. (Dim. Sĭlĭqua, a pod.) Bot. A little pod; a pouch which differs from the Siliqua, or pod, only in being short or even broader than it is long: a si'licule. Fr. anal. silicule, f. Germ. syn. Schötchen, n.

Sĭlĭ'cŭlĭfor'mis, is, e. Bot. Having the form of a silicula or of a small siliqua, as the capsule of the Bocconia: sili'culiform. Fr. anal. siliculiforme, adj. Germ. syn. schötchenförmig, adj.

Sĭlĭcŭlōsus, a, um. (Sĭlĭcŭla, a little pod, or pouch; terminal -ōsus.) Bot. Having many short broad pods: sili'culose; applied to the first Linn. Order (Siliculosa, nom. pl. n.) of the Cl. Tetradynamia. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. anal. siliculeux, adj.

Silipit. Chem. Old term for Cuprum, or copper.

Sĭ'lĭqua, æ, f. (As if Sĕlŏca, from sēmen, a seed, lŏcus, a place; because it is a place fitted to contain seeds.) Bot. A long, dry, bivalve pericarpium in which the seeds are fixed alternately to each edge forming the suture; a pod. Fr. anal. silique, f. Germ. syn. Schote, f.

Sĭ'lĭqua Dul'cis. Bot. A name for the Ceratonia siliqua, or carob-tree.

Sĭlĭquas'trum Plĭnii. Bot. A name for the Capsicum annuum, from its pods.

Sĭlĭquel'la, æ, f. Bot. Name by de Candolle for a fruit originally formed of three pieces, two lateral, bearing the ovules upon their interior disc, and an external, not bearing an ovule, as in the Papaver and Nymphæa. Fr. anal. siliquelle, f.

Sĭ'lĭquĭfor'mis, is, e. Bot. Having the form of a siliqua or pod, as the fruit of the Chelidonium majus or of the Corchorus siliquosus: sili'quiform. Fr. anal. siliquiforme, adj. Germ. syn. schotförmig, adj.

Sĭlĭquōsa In'dĭca. Bot. Name of an American plant, the juice of which is said to be alexipharmic.

Sĭlĭquōsus, a, um. (Sĭlĭqua, a pod, terminal -ōsus.) Bot. Having numerous pods: siliquose; applied to the second Linn. Order (Siliquosa, nom. pl. n.) of the Cl. Tetradynamia; also to an Order (Siliquosæ, nom. pl. f.) of Linnæus's Fragments of a Natural Method. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. anal. siliqueux. Germ. syn. schotenarteg, adj.; schotig, adj.

Silk. (Sax. Seolc.) The fine yarn or numerous slender threads produced by the silkworm. Sērĭcum, i, n. See Sericum.

Silk, Burnt. Pharm. See Burnt Silk.

Silkworm, A'cid of. Chem. Common term for the bombic acid.

Silphalis, is, e. Entomol. Applied by Cuvier to a tribe (Silphales, nom. pl. m.) of the Coleoptera, having the Silpha for their type. Fr. anal. silphale, adj.

Silphi'deus, a, um. Entomol. Applied by Leach to a Family (Silphidea, nom. pl. n.) of the Coleoptera, having the Silpha for their type. Fr. anal. silphide, adj.

Silphie'us, a, um. Bot. Applied by H. Cassini to a group (Silphieæ, nom. pl. f.) of the Heliantheæ Coreopsideæ; by Lessing to a Section of the Asteroideæ Melampodieæ, having the Silphium for their type. Fr. anal. silphie, adj.

Sil'phium, ii, n. (Σίλφιον.) Bot. A name which appears to have been applied to several different plants or their produce, as Laserpitium, Ferula assafœtida, etc.

Silu'rian. (Sĭlŭres, the name of the people who anciently inhabited South Wales.) Geol. Applied to a system of rock found specially in South Wales. Sĭlŭriānus, a, um. Fr. anal. silurien, adj.

Sĭlŭrĭdæ, patron. nom. pl. m. (Sĭlŭrus, the catfish; terminal -ĭdæ.) Ichthyol. Belonging to, or resembling the genus Silurus; applied to a Family of the Malacopterygii Abdominales.

Sĭlŭroïdēs, adj. Ichthyol. Applied by Cuvier, Latreille and Eichwald to a Family of the osseous Malacopterygii, having the Silurus for their type. Fr. anal. siluroïdes, m. pl.

Sĭlŭrosōmătus, a, um. (Sĭlŭrus; σῶμα, a body.) Ichthyol. Applied by Blainville to a Family (Silurosomata, nom. pl. n.) of the Abdominales, having the Silurus for their type. Fr. anal. silurosome, adj.

Silver. (Sax. Sedfer.) See Argentum, and Acamech.

Silver, Fulminating. Chem. See Argentas Ammoniæ.

Silver, Litharge of. See Almarcab, Almarcarida.

Sil'vĭcus, a, um. (Sylva, a wood; terminal -ic.) Chem. Applied by Unverdorben to one of the resins he extracted from colophonia resina, which he termed acide sylvique. The name has not been adopted. Fr. anal. silvique, adj.

Sily'beus, a, um. Bot. Applied by H. Cassini to a Section (Silybeæ, nom. pl. f.) of the Carduineæ; by Lessing to a Section of the Cynareæ Carduineæ, having the Silybam for their type. Fr. anal. sylibé, adj.

Simaba Ce'drum. Bot. Name of a plant native of Panama, S. America, which yields the Cedron seeds. See Cedron Seeds.

Sīmæpyrhyn'chus. a, um. (Σιμὸς, flat-nosed; αἰπὺς, high; ῥύγχος, a beak.) Ornithol. Applied by J. A. Ritgen to a Family (Simæpyrhynchi, nom. pl. m.) having the beak high and crooked. Fr. anal. simæpyrhynque, adj.

Sĭmărūba, æ, f. (A patronymic of America.) The pharmacopœial name (U.S.A.) for the bark of the root of the plant Simaruba officinalis; (E.) of the Simaruba amara; (D.) the Simarubæ Cortex; also called Quassia Simaruba. A Linn. genus of plants, Cl. Decandria; Ord. Monogynia. Juss. Simarubeæ. Fr. anal. simarouba, m. Germ. syn. Simarubarinde, f.

Sĭmărūba Amāra. M. Med. The systematic name, according to the pharmacopœia (E.), of the plant which affords the simaruba-root bark. Fr. anal. simarouba amère. Germ. syn. der bitter Simarubenbaum.

Sĭmărūba Excel'sa. M. Med. The name, according to the pharmacopœia (U.S.A.) of the plant which affords quassia.

Sĭmărūba Offĭcīnālis. M. Med. The systematic name, according to the pharmacopœia (L.), of the plant which affords the simaruba-root bark; also named Quassia simaruba, Guiana cortex. Fr. anal. simarouba officinal. Germ. syn. der officinell Simarubenbaum.

Sĭmărūbeus, a, um. / Sĭmărūbiāceus, a, um. (Simaruba.) Bot. Belonging to, or having an arrangement of parts as in the genus Simaruba; applied to a Juss. Order (Simarubeæ, or Simarubiaceæ, nom. pl. f.) of plants: simaru'beous: simarubia'ceous. Fr. anal. simaroubé, adj.; simaroubiacé, adj.

Sīmiæ, Lăpis. A name for the Bezoar simiæ.

Sĭmĭlāris, is, e. (Sĭmĭlis, like.) Nat. Hist. That which resembles something else; like: si'milar. Fr. anal. similaire, adj. Germ. syn. gleichartig, adj.

Sīmĭlas, ātis, f. (Σιμόω, to render flat-nosed.) Anat. Old term applied to the concavity of the liver from which the Vena portæ proceeds, according to Bartholin. Surg. A term used by Galen for a vitiated figure of the nose, in which the middle part, or bridge, falls or is depressed.

Sĭmĭ'lia Simĭlĭbus Curan'tur. Med. See Doctrine of Signatures.

Sĭmĭliflōrus, a, um. (Sĭmĭlis, like; flos, a flower.) Bot. Applied by Mirbel to an umbel when all the flowers which compose it are like each other, as in the Sium verticillatum. Fr. anal. similiflore, adj. Germ. syn. ähnlichblümig, adj.

Sīmius, a, um. Zoöl. Applied by Goldfuss to a Family (Simii, nom. pl. m.) of the Mammifera, having the Simia for their type. Fr. anal. simien, adj.

Simmitium. / Simos. / Simothes. Chem. Old terms for Cerussa. Ruland and Johnson.

Sim'ple. Med. The opposite of compound; uncompounded; unadulterated; pure. Mineral. A simple form is that contained under homologous planes, or such as are equal, similar, and equally disposed in respect to each other. Sim'plex, ĭcis, adj. Fr. anal. simple, adj. Germ. syn. einfach, adj.

Simple Affinity. See Attraction, Simple Elective.

Sim'plex, ĭcis, adj. (As if Sine plĭca, without a fold.) Not double; plain; sim'ple. Zoöl. Applied to an order (Simplicia, nom. pl. n.) of the Radiata Acalepha. See Simple.

Simplĭcĭcau'lis, is, e. (Simplex, simple; caulis, a stem.) Bot. Having a simple stem, as the Fuchsia simplicicaulis. Fr. anal. simplicicaule, adj. Germ. syn. einfachstammig, adj.

Simplĭcĭcor'nis, is, e. (Simplex, simple; cornu, a horn.) Entomol. Applied by Duméril to a Family (Simplicicornes, nom. pl. m.) of the Diptera, the antennæ of which are unprovided with a single lateral hair. Fr. anal. simplicicorne, adj. Germ. syn. einfachhornig, adj.

Simplĭcĭfō'lius, a, um. (Simplex, simple; fŏlium, a leaf.) Bot. Having simple leaves, as the Millingtonea simplicifolia; applied by de Candolle to a Section (Simplicifoliæ, nom. pl. f.) of the genus Oxalis. Fr. anal. simplicifolié, adj. Germ. syn. einfachblättrig, adj.

Simplĭcĭ'mănus, a, um. (Simplex, simple; mănus, the hand.) Entomol. Applied by Cuvier to a Section (Simplicimani, nom. pl. m.) of the Carabici, only the two anterior tarsi of which are dilated in the males, but are not formed of a square or orbicular flat extremity. Fr. anal. simplicimane, adj. Germ. syn. einfachhandig, adj.

Simplĭ'cĭpes, pĕdis, adj. (Simplex, simple; pes, a foot.) Entomol. Applied by Dejean to a tribe (Simplicipedes, nom. pl. m.) of the Carabici, having no depression on the inside of the anterior legs.

Sĭmŭlātio, ōnis, f. (Sĭmŭlo, to feign, or counterfeit.) Med. Jur. Term for a counterfeiting, or pretending to be suffering under disease; malingering: simula'tion. Fr. anal. simulation, f. Germ. syn. Vorgeben, n.

Sĭmŭlātio Lātens. Med., Jur. Term for a case of simulation in which disease is actually present but where the symptoms are falsely aggravated, and greater sickness is pretended than really exists. Fr. anal. simulation latente.

Sina. The same as China.

Sĭnāpe, is, n. Bot. The same as Sinapi, etc.

Sĭnāpĕlæ'um, i, n. (Σίναπι, mustard; ἔλαιον, oil.) Oil of mustard. Fr. syn. huile de moutarde. Germ. syn. Senföl, f.

Sĭnāpi, eos, n. Sĭnāpy, yos, n. Sĭnāpis, is, f. Sĭnāpium, ii, n. (Σίνηπι, or Σίναπι, from σίνεσθαι τοὺς ὤπας, it hurts the eyes, by its pungent odour, when inhaled.) The pharmacopœial name (L. and U.S.A.) of the flour of the seeds of the plants Sinapis nigra, and S. Alba, is Sinapis; (E.) it is Sinapi; (D.) the Sinapis semina. A Linn. genus of plants Cl. Tetradynamia; Ord. Siliquosa. Juss. Cruciferæ. Mustard. See Napus. Fr. syn. moutarde, f. Germ. syn. Senf, m. Med., Pharm. Sinapium is also a term for a decoction, or infusion, of mustard seed. Germ. syn. Senfbrühe, f.

Sinapin'. (Sĭnāpi, mustard.) Chem. Term by Berzelius for the substance which Henry and Garot called sulphosinapisin. Sĭnāpīna, æ, f. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 4. Fr. anal. sinapine, f.

Sĭnāpis Al'ba. M. Med. The systematic name of the plant which affords white mustard. Fr. syn. moutarde blanche. Germ. syn. weisser Senf.

Sĭnāpis Ni'gra. M. Med. The systematic name of the plant which yields black mustard; also called Cruca, Napus. Fr. syn. moutarde noire. Germ. syn. schwarzer Senf.

Sĭnāpis'mus, i, m. (Sĭnāpis, mustard.) Med., Pharm. Term for a plaster or poultice made of mustard, linseed meal, and vinegar: a si'napism. Fr. anal. sinapisme, m. Germ. syn. Senfpflaster, n.; Senfumschlag, m.

Sincĭpĭtālis, is, e. (Sinciput.) Anat. Pertaining to the sinciput. Zoöl. Applied by Blainville to one of the segments which by their union constitute the head of the Chetopoda: sinci'pital. Fr. anal. sincipital, adj.

Sin'ciput, ĭtis, n. (As if Sēmĭcĭput, from sēmi, half of; căput, a head; or summum căput, the highest part of the head.) Anat. The fore and upper part of the head; termed, also, Bregma. See Puppis. Fr. anal. sinciput, m. Germ. syn. Vorderkopf, m.

Sine. Geom. Term for a right line drawn from one extremity of an arch perpendicular to the diameter passing through the other extremity. A co-sine is the part of the diameter of an arch intercepted between the centre and sine, and which is equal to the sine of the complement of the arch. A versed sine is the part of the diameter of an arch intercepted between the sine and the periphery. Sĭnus, ûs, m.

Sĭne Pāri. Anat. Without a fellow; applied to muscles, blood-vessels, etc., which are also termed Azygos.

Single Affinity. Nat. Philos. See Attraction, Simple Elective.

Singul'tus, ûs, m. (Σὺν, with; gŭla, the throat; because its peculiar sound is heard there.) Med., Pathol. Term for a convulsive motion of the diaphragm and neighbouring parts, popularly named the hiccough or hiccup. See Hyptiasmus, Sygmos. Fr. syn. hoquet, m. Germ. syn. Schlucken, m.; Schluchzen, n.

Sĭnōpis, ĭdis, f. (Σινωπὶς, red lead.) Chem. Old term for a superior kind of Rubrica; also the same as Miltos, or red lead.

Sĭnuātus, a, um. (Sĭnuo, to turn or wind, making hollows.) Bot. Hollowed; scolloped: si'nuated; applied to leaves. Fr. anal. sinué, adj. Germ. syn. gebuchtet, adj.

Sĭ'nŭlus, i, m. (Dim. Sĭnus.) Term for a little sinus: a si'nule. Fr. anal. sinule, m. Germ. syn. ein kleiner Sinus.

Sĭnuŏlātus, a, um. (Sĭnus.) Bot. Applied by L. C. Richard to leaves cut into round prominent parts which are separated by slightly deep sinuses, as in the Solanum nigrum: si'nuolated. Fr. anal. sinuolé, adj.

Sĭnuōsus, a, um. (Sĭnus; terminal -ōsus.) Bot., Mineral., Zoöl. Having, or full of sinuses: si'nuous. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. anal. sinueux, adj. Germ. syn. mit Sinus.

Sĭ'nus, ûs, m. (Said to be from Cingo, to compass about.) A cavity, hollow, or depression. Anat. Applied to certain veins of the dura mater, variously distinguished according to their situation or particular form and extent. Geom. A Sine, which see. Med., Surg. Pathol. The foul hollow part of an imposthume or sore; a long narrow hollow track leading from some abscess, diseased bone, or the like: a si'nus. See Absconsio, Eurychoria, Colpos. Fr. anal. sinus, m.; clapier, m. Germ. syn. ein fistuloses oder hohles Geschwur.

Sinus, Cavernous. Anat. See Cavernous Sinus.

Sinus, Inferior Longitudinal. Anat. See Longitudinal Sinus, Inferior.

Sinus, Longitudinal. Anat. See Longitudinal Sinus.

Sinus, Maxillary. Anat. See Highmorianum, Antrum.

Sĭ'nus Mŭlie'bris. Anat. A term for the Vagina.

Sĭ'nus Pōcŭlāris. Anat. The cup-like sinus; a term applied to a large lacuna situated in the centre of the Verumontanum.

Sĭ'nus U'tĕri. Anat. A term for the large veins contained in the parietal substance of the uterus, and which become greatly enlarged in the gravid state.

Spīna Bĭ'fĭda. Med., Surg. Pathol. The cloven spine; a term for the disease Hydrorachitis. See Spinola.

Spīna Cervīna. Bot. A name for the Rhamnus catharticus, or buckthorn.

Spīna Infectōria. } Bot. Names for the Rham-
Spīna Purga'trix. } nus catharticus, or purging buckthorn.

Spīna Ventōsa. Med., Surg. Pathol. An ill-adapted term for a disease in which matter is formed in a bone, expands its walls, and makes its way outward below the skin, sometimes insinuating itself into the cellular substance so as to render it soft and flabby, as if filled with air; hence its epithet ventosa—that of spina being derived from the prickling sensation it causes, like puncturing of thorns; the disease Arthrocace; sometimes, also, applied to Hydarthrus. See Arthrocace, Pædarthrocace. Fr. syn. épine venteuse. Germ. syn. Winddorn, m.

Spin'ach. Bot. Common name for the Spinachia oleracia; also called spinage.

Spīnāchia, æ, f. } Bot. A Linn. genus of Spīnācia, æ, f. } plants, Cl. Diœcia; Ord. Pentandria. Spinach or spinage. Fr. anal. épinard, m. Germ. anal. Spinat, m.

Spīnācia Olĕrācea. Bot., Med. Systematic name of the spinach or spinage, formerly used in the cure of phthisical affections; also employed in poultice as emollient. Fr. syn. épinard cultivé. Germ. syn. Spinat, m.

Spinage. See Spinach.

Spī'nal. (Spīna, the back-bone.) Anat. Belonging to the spine, or back-bone; applied to muscles, nerves, etc. Spīnālis, is, e. Fr. anal. spinal, adj. Germ. syn. dornig, adj.

Spi'nal Cen'tre. Physiol. Term applied by Dr. M. Hall to the spinal marrow, as distinct from its exodic and esodic nerves, in his Diastaltic Nervous System.

Spi'nal Chord. Anat. A term synonymous with that of Spinal Marrow, which see. Physiol. The central organ of the Spinal System, of reflex actions, and the functions of ingestion and egestion; and so distinct from the spinal marrow, or agent in emotion and volition. Fr. syn. moelle épinière. Germ. syn. Ruckenmark, n.

Spinal Column. Anat. See Columna Vertebralis.

Spi'nal Mar'row. Anat. The Medulla spinalis, or medullary substance which is continued from the Medulla oblongata, and is so named from being contained in the spinal, or vertebral column. Physiol. The agent in emotion and volition;—the prolongation, in a word, of the Cerebral system, and so distinct from the Spinal Cord, which see, and also Æon.

Spinal Marrow, True. See True Spinal Marrow.

Spi'nal Sys'tem. Med., Physiol. A term applied by M. Hall to the spinal marrow and its spinal, incident and reflex nerves, as distinct from and exclusive of the cerebral, and the ganglionic systems. It is the nervous system of all the acts of Ingestion, Egestion, Retention and Exclusion in the animal economy, and so of the preservation of the individual and the perpetuation of the species. It is excitor, and includes the Corpora quadrigemina, the Medulla oblongata, and Medulla spinalis. It consists of Incident, Excitor and Reflex motor nerves in essential connection with the true spinal marrow. It appropriates portions of the external world in respiration and deglutition, in mass. See Diastaltic Nervous System, Nervous System, Staltic.

Spi'nal Sys'tem of Nerves. Med., Physiol. A term embracing those nerves which convey irritating impressions on, or irritation of the surface of the body, or mucous surfaces, to the true spinal marrow, called Incident—and those that convey motor phœnomena from it, named Reflex spinal nerves.

Spīnātus, a, um. (Spīna, a thorn.) Bot. Having thorns; thorny: spi'nate. Fr. syn. épiné, adj. Germ. syn. bedornt, adj.; mit Dornen besetzt.

Spindle-shaped. See Fusiform.

Spīnel'la, æ, f. (Dim. Spīna.) Bot. Term by Mirbel for a point stronger, larger, and more compact than hair, but which has not the woody consistence of spines and thorns. Fr. anal. spinelle, f. Germ. syn. Dornchen, n.

Spīnellōsus, a, um. (Spīnella; terminal -ōsus.) Bot. Having or full of spinellæ, as the leaves of the Helminthia echioides; or apparently so, as the Elytropappus spinellosus, because of its mucronated leaves. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. anal. spinelleux, adj. Germ. syn. voll Dörnchen.

Spīnes'cens, tis, part. (Spīna, a thorn.) Bot. Becoming hard and thorny: spines'cent. Fr. anal. spinescent, adj. Germ. syn. dornigwerdend, part. adj.; dornspitzig, adj.

Spīnescen'tia, æ, f. (Spīna, a thorn.) Bot. The state of a surface more or less covered with thorns: spines'cence. Fr. anal. spinescence, f.

Spīnĭcau'dus, a, um. (Spīna; cauda, a tail.) Ornithol. Having the feathers of the tail pointed, as the Anas spinicauda. Zoöl. Applied to a reptile having the tail set with spines, as the Gecko spinicauda. Fr. anal. spinicaude, adj. Germ. syn. dornschwanzig, adj.

Spīnĭcĕrebrālis, is, e. Zoöl. Applied by Lamarck to a series (Spinicerebralia, nom. pl. n.) of the animal kingdom, having a cerebro-spinal nervous system: spinice'rebral. Fr. anal. spini-cérébraux, adj.

Spīnĭcol'lis, is, e. (Spīna; collum, the neck.) Entomol. Having the neck or corselet spinous, as the Ochetopus spinicollis. Fr. anal. spinicolle, adj. Germ. syn. dornhalsig, adj.

Spīnĭcor'nis, is, e. (Spīna; cornu, a horn.) Entomol. Having the horns or antennæ spinous, as the Lamia spinicornis. Fr. anal. spinicorne, adj. Germ. syn. dornhörnig, adj.

Spīnicrus, a, um. (Spīna; crus, the leg.) Entomol. Having the feet or legs spinous, as the Arachnea spinicrus, of which the four anterior feet are provided with stiff bristles. Fr. anal. spinicrure, adj. Germ. syn. dornschenkelig, adj.

Spīnĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Spīna; fĕro, to bear.) Bot., Entomol. Bearing spines; applied to the leaves of the Solanum pyracantha, the corselet of the Olfersia spinifera. Zoöl. The Trionyx spiniferus has a row of carti-laginous points on the border of the disc of its tubercles: spini'ferous. See Spinigerus. Fr. anal. spinifère, adj. Germ. syn. dorntragend, part. adj.

Spīnĭfŏlĭātus, a, um. (Spīna; fŏlium, a leaf.) Bot. Having spinous leaves, as the Inga spinifolia: spinifo'lious. Fr. anal. spinifolié, adj. Germ. syn. dornblättrig, adj.

Spīnĭfor'mis, is, e. (Spīna; forma, likeness.) Bot. Having the form of spines, as the subulated leaves of the Stereodon spiniformis: spi'niform. Fr. anal. spiniforme, adj. Germ. syn. dornförmig, adj.

Spīnĭ'gĕrus, a, um. (Spīna; gĕro, to bear.) Entomol. Bearing spines, as the scutellum of the Volucella spinigera, the antennæ and corselet of the Coreus spiniger, etc.: spini'gerous. See Spiniferus. Fr. anal. spinigère, adj. Germ. syn. dorntragend, part. adj.

Spīnĭla'bris, is, e. (Spīna; labrum, a lip.) Ornithol. Having the lip set with spines, as the end of that of the Pogonophorus spinilabris. Fr. anal. spinilabre, adj. Germ. syn. dornlippig, adj.

Spīnĭ'mănus, a, um. (Spīna; mănus, the hand.) Entomol., Zoöl. Applied to the Trachyphlæus spinimanus, having the forepart of the feet spinous; to the Lambrus spinimanus, having the claws covered with spinous rugosities. Fr. anal. spinimane, adj. Germ. syn. dornhändig, adj.

Spīnĭner'vius, a, um. (Spīna; nervus, a nerve.) Bot. Having the nervures of the leaves denticulated, as the Hypnum spininervium. Fr. anal. spininerve, adj. Germ. syn. dornnervig, adj.

Spīnĭpen'nis, is, e. (Spīna; penna, a wing.) Entomol. Having spinous wings. The elytra of the female of the Malachius spinipennis are acuminated at the extremity. Fr. anal. spinipenne, adj. Germ. syn. dornflügelicht, adj.

Spīnĭpes, pĕdis, adj. (Spīna; pes, a foot.) Ornithol. Having the feet covered with spines, as the Dilophus spinipes: spi'nipede. Fr. anal. spinipède, adj. Germ. syn. dornfüssig, adj.

Spīnĭtar'sis, is, e. (Spīna; tarsus.) Entomol. Having spinous tarsi, as the Monolepis spinitarsi, in which there are spines below the last joint of the foot. Fr. anal. spinitarse, adj. Germ. syn. dornfusswurzelig, adj.

Spīnītis, ĭdis, f. (Spīna, the dorsal spine; terminal -ītis.) Med., Pathol. An overstrained term for Myelitis.

Spin'nerets. (Sax. Spinnan, to make yarn.) Zoöl. Term for the minute teats, or mammillæ of the Arachnides. See Mammilla.

Spin'nerules. (Sax. Spinnan, to make yarn.) Zoöl. Term for the innumerable minute tubes, too small for the naked eye to perceive, with which each mammilla, teat, or spinneret of the Arachnides is studded, and every one of which emits a thread of inconceivable fineness.

Spīnŏcar'pus, a, um. (Spīna; καρπὸς, fruit.) Bot. Having spinous fruit, as the Anchusa spinocarpus: spinocar'pous. Fr. anal. spinocarpe, adj. Germ. syn. dornfrüchtig, adj.

Spīnŏla, a, f. (Spīna, the dorsal spine.) Med., Pathol. Term for Spina bifida.

Spīnōsŏcoccўgeus, a, um. (Spīnōsus; coccygeus.) Anat. Pertaining to a spinous process of the dorsal spine and to the coccyx; applied to a muscle. Fr. anal. spinosococcygien, adj. Germ. syn. die stachlichen Rückgratzfortsätze und das Kuckkucksbein zugleich betreffend.

Spīnōsŭlus, a, um. (Spīna; terminal -ŭlus.) Entomol. Applied to caterpillars which have only a few obtuse spines upon the back, as that of the Nymphalea: spino'sulous. Fr. anal. spinosulé, adj.

Spīnōsus, a, um. (Spīna, a thorn; terminal -ōsus.) Anat., Bot., Nat. Hist. Having thorns, spines, or objects resembling them; full of spines, or thorns; prickly; thorny: spi'nous. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. syn. épineux, adj. Germ. syn. dornig, adj.; voll Dornen.

Spinthēris'mus, i, m. (Σπινθηρίζω, to emit sparks.) Med., Pathol. Term for the sensation of an issuing of sparks from the eyes. Nat. Philos. The same as Corruscation, Scintillation. Fr. anal. spinthérisme, m. Germ. syn. Funkensprichen, n.

Spinthērŏ'mĕtrum, i, n. (Σπινθὴρ, a spark; μέτρον, a measure.) Nat. Philos. Term for an instrument for determining the size, power, and shock of electrical sparks; a measurer of sparks: a spinthero'meter. Fr. anal. spinthéromètre, m. Germ. syn. Funkenmesser, m.

Spinthērōpia, æ, f. (Σπινθὴρ, a spark; ὤψ, ὠπὸς, the eye.) Med., Pathol. A term proposed by M. Sichel for a depraved state of vision, in which fiery scintillations are present, in place of that of sparkling synchysis, because the word synchysis was bestowed under the idea that a softened state of the vitreous humour is an essential feature in the affection, which subsequent observation has rendered doubtful: spinthe'ropy. Fr. and Germ. anal. spinthéropie, f.

Spīnŭlĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Spīnŭla, a little spine; fĕro, to bear.) Bot. Having very small spines, as the leaves of the Mesembryanthemum spinuliferum: spinuli'ferous. Fr. anal. spinulifère, adj. Germ. syn. dorntragend, part. adj.

Spīnŭliflōrus, a, um. (Spīnŭla, a little spine; flos, a flower.) Bot. Having the sepals of the calyx mucronated, as the Arenaria spinuliflora: spinuliflo'rous. Fr. anal. spinuliflore, adj. Germ. syn. dornblümig, adj.

Spīnŭlĭfor'mis, is, e. (Spīnŭla, a little spine; forma, likeness.) Having the appearance of little spines: spi'nuliform. Fr. anal. spinuliforme, adj. Fr. anal. dornförmig, adj.

Spīnŭlōsus, a, um. (Spīnŭla, a little spine; terminal -ōsus.) Having or full of small spines. Bot. Applied to plants of which the leaves, as of the Sommerfeltia spinulosa, or the branches, as of the Myriodactylon spinulosum, are spinescent: spi'nulous. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. anal. spinuleux, adj. Germ. syn. voll Dornen.

Spīra, æ, f. (Σπεῖρα, anything wound upon an object.) Conchol. Term for the part of a spiri-valve shell formed by the enrolment of a spiral cone, a complete revolution of which is called a turn of the spire: a spire. Fr. anal. spire, f. Germ. syn. Gewinde, n.

Spīræ'a, æ, f. (Spīra, a spire; from its spiral stalk.) Bot. A Linn. genus of plants, Cl. Icosandria; Ord. Pentagynia. Juss. Rosacea. M. Med. The pharmacopœial name (U.S.A.) for the root of the hardhack.

Spīræ'a Afrīcāna. Bot. Name for a species of Diosma; supposed to be the D. crenata. Fr. syn. diosma crenée.

Spīræ'a Filīpen'dŭla. Bot. Systematic name of the officinal dropwort, the root of which is said to be astringent and lithontriptic; also called Saxifraga rubra. Fr. syn. filipendule, f.

Spīrācŭlum, i, n. (Spīro, to breathe.) Anat., Physiol. Applied in the plural (Spiracula) by Galen to the pores of the skin by which transpiration and perspiration are carried on. Bot., Entomol. A term proposed by Latreille to take the place of stigma, and to designate the exterior orifices of the tracheæ of insects: a spi'racule. Fr. anal. spiracule, m. Germ. syn. Luftloch, n.

Spīrācŭlum Vītæ. A term by Paracelsus for the first breath by which the Creator vivified the created body of Adam.

Spi'ral. (Spīra, a turning, or winding.) Turning round in the manner of a screw. Bot. Applied to certain vessels found in plants. Spīrālis, is, e. Fr. anal. spiralé, adj. Germ. syn. gewunden, adj.

Spi'ral Ban'dage. Surg. Term for the common roller which is applied spirally round a limb, and is the most ordinarily used of all bandages. Fr. anal. bandage spirale.

Spi'ral Ves'sels. } Bot. Terms for certain
Spi'rals. } small tubes, or narrow bands of elementary membrane rolled up spirally, found chiefly in the medullary sheath, the leaf and flower, never in the bark, seldom in the root, and only in plants provided with sexual organs; they have been termed Tracheæ, because it was supposed they conveyed some kind of gas.

Spīrālĭcŭlārius, a, um. Entomol. Applied to a section of the Araneides, the web of which is spiral, crossed by filaments in rays. Fr. anal. spiralitele, adj.

Spīrāmen, ĭnis, n. } (Spīro, to breathe.) Anat.
Spīrāmen'tum, i, n. } Term for an opening for the passage of the breath, as the spiramenta or cellulæ of the lungs. Germ. syn. eine Œffnung zum Durchlassen eine Hauch. Med., Physiol. The breath. Fr. syn. haleine, f. Germ. syn. Athmen, m.; Hauch, m.

Spīrĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Spīra; fĕro, to bear.) Zoöl. The Terebratula spirifera presents at the interior a double spire which passes along the inferior border towards the lateral angles: spiri'ferous. Fr. anal. spirifère, adj. Germ. syn. schraubtragend, part. adj.

Spīrĭfor'mis, is, e. (Spīra; forma, likeness.) Entomol. Of a spiral form, as the antennæ of the Sphex: spi'riform. Fr. anal. spiriforme, adj. Germ. syn. schraubförmig, adj.

Spīrĭros'tris, is, e. (Spīra; rostrum, a beak.) Ornithol. Having the top bent and spiral. Fr. anal. spirirostre, adj. Germ. syn. schraubschnabelig, adj.

Spīrĭros'trum, i, n. (Same as preceding.) Entomol. Term by Latreille for the proboscis, spirally rolled, of the Lepidoptera. Fr. anal. spiritrompe, f. Germ. syn. Schraubschnabel, m.

Spi'rit. Chem. This word was formerly applied to all volatile products of distillation, and these were distinguished into acid, alkaline, and inflammable or ardent spirit; but it is now properly confined to alcohol. Pharm. Applied to preparations which are formed by means of alcohol, as the spirit of nitrous ether, etc. Spīrĭtus, ûs, m. See Spiritus.

Spi'rit of Salt. Chem. Common name for the Acidum muriaticum, or hydrochloric acid. Spīrĭtus Sălis.

Spi'rit of Wine, Weaker. Pharm. Name for proof spirit, half the strength of rectified spirit.

Spīrĭtuōsus, a, um. (Spīrĭtus, spirit; terminal -ōsus.) Chem. Having or full of spirit; applied to every liquid that is chiefly composed of alcohol, or which contains it: spi'rituous. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. anal. spiritueux, adj. Germ. syn. geistig, adj.

Spīrĭtus, ûs, m. (Spīro, to breathe; because as the breath is the life of a being, it was also applied to the essence, or concentrated qualities of a substance.) Med., Pharm. See Spirit. Physiol. The air received and discharged by the action of the lungs. See Halitus. Also the soul. See Anima. Fr. syn. esprit, m. Germ. syn. Geist, m.

Spīrĭtus Æ'thĕris Ni'trici. M. Med. The pharmacopœial name (E.) for nitric ether with four volumes of rectified spirit; density ·847.

Spīrĭtus Æ'theris Sulphŭ'rĭci. M. Med. The pharmacopœial name (E.) for sulphuric ether with alcohol; density ·809.

Spīrĭtus Gal'lĭcus. French spirit; a name for brandy.

Spīrĭtus Rectĭfĭcātus. M. Med. The pharmacopœial name (L E.D.) for dilute alcohol, sp. gr. ·838, or under: rectified spirit.

Spīrĭtus Rec'tor. Chem. Name given by Boerhaave, etc., to a very attenuated principle in which the smell of odorant bodies resides; it is what is now called Aroma.

Spīrĭtus Vĭni Gal'lĭci. M. Med. The pharmacopœial name (L.E. and U.S.A.) for brandy, or spirit distilled from French wine.

Spīrĭval'vis, is, e. (Spīra; valva, a valve.) Conchol. Applied to a shell the body of which ends in an oblique roll from left to right or from right to left, and from bottom to top. Fr. anal. spirivalve, adj. Germ. syn. schraubkläppig, adj.

Spīrobrăchiŏ'phŏrus, a, um. (Σπεῖρα, a spire; βράχιον, an arm; φέρω, to bear.) Zoöl. Applied by Gray to a Class (Spirobrachiophora, nom. pl. n.) of the Mollusca Acephala, corresponding to the Brachiopoda of Cuvier: spirobrachio'phorous. Fr. anal. spirobrachiophore, adj.

Spirocolon. See Spyrocolon.

Spi'roid Canal. Anat. Name given by Chaussier to the Aqueductus Fallopii. Canālis spīroīdes.

Spīroīdēs, adj. (Spīra, a turning; terminal -īdēs.) Resembling a screw: spi'roid. See Diss. div. i. s. i. Fr. anal. spiroïde, adj. Germ. syn. schraubähnlich, adj.

Spīrŏlŏ'beus, a, um. (Σπεῖρα, a spire; λόβος, a lobe.) Bot. Applied by de Candolle to a tribe (Spirolobeæ, nom. pl. f.) of the Cruciferæ, having cotyledons spirally rolled up. Fr. anal. spirolobé, adj. Germ. syn. gewundenlappig, adj.

Spīro'meter. (Spīro, to breathe; μέτρον, a measure.) Physiol. Name of an instrument for ascertaining the quantity of air exhaled from the lungs, according to the capacity of the chest. Spīrŏ'mĕtrum, i, n. Fr. anal. spiromètre, m.

Spiro'metry. (Spīro, to breathe; μετρέω, to measure.) Med. Term for the system, or means of ascertaining the quantity of air employed in respiration, etc., formerly termed Pulmometry. Spīrŏmē'tria, æ, f. Fr. and Germ. anal. spirométrie, f.

Spīror'bis, is, e. (Spīra; orbis, a circle.) Conchol. Applied to a shell nearly discoid, the spire of which is nearly flattened, as the Delphinella spirorbis. Fr. anal. spirorbe, adj. Germ. syn. gewundenkerkelig, adj.

Spīrostўlis, is, e. (Σπεῖρα, a spire; στύλος, a pillar.) Bot. Having the style twisted spirally, as in the Loranthus spirostylis. Fr. anal. spirostyle, adj. Germ. syn. schraubgriffelig, adj.

Spīrŭlāceus, a, um. Conchol., Zoöl. Applied by Blainville to a Family (Spirulacea, nom. pl. n.) of univalve shells; by Menke to a Family of the Cephalopoda Siphonifera, having the Spirula for their type. Fr. anal. spirulacé, adj.

Spīrŭlæ'us, a, um. (Spīra.) Zoöl. That which is spirally convoluted, as the Serpula spirulæa. Applied by Orbigny and Eichwald to a Family (Spirulæa, nom. pl. n.) of the Mollusca Cephalopoda, having the Spirula for their type. Fr. anal. spirulé, adj. Germ. syn. schraubig, adj.

Spīrŭlītes, m. pl. Zoöl. Applied by Latreille to a group of the Polycyclica, having the Spirula for their type. Fr. anal. spirulites, m. pl.

Spīrūrus, a, um. (Σπεῖρα, a spire; οὐρά, a tail.) Ornithol. Having the feathers of the tail convoluted spirally towards the tip, as the Neops spirurus. Fr. anal. spirure, adj. Germ. syn. gewundenschwanzig, adj.

Spissāmen'tum, i, n. (Spisso, to thicken.) Pharm. Term for a substance introduced into oils and ointments to thicken them. Fr. anal. spissament, m. Germ. syn. Dickmacher, m.

Spissātus, a, um. (Spisso, to thicken.) Pharm. Thickened: spis'sated. See Inspissated.

Spissĭcor'nis, is, e. (Spissus, thickened; cornu, a horn.) Entomol. Having the horns, or antennæ thickened, as the Miris spissicornis. Fr. anal. spissicorne, adj. Germ. syn. dichthörnig, adj.

Spissĭros'tris, is, e. (Spissus, thickened; rostrum, a beak.) Entomol. Having a thick beak, as the Empis spissirostris. Fr. anal. spissirostre, adj. Germ. syn. dichtschnabelig, adj.

Spissĭtūdo, ĭnis, f. (Spisso, to thicken.) Med., Physiol. Term for a thickening, or density; applied to this state of the humours: spis'situde. Fr. syn. épaississement, m. Germ. syn. Dichtigkeit, f.; Verdichtung, f.

Spit'ting. (Sax. Spetan, to evacuate spittle.) Term for the discharge of saliva, or spittle from the mouth. Spuātio, ōnis, f. See Expuition.

Spit'ting of Blood. Med., Pathol. Common term for the disease Hæmoptysis.

Spittle. (Sax. Spatl.) Common name for the saliva, or moisture of the mouth. See Ptyalum, Saliva, and Sputum.

Spi'za, æ, f. (Σπίζα.) Ornithol. Term applied by J. A. Ritgen to a Family (Spizæ, nom. pl.) composed of the genus Fringilla. Fr. anal. spize, m.

Splachnoïdeus, a, um. Bot. Applied by Bridel, Furnrohr and Arnott to a tribe (Splanchnoideæ, nom. pl. f., Splanchnoidei, nom. pl. m.) of the Musci, having the Splachnum for their type. Fr. anal. splanchnoïdé, adj.

Splanchnectŏ'pia, æ, f. (Σπλάγχνον, an entrail, or viscus; ἔκτοπος, away from a place.) Anat. Term for an anomalous situation of the viscera, as in prolapsus, hernia, etc. Fr. and Germ. anal. splanchnectopie, f.

Splanchnemphra'xis, is, or cos, f. (Σπλάγχνον, an entrail, or viscus; ἔμφραξις, a stoppage.) Med., Pathol. Term for an overloading and obstruction of the bowels or viscera, especially of their vessels. Fr. anal. splanchnemphraxie, f. Germ. syn. eine Ueberfüllung und Verstopfung der Eingeweide, bes. ihrer Gefässe.

Splanchneurys'ma, ătis, n. (Σπλάγχνον, an entrail, or viscus; εὐρύς, wide.) Med., Pathol. Term for a morbid distension and enlargement of the bowels. Fr. anal. splanchneurysme, m. Germ. syn. eine krankhafte Ausdehnung und Erweiterung der Eingeweide.

Stercora'ceous. (Stercus, ordure, or dung.) Of the nature or quality of ordure. Med. Applied to vomiting when the feces or alvine excrements are found mingled with the egesta. Ster'cŏrăceus, a, um. See Copremesis, Copriemetos, Merdivomus. Fr. anal. stercoracé, adj. Germ. syn. kothig, adj.

Stercŏrālis, is, e. } (Stercus, excrement.)
Stercŏrārius, a, um. } Bot. Applied to plants that grow upon excrements or dung, as the Sporotrichum stercorarium. Entomol. Applied to insects that live in dung, as the Geotrupes stercorarius: ster'coral: ster'corary. Med., Surg. Pathol. Of or belonging to excrements; applied to an anal fistula. Fr. anal. stercoraire, adj. Germ. syn. kothig, adj.

Stercŭ'lia, æ, f. A Linn. genus of plants, Cl. Monadelphia; Ord. Polyandria. Fr. anal. sterculie, f.

Stercŭ'lia U'rens. The systematic name of the plant which affords the substance Bassora gum.

Stercŭliăceus, a, um. } Bot. Applied by Kunth
Stercŭlie'us, a, um. } to a tribe (Sterculiaceæ, nom. pl. f.), also one admitted by de Candolle (Sterculieæ, nom. pl. f.) of the Byttneriaceæ, having the Sterculia for their type, and of which first Ventenat has made a Family, called Hermannieæ by Jussieu. Fr. anal. sterculiacé, adj.

Stercumezeff. Chem. Old term for Lithargyrum.

Ster'cus, ŏris, n. Physiol. Ordure; dung; alvine excrement, or feces. See Copros, Merda, Rebona, Zebeb. Fr. syn. excrément, m. Germ. syn. Auswurf, m.

Stĕ'reŏcĕrātus, a, um. (Στερεὸς, solid; κέρας, horn.) Entomol. Applied by Duméril to a Family (Stercocerata, nom. pl. n.) of the Coleoptera, the antennæ of which form a round mass, which appears solid because of the closeness of the articulations. See Solidicornis. Fr. anal. stéréocère, adj.

Stĕ'reŏcys'tis, ĭdis, f. (Στερεὸς, solid; κύστις, a bag.) Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for a hard cystic tumour: a ste'reocyst. Fr. and Germ. anal. stéréocyste, m.

Stĕ'reŏdȳnă'mĭca, æ, f. (Στερεὸς, solid; δύναμις, power.) Nat. Philos. Term for a branch of physics which explains the laws of the movement of solid bodies: ste'reodyna'mics. Fr. anal. stéréodynamique, f.

Stĕ'reŏgōnātus, a, um. (Στερεὸς, solid; γωνία, an angle.) Bot. Applied by Lyngbye to a section (Stereogonata, nom. pl. n.) of the Hydrophyta Marina, the frond of which, articulated and round, is solid or full. Fr. anal. stéréogoné, adj.

Stĕ'reŏlĭthotryp'ter, ēris, m. (Στερεὸς, solid; λίθοτρυπτήρ.) Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for a more solidly constructed lithotriptor. Fr. anal. stéréolithotryptère, m. Germ. syn. ein fester Lithotrypter.

Stĕ'reŏmĕ'tricus, a, um. (Στερεομετρία; terminal -ĭcus.) Mineral. Of or belonging to stereometry: stereome'trical. Leonhard terms stereometrical characters those drawn from the structure alone of the body. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 6. Fr. anal. stéréométrique, adj.

Stereo'metry. (Στερεὸς, solid: μετρέω, to measure.) Geom. Term for that branch of science by which solid bodies and their solid contents are measured. Stĕ'reŏmĕ'tria, æ, f. Fr. and Germ. anal. stereometrie, f.

Stĕ'reŏphyl'lus, a, um. (Στερεὸς, solid; φύλλον, a leaf.) Bot. Having solid or firm leaves, as the Centaurea stereophylla: stereophyl'lous. Fr. anal. stéréophylle, adj.

Stĕre'ŏpus, a, um. (Στερεὸς, solid; πούς, a foot.) Bot. Having the foot or stipes full and hard, as the Agaricus stereopus. Fr. anal. stéréope, adj.

Ste'reoscope. (Στερεὸς, hard, or solid; σκοπέω, to see.) Med. Name given to an instrument invented by Mr. Wheatstone, consisting of two mirrors with their backs inclined to each other at an angle of 90 degrees, near the faces of which two monocular pictures are so disposed that the reflected images are seen by the two eyes, each looking into one of the mirrors, in the same place. Modifications of this instrument are highly esteemed for the imposing reality of their representations. Fr. anal. stéréoscope, m. Germ. anal. Stereoskop, n.

Stĕ'reostă'tĭca, æ, f. (Στερεὸς, solid; ἵστημι, to stand.) Nat. Philos. That part of physics which treats of the equilibrium of solid bodies: stereosta'tics. Fr. anal. stéréostatique, f.

Stĕreŏthă'lămus, a, um. (Στερεὸς, solid; θάλαμος, a bed.) Bot. Applied to lichens the expansions of which, up-rising or shrubby, are solid and full. Fr. anal. stéréothalame, adj.

Stĕ'rētŏdontĭcus. The same as Odontostereticus.

Stĕrētoxȳgĕ'nĭcus. The same as Oxygeniostercticus.

Stĕreusīna, æ, f. (Στερεὸς, solid; οὐσία, essence.) Chem. Term by Bizio and Boullay, who wrote erroneously sereusina, for the concrete and crystalline part of volatile Sūbŭlĭcor'nis, is, e. (Sūbŭla, an awl; cornu, a horn.) Entomol. Having awl-shaped horns; applied to a Family (Subulicornes, nom. pl. f.) of the Neuroptera, in which the antennæ are awl-shaped: subulicor'nate. Fr. anal. subulicorne, adj. Germ. syn. pfriemenhörnig, adj.

Sūbŭlĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Sūbŭla, an awl; fĕro, to bear.) Bot. Bearing awls, as the Echinocactus subuliferus, the aculei of which are nearly an inch long: subuli'ferous. Fr. anal. subulifère, adj. Germ. syn. pfriementragend, part. adj.

Sūbŭlĭfō'lius, a, um. (Sūbŭla, an awl; fŏlium, a leaf.) Bot. Having subulate leaves, as the Lycopodium subulifolium: subulifo'lious. Fr. anal. subulifolié, adj. Germ. syn. pfriemblättrig, adj.

Sūbŭlĭfor'mis, is, e. (Sūbŭla, an awl; forma, likeness.) The same as Subulatus.

Sūbŭlĭpal'pus, a, um. (Sūbŭla, an awl; palpus.) Entomol. Applied by Cuvier, Latreille and Eichwald to a section (Subulipalpi, nom. pl. m.) of the Carabæi, having the external palpi subulated: subulipal'pous. Fr. anal. subulipalpe, adj. Germ. syn. pfriemfressspitzig, adj.

Sūbŭlīpes, pĕdis, adj. (Sūbŭla, an awl; pes, a foot.) Bot. Having the foot or stipes long and slender, as the Peziza subulipes: su'bulipede. Fr. anal. subulipède, adj. Germ. syn. pfriemfüssig, adj.

Sūbŭlĭrostrātus, a, um. (Same as in Subulirostris.) Ornithol. Applied by Duméril and Blainville to a Family (Subulirostrati, nom. pl. m.) of the Passeres, having the beak long and thin. Fr. anal. subulirostré, adj. Germ. syn. pfriemschnabelig, adj.

Sūbŭlĭros'tris, is, e. (Sūbŭla, an awl; rostrum, a beak.) Entomol. Having the beak or proboscis slender as a needle, as the Apion subulirostre: su'buliro'strate. Fr. anal. subulirostre, adj. Germ. syn. pfriemschnabelig, adj.

Subver'sio, ōnis, f. (Subverto, to turn upside down.) Med., Pathol. A turning upside down, as it were; applied to the stomach to signify nausea: a subver'sion. Fr. anal. subversion, f. Germ. syn. Umkehrung, f.

Subver'tebra, æ, f. (Pref. Sub-; vertebra.) Anat. Term for the Os sacrum, as being immediately under the vertebral column. Fr. anal. subvertèbre, f. Germ. syn. Heiligenbein, n.

Sub'vŏla. Anat. Term for the space between the forefinger and little finger; also the adductor muscle of the little finger.

Succāgo, ĭnis, f. Bot. A term for the rob of any fruit; inspissated juice. Fr. anal. succage, f. Germ. syn. der eingedickte Saft.

Succēdāneum. (Succēdo, to come in place of.) Med. Coming in place of another; a substitute; applied to medicines, etc. Neuter of Succēdāneus, a, um. See Antiballomenus. Fr. syn. ce qui sert à remplacer une autre chose. Germ. syn. nachfolgend, part. adj.

Succentūriātus, a, um. (Succentūrio, to recruit.) Anat. Old term used by Casserius, as an epithet of the renal glands, or glandulæ succenturiatæ. Fr. anal. succenturié, adj.

Succes'sive Accidents. Surg. Another name for what are usually called secondary symptoms. See Syphilis.

Suc'ci Scorbŭ'tici. Bot., Med. Scorbutic juice, a name for that of the English scurvy grass, etc.

Suc'cĭdus. The same as Succosus.

Suc'cinate. (Succĭnĭcum acĭdum, Succinic acid; terminal -ate.) Chem. Term for a combination of succinic acid with a salifiable base. Succīnas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. succinate, m. Germ. syn. bernsteinsauer Salz.

Succĭ'neus, a, um. (Succĭnum, amber.) Applied to a body having the yellow colour of amber. Fr. anal. succiné, adj.

Succin'gens Membrāna. (Succingo, to beset, or fence about.) Anat. An old term for the diaphragm.

Succi'nic. (Succĭnum, amber; terminal -ic.) Chem. Of or belonging to amber; applied to an acid obtained by subliming amber. Succĭ'nĭcus, a, um. Fr. anal. succinique, adj. Germ. syn. bernsteinsauer, adj.

Succĭnīma, æ, f. Chem. Term by Guibourt for the resin of Succinum, or amber. Fr. succinime, f.

Suc'cĭnum, i, n. (Succus, juice; because formerly supposed to exude from a tree.) M. Med. The pharmacopœial name (U.S.A) for the substance amber; also called Electrum. See Amber. Fr. anal. succin, m. Germ. syn. Bernstein, m.

Suc'cĭnum Cinĕ'reum. } Names for Amber-
Suc'cĭnum Grīseum. } grease, or Ambergris.

Succīsa, æ, f. (Succīdo, to cut; from its indented appearance, as if cut.) Bot. Trivial name for a species of the genus Scabiosa. See Scabiosa Succisa.

Succĭ'vŏrus, a, um. (Succus, juice; vŏro, to devour.) Zoöl. Applied by Robineau-Desvoidy to a section (Succivoræ, nom. pl. f.) of the Myodaria Malacosoma, the larvæ of which are fed on the juice of vegetables in a state of decomposition. Fr. anal. succivore, adj. Germ. syn. saftfressend, part. adj.

Suc'cory. Bot. Common name for the genus Chicorium.

Succōsus, a, um. (Succus, juice; terminal -ōsus.) Bot. Having or full of juice: suc'cous or suc'cose. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. anal. succeux, adj. Germ. syn. saftig, adj.; voll Saft.

Suc'cŭlens, tis, adj. } (Succus, juice.) Bot.
Succŭlen'tus, a, um. } Juicy; full of juice; rich; suc'culent; applied to fruits, pods, plants, leaves, etc.; also applied to an Order (Succulentæ, nom. pl. f.) of Linnæus's Fragments of a Natural Method, including such as have fleshy and succulent leaves. Fr. anal. succulent, adj. Germ. syn. saftig, adj.

Suc'cus, i, m. (Sūgo, to suck; because it may be extracted from fruits, etc., by suction in the mouth.) The juice of fruits, plants, roots, etc. See Juice. Fr. anal. suc. Germ. syn. Saft, m.

Suc'cus Cochleāriæ Compŏ'sĭtus. Pharm. Term for a warm aperient and diuretic medicine, exhibited in skin diseases of a scorbutic kind.

Succus Gastricus. Physiol. See Gastric Juice.

Suc'cus Hĕliotrŏ'pii. Bot., Chem. A term for the dye called Litmus, which is obtained from the Croton tinctorum and Roccella tinctorum, but was at first pretended, for sake of concealment, to be from the Heliotropium tricoccum, or turnsol.

Suc'cus In'dĭcus Pur'gans. Bot., M. Med. Indian purging juice; a name for gamboge.

Suc'cus Liquīrītiæ. Bot., M. Med. Liquorice juice, obtained from the root of the Glycyrrhiza glabra.

Succus'sion. (Succŭtior, to be jogged or shaken.) Med., Pathol. A term for giving the trunk one or more abrupt rapid shakes to produce the fluctuation of a liquid suspected to exist within the chest, and to ascertain its presence and quantity. Succus'sio, ōnis, f. Fr. anal. succussion, f. Germ. syn. Schutteln, n.

Su'cker. (Sūgo, to suck; because it draws or sucks moisture and nutriment from the earth.) Bot. See Stolo. Fr. anal. suceur, m. Germ. syn. Sauger, m.

Suctōrius, a, um. (Sūgo, to suck.) Entomol. Having the power of sucking; applied to an Order (Suctoria, nom. pl. n.) in which the mouth is composed of three pieces between two articulated laminæ which, when united, form a cylindrical proboscis. Ichthyol. Applied to a Family (Suctorii, nom. pl. m.) of the Chondropterygii, Branchiis Fixis, which fix themselves by suction to stones, etc. Fr. anal. suceur, adj.

Sūdāmen, ĭnis, n. (Sūdo, to sweat.) Med., Pathol. Term for a vesicle like a millet-seed, which appears in numbers, suddenly and unattended by fever, after great sweating from hard labour. See Desudatio, Hidroa. Germ. syn. Schweissblatterchen, n.

Suĭdæ, patron. nom. pl. m. (Sus, a hog, or swine; terminal -idæ.) Zoöl. Applied to a Family of animals, having the genus Sus for their type. See Diss. div. i. s. iii. Fr. anal. suides, m.

Suil'lus, a, um. (Sus, a swine.) Zoöl. Of or belonging to the hog, or swine. Fr. syn. porcin, adj. Germ. syn. vom Schweine kommend.

Sulcātus, a, um. (Sulco, to furrow.) Bot. Having deep lines lengthways; furrowed; grooved; striated; applied to seeds, stems, leaves, etc.: sul'cated. Fr. syn. sillonné, adj. Germ. syn. gefurcht, adj.

Sulcĭcol'lis, is, e. (Sulcus; collum, the neck.) Entomol. Having the neck or corselet furrowed or sulcated, as the Ceryton sulcicollis. Fr. anal. sulcicolle, adj. Germ. syn. rinnhalsig, adj.

Sul'cĭdens, tis, adj. (Sulcus; dens, a tooth.) Zoöl. Having the teeth grooved, as the cardinal tooth of the Unio sulcidens. Fr. anal. sulcidenté, adj. Germ. syn. rinnzähnig, adj.

Sulcĭfĕrus, a, um. (Sulcus; fĕro, to bear.) Zoöl. Bearing or having grooves or furrows, as the Gorgonia sulcifera: sulci'ferous. Fr. anal. sulcifère, adj. Germ. syn. rinntragend, part. adj.

Sulcĭfor'mis, is, e. (Sulcus; forma, likeness.) Conchol. Applied, in bivalve shells, to teeth having the form of simple grooves or furrows supplying the hinge, as in the Perna: sul'ciform. Fr. anal. sulciforme, adj. Germ. syn. rinnförmig, adj.

Sulcĭpen'nis, is, e. (Sulcus; penna, a wing.) Entomol. Having sulcated wings, as the Dytiscus sulcipennis: sulcipen'nate. Fr. anal. sulcipenne, adj. Ger. syn. rinngeflügelt, adj.

Sulcĭros'tris, is, e. (Sulcus; rostrum, a beak.) Ornithol. Having a sulcated beak, as the Icterus sulcirostris. Fr. anal. sulcirostre, adj. Germ. syn. rinnschnabelig, adj.

Sul'cŭlus, i, m. (Dim. Sulcus.) Term for a little groove or furrow. Anat. Applied to the groove or depression of the upper lip. Fr. anal. sulcule, m. Germ. syn. die kleine Furche; Grübchen, n.

Sul'cus, i, m. (Ὁλκός, from ἕλκω, to draw; as if formed by an instrument having been drawn along to some depth.) Anat., Bot. A groove, furrow, or trench. Fr. syn. sillon, m. Germ. syn. Furcht, f.; Rinne, f.

Sulfoleulea. See Sulpholeulus.

Sulphantimo'niate. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts resulting from the combination of antimonic sulphide with the sulphobases. Sulphantīmō'nias, ātis, f. Fr. anal. sulfantimoniate, m. Germ. syn. antimonschweflig Salz.

Sulphantimo'nite. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts resulting from the combination of antimonious sulphide with the sulphobases. Sulphantĭ'mŏnis, ītis, f. Fr. anal. sulfantimonite, m. Germ. syn. antimonichtschweflig Salz.

Sulpharse'niate. Chem. Applied to a genus of sulphosalts resulting from combination with sulphobases, of a degree of sulphuration of the arsenic, corresponding to arsenic acid under relation of the composition. Sulpharsĕ'nias, ātis, f. Fr. anal. sulfarséniate, m. Germ. syn. arsenickschweflig Salz.

Sulphar'senite. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts formed by combination with sulphobases of a degree of sulphuration of the arsenic, corresponding to arsenious acid in its composition. Sulphar'sĕnis, ītis, f. Fr. anal. sulfarsénite, m. Germ. syn. arsenichtschweflig Salz.

Sul'phate. (Sulphŭrĭcum acĭdum, Sulphuric acid; terminal -ate.) Chem. Term for a combination of sulphuric acid with a salifiable base. Sul'phas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. sulfate, m. Germ. syn. schwefelsauer Salz.

Sulphātus, a, um. Mineral. Applied to bases that are converted into salts by their combination with sulphuric acid: sul'phated. Fr. anal. sulfaté, adj.

Sulphau'rate. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts resulting from combination of auric acid with sulphobases. Sulphau'ras, ātis, f. Fr. anal. sulfaurate, m. Germ. syn. goldschweflig Salz.

Sulphhy'drate. Chem. Term for a genus of salts resulting from the combination of hydric sulphide with sulphobases. Sulphhy'dras, ātis, f. Fr. anal. sulfhydrate, m. Germ. syn. wasserstoffschweflig Salz.

Sul'phide. Chem. Term by Berzelius for those superior degrees of sulphuration of the electro-negative metals, the composition of which is proportional to that of metallic oxides, and which combine like acids with electro-positive sulphurets, of such kind and in such proportions that if the sulphur were exchanged for an equal number of atoms of oxygen, there would be obtained one of the oxysalts which the same radicals produce in the oxydated state. Sul'phis, ĭdis, f. Fr. anal. sulfide, m.

Sulphi'ridate. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts resulting from the combination of the iridic sulphide with sulphobases. Sulphīrĭdas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. sulfiridate, m.

Sul'phite. (Sulphŭrōsum acĭdum, Sulphurous acid; terminal -ite.) Chem. Term for a combination of sulphurous acid with a salifiable base. Sul'phis, ītis, f. Fr. anal. sulfite, m. Germ. syn. Schwefligsauer Salz.

Sul'pho-. Chem. This word used as a prefix, or ingredient in the construction of compound terms, means that sulphuric acid is employed in preparing the substance denoted, as Sulpho-benzoic, etc. Fr. anal. sulfo-.

Sulphoa'dipate. Chem. Term for a genus of salts resulting from the combination of sulphoadipic acid with the salifiable bases. Sulphoa'dĭpas, ātis, f. Germ. syn. fettschwefelsauer Salz.

Sulphoadĭ'pĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Chevreuil to an acid produced by dissolving stearin or olein in concentrated sulphuric acid. Fr. anal. sulphoadipique, adj. Germ. syn. fettschwefelsauer, adj.

Sulphoarsĕniūrētum, i, n. Chem. Term by Beudant for a combination of a sulphuret with an arseniuret: sulphoarse'niuret. Fr. anal. sulfoarséniure, m.

Sul'phobase. Chem. Term by Berzelius for the degrees of sulphuration of electro-positive metals which correspond to the oxybases; i. e. those which result from the mutual decomposition of the oxybase and of hydric sulphide gas, and which play the part of bases in the sulphosalts. Sulphŏ'bāsis, is, or eos, f. Fr. anal. sulfobase, m.

Sulphōbă'sĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to haloid salts that are combined with a sulphobase: sulphoba'sic. Fr. anal. sulfobasique, adj.

Sulphobo'rate. Chem. Term for a genus of salts resulting from the combination of boric sulphide with the sulphobases. Sulphobŏras, ātis, f. Fr. anal. sulfoborate, m.

Sulphocar'bonate. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts resulting from combination of carbonic sulphide with the sulphobases. Sulphŏcarbōnas, ātis, f. See Note Carbon. Fr. anal. sulfocarbonate, m. Germ. syn. kohlenschweflig Salz.

Sulphŏcarbūrētum, i, n. Chem. Term for a combination of the carburet of sulphur, or carbonic sulphide, with a simple body: a sul'phocar'buret. Fr. anal. sulfocarbure, m.

Sulphochlōrūrētum, i, n. Chem. Term for a combination of a chloruret with a sulphobase: a sulphochlo'ruret. Fr. anal. sulfochlorure, m.

Sulphochro'mate. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts resulting from the combination of the chromic sulphide with the sulphobases. Sulphochrōmas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. sulfochromate, m. Germ. syn. chromschweflig Salz.

Sulphŏchya'zĭcus, a, um. (Pref. Sulpho-; C. Hy. Az., the initials of carbon, hydrogen, and azote; terminal -ic.) Chem. An epithet sometimes applied to an acid instead of Sulphocyanicus: sulphochya'zic. Fr. anal. sulfochyazique, adj.

Sulphocy'anate. Chem. Term by Berzelius for a sulphosalt produced by hypersulphocyanogen, considered as a cyanic sulphide. Sulphŏcy'ănas, ātis, f. Germ. syn. cyanschweflig Salz.

Sulphocyanhy'drate. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts resulting from the combination of cyanhydric sulphide with the sulphobases. Sulphŏcyănhy'dras, ātis, f. Germ. syn. cyanwasserstoffschweflig Salz.

Sulphŏcy'ănis, ĭdis, f. Chem. Term for a sulphocyanuret which plays the part of an acid or sulphide: a sulphocy'anide. Fr. anal. sulfocyanide, m.

Sulphŏcyă'nĭcus, a, um. Chem. Liebig terms a body which he regards as a combination of sulphocyanogen and carburet of hydrogen, Æther sulphocyanicus: sulphocya'nic. Fr. anal. sulfocyanique, adj.

Sulphŏcy'ănis, -ītis, f. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts produced by sulphocyanogen, considered as a cyanous sulphide: a sulphocy'anite. Fr. anal. sulfocyanite, m.

Sulphŏcy'ănum, i, n. Chem. Term for a compound halogenous body resulting from the combination of cyanogen with sulphur. Fr. syn. sulfocyanogène, m. Germ. syn. Schwefelcyan, m.

Sulphŏcyănūrētum, i, n. Chem. Term for a combination of sulphocyanogen with a metal: a sulphocya'nuret. Fr. anal. sulfocyanure, m. Germ. syn. Schwefelcyanmetall, n.

Sulphŏhy'drĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied, according to Brugnatelli, to a gaz phosphure sulfo-hydrique, regarded as a combination of phosphorus with sulphur and hydrogen, but which is rather supposed to be but a simple mixture of hydric sulphide gas and trihydric phosphuret gas; sulpho-hy'dric. Fr. anal. sulfohydrique, adj.

Sulphŏhypar'sĕnis, ītis, f. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts resulting from the combination of hyparsenious sulphide with sulphosalts: a sul'phohypar'senite. Fr. anal. sulfohyparsénite, m. Germ. syn. unterarsenichtschweflig Salz.

Sulphoïndi'gotate. Chem. Term for a combination of sulphoïndigotic acid with a salifiable base. Sulphoïndi'gŏtas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. sulfoindigotate, m.

Sulphoïndĭgŏ'tĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to an acid resulting from the combination of the blue of soluble indigo with sulphuric acid. Fr. anal. sulfoïndigotique, adj.

Sulphoïŏdūrētum, i, n. Chem. Term for a compound resulting from the combination of a sulphuret with an ioduret: a sulphoio'duret. Fr. anal. sulfoïodure, m.

Sulphŏleŭ'leus, a, um. (Sulphur; oleum, oil.) Chem. Applied by Béral to combinations (Sulpholeulea, nom. pl. n.) of sulphur with etherial oils. Should be Sulphuroleus. Fr. anal. sulfoleule, adj. Germ. syn. schwefelölig, adj.

Sulphomolyb'date. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts resulting from a combination of molybdic sulphide and a salifiable base. Sulphŏmölyb'das, ātis, f. Fr. anal. sulfomolybdate, m. Germ. syn. molybdänschweflig Salz.

Sulphŏnaph'thalate. Chem. Term for a genus of salts produced by the combination of sulphonaphthalic acid with a salifiable base. Sulphŏnaph'thălas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. sulfonaphthalate, m.

Sulphŏnaphthă'lĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to an acid which Faraday discovered in heating naphtalin with anhydrous sulphuric acid: sulphonaphtha'lic. Fr. anal. sulfonaphthalique, adj.

Sulphophos'phate. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts resulting from the combination of phosphoric sulphide with a sulphobase. Sulphophos'phas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. sulfophosphate, m. Germ. syn. phosphorschweflig Salz.

Sulphophos'phite. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts resulting from the combination of phosphorous sulphide with a sulphobase. Sulphophos'phis, ītis, f. Fr. anal. sulfophosphite, m. Germ. syn. phosphorichtschwefelig Salz.

Sulphoplati'nate. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts resulting from the combination of platinic sulphide with a sulphobase. Sulphoplātīnas, ātis, f.

Sul'pho-salts. Chem. A term for those compounds, both ingredients or elements of which contain Sulphur, forming with one element an acid, and with the other a salifiable base. Pl. of Sulphōsal, ālis, m. Fr. anal. sulfosel, m.

Sulphosele'nite. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts resulting from the combination of selenic sulphide with a salifiable base. Sulphŏsēlēnis, ītis, f. Fr. anal. sulfosélénite, m. Germ. syn. selenichtschwefelig Salz.

Sulphosi'licate. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts resulting from the combination of silicic sulphide with a salifiable base. Sulphŏsĭ'lĭcas, ātis, f. Germ. syn. kieselschwefelig Salz.

Sulphosina'pate. Chem. Term for a genus of salts resulting from the combination of sulphosinapic acid with a salifiable base. Sulphŏsĭnāpas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. sulfosinapate, m. Germ. syn. senfsauer Salz.

Sulphŏsĭnāpĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied to an acid found in the unctuous oil of the Sinapis alba by Henry and Garot, which they have since acknowledged does not really exist: sulphosina'pic. Fr. anal. sulfosinapique, adj. Germ. syn. senfsauer, adj.

Sulphŏsĭnāpīnus, a, um. (Sulphur; sĭnāpi, mustard.) M. Med., Pharm. Of or belonging to sulphur and mustard. Fr. anal. sulfosinapin, adj. Germ. syn. Schwefel und Senf betreffend.

Sulphosina'pisin'. Chem. Name by Henry and Garot for the substance which Berzelius called Sinapin, which is crystalline, extracted from black and white mustard, and into the composition of which sulphur enters. Sulphŏsĭnāpisīna, æ, f. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 4. Fr. anal. sulfosinapisine, f.

Sulphos'miate. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts resulting from the combination of osmic sulphide with a salifiable base. Sulphos'mias, ātis, f. Fr. anal. sulfosmiate, m. Germ. syn. osmiumschwefelig Salz.

Sulphostan'nate. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts resulting from the combination of stannic sulfide with a sulphobase. Sulphostan'nas, ātis, f.

Sulphosti'biate. } Chem. The same as Sulph-
Sulphosti'biite. } antimoniate, -ite.

Sulphotan'talate. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts resulting from the combination of tantalic sulphide with a sulphobase. Sulphŏtan'tālas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. sulfotantalate, m. Germ. syn. tantalschwefelig Salz.

Sulphotellu'rate. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts resulting from the combination of telluric sulphide with a sulphobase. Sulphŏtellūras, ātis, f. Fr. anal. sulfotellurate, m. Germ. syn. tellurschwefelig Salz.

Sulphotita'nate. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts resulting from the combination of titanic sulphide with a sulphobase. Sulphŏtītānas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. sulfotitanate, m. Germ. anal. titanschwefelig Salz.

Sulphotung'state. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts resulting from the combination of tungstic sulphide with a sulphobase. Sulphŏtung'stas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. sulfotungstate, m. Germ. syn. wolframschwefelig Salz.

Sulphova'nadate. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts resulting from the combination of vanadic sulphide with a sulphobase. Sulphŏva'nādas, ātis, f. Germ. syn. sulfovanadate, f.

Sulphova'nadite. Chem. Term for a genus of sulphosalts resulting from the combination of vanadous sulphide with a sulphobase. Sulphŏva'nādis, ītis, f. Fr. anal. sulfovanadite, m.

Sulphovi'nate. Chem. Term for a genus of salts produced from the combination of sulphovinic acid with a salifiable base. Sulphŏvīnas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. sulfovinate, m. Germ. syn. weinschwefligsauer Salz.

Sulphŏvīnĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Vogel to an acid which had already been noticed by Dabit, and which Gay-Lussac has stated to be hyposulphuric acid united to an organic matter which accompanies it in its combinations with the bases: sulphovi'nic. Fr. anal. sulfovinique, adj. Germ. syn. weinschwefelsauer, adj.

Sulphowolfra'miate. Chem. The same as Sulphotungstate.

Sul'phur, ŭris, n. (Sal, or Sul, a salt; πῦρ, fire; from its combustible nature.) Chem. Brimstone; the only simple combustible substance found in nature pure and in abundance. M. Med. The pharmacopœial name (L. E. D. and U.S.A.) for sublimed sulphur. See Abric, Akibot, Alcebris Vivum, Alchabric, Alchur, Alcubrith, Aluzar, Algibic, Alkibric, Alneric, Altaris, Aneric, Anerit, Aphebric, Apyron, Apyrothium, Aquila, Chibur, Foliata Terra, Fumus Citrinus, Gabricus, Kaprili, Kibrith, Maritus, Quetricum, Quebrith, Scorith, Solsequium, Tifatum, Tin. Fr. anal. soufre, m. Germ. syn. Schwefel, m.

Sulphur, Flowers of. See Flowers of Sulphur.

Sulphur Kibric. Old term the same as Kibric philosophorum.

Sul'phur Lōtum. Chem. Washed sulphur, obtained by pouring boiling water on sublimed sulphur, so that all acid which may be present is washed away. M. Med. The pharmacopœial name (U.S.A.) for sublimed sulphur thoroughly washed with water.

Sulphur, Milk of. See Milk of Sulphur.

Sulphur, White. See Almagara.

Sulphŭrātio, ōnis, f. Chem. Term for the state of a simple substance which is combined with sulphur: sulphura'tion. Fr. anal. sulfuration, f.

Sulphŭrātus, a, um. Chem. Applied to a simple body that is combined with sulphur, as sulphurated hydrogen gas: sul-phurated. Mineral. Applied to a metal that is mineralized by sulphur, as the Plumbum sulphuratum. Fr. anal. sulfuré, Germ. syn, geschwefelt, adj.

Sulphu'reous. (Sulphur.) Chem., Nat. Hist. Of or belonging to sulphur; resembling, or of a bright yellow colour like sulphur. Sulphū'reus, a, um. Fr. anal. soufré, adj. Germ. syn. geschwefelt, adj.; schwefelgelb, adj.

Sul'phuret. (Sulphur; terminal -ūret.) Chem. Term for a combination of sulphur with an alkali, earth, or metal. Sulphūrētum, i, n. Fr. anal. sulfure, m.

Sulphu'ric. (Sulphur; terminal -ic.) Chem. Of or belonging to sulphur; applied to an acid obtained from sulphur, and commonly termed vitriol, acid of vitriol, oil of vitriol, or vitriolic acid. Sulphū'rĭcus, a, um. Fr. anal. sulfurique, adj. Germ. syn. Schwefelsauer, adj.

Sulphŭ'ridæ, patron. m. pl. Mineral. Term by C. Pauquy for a Family of ponderable bodies having Sulphur for their type; by Beudant to a Family of minerals having the odour of sulphur, either immediately or by combustion, or that of sulphurated hydrogen gas when, after having been treated with the carbonate of potash and carbon, nitric acid is made to act upon the residue. Fr. anal. sulfurides, m. pl.

Sulphŭrĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Sulphur; fĕro, to bear.) Mineral. Applied to a globulous quartz agate, the nucleus of which is composed of sulphur and argil: sulphuri'ferous. Fr. anal. sulfurifère, adj. Germ. syn. schwefeltragend, part. adj.

Sulphŭ'rĭpes, pĕdis, adj. (Sulphur; pes, a foot.) Entomol. Having feet of a sulphur-colour; sulphu'ripede. Fr. anal. sulfuripède, adj. Germ. syn. schwefelfüssig, adj.

Sul'phuroprus'sic. Chem. The same as Sulpho-Cyanic.

Sul'phurous. (Sulphur, and the terminal -ous.) Chem. Of or belonging to sulphur; applied to an acid obtained from sulphur, but having less oxygen in its composition than the sulphuric acid. Sulphŭrōsus, a, um. Fr. anal. sulphureux, adj. Germ. syn. schweflig, adj.

Sulphurwort. Bot. A common name for the Peucedanum officinale, or hog's-fennel.

Suma. Chem. Old term for Tartar. Ruland.

Su'mach. (Arab. Summák.) M. Med. The common name for the plant Rhus toxicodendron, or poison-oak, and Rhus glabrum. Fr. anal. sumac, m. Germ. anal. Sumach, m.

Sumach, Elm-leaved. Bot. Common name for the Rhus coriaria.

Sumachīneus, a, um. (Sumach.) Bot. Applied to a tribe (Sumachineæ, nom. pl. f.) established by de Candolle in the Terebinthaceæ, having the Rhus for their type. Fr. anal. sumachiné, adj.

Sumbul. Bot. Name of a root which is said to be employed with great success in Germany and Russia, against cholera; the specimens lately brought to this country resemble the circular pieces of calumba, except that they are considerably larger, of a more spongy texture, and like huge bungs; they are of a yellowish grey, whitish in the centre, with a thin pellicular bark surrounding them; the root has a very strong odour, closely approaching that of musk; used (so far as yet tried) as antispasmodic, against epilepsy.

Sūmen, ĭnis, n. (As if Sūgĭmen, from sūgo, to suck; because anciently applied as a term for the female breast.) Anat. Old name for the lower part of the belly. Germ. syn. Unterleib, m.

Summer-fruits. Med. See Fructus Horæi.

Sun-burning. See Aestates.

Sŭpel'lex, ectĭlis, f. (Sŭper, beyond; lĕgo, to gather.) Term for household stuff, or furniture. Fr. anal. supellectile, f. Germ. syn. Hausgeräthschaft, f.

Sŭpel'lex Anătŏ'mĭca. Med. Term for an anatomical preparation, or materials; also an anatomical museum. Fr. syn. préparation anatomique. Germ. syn. die anatomische Geräthschaft.

Sŭpellec'tĭlis Dĭŏ'gĕnis. Anat. The same as Poculum Diogenis.

Sŭper-. (Ὑπὲρ, above.) Above, or upon. Chem., Pharm. This word, occurring in compound terms, denotes an excess of one of the components of a saline substance; as Supersulphate, in which the acid is in excess. Med. It means excess, or too great an effect produced, as Super-purgation, etc. Physiol. It here signifies upon, or added to, as Super-fetation. Of mere compounds not entered below, the meaning may be easily ascertained by finding the ordinary term, which is modified or heightened by this prefix, in its proper place. Fr. anal. super-. Germ. syn. Ueber-.

Sŭperaurōsus, a, um. (Sŭper-; aurōsus, golden.) Chem. Applied by Berzelius to an oxide of gold, of the second degree of oxidation of that metal, but the existence of which, though probable, is not demonstrated, and which plays the part of a weak acid, for example, with the stannous oxide in the purple of Cassius. Fr. anal. susaureux, adj.

Sŭperaxillāris, is, e. (Sŭper; axillāris, pertaining to the axilla.) Bot. Applied by Mirbel to spines and flowers when they are produced higher than the angle formed by the leaves and the stem, or branch: superaxil'lary. Fr. anal. superaxillaire, adj.

Sŭperbă'sĭcus, a, um. (Sŭper-; bāsĭcus, pertaining to a base.) Chem. Applied to a basic salt of the highest degree, as the Chloruretum plumbicum superbasicum: superba'sic. Fr. anal. surbasique, adj. Germ. syn. ueberbasisch, adj.

Sŭper'bus, a, um. (Sŭper, above, or superior.) Haughty; proud. Anat. Applied to the Rectus superior oculi muscle, from its being exerted in a haughty expression of the countenance. Fr. anal. superbe, adj. Germ. syn. hoffartig, adj.

Sŭperchrōmĭcus, a, um. Chem. Berzelius termed the second degree of oxidation of chrome Oxydum superchromicum, which Maus thought to be a chromic chromate or a combination of chromic acid and oxide; the second degree of sulphuration of that metal, Sulphis superchromica; and that of its combinations with chlorine, which corresponds to the Oxydum superchromicum in composition, Chloruretum superchromicum. Fr. anal. sus-chromique, adj.

Sŭpercĭ'lĭāris, is, e. (Sŭpercĭlium.) Anat. Of or belonging to the eyebrow: superci'liary. Fr. anal. supercilière, adj. Germ. syn. zu den Augenbrauen gehörig.

Sŭpercĭ'lium Vĕ'nĕris. Bot. Venus's eyebrow. A name for the Achillea millefolium.

Sŭpercompŏ'sĭtus, a, um. (Sŭper; compŏsĭtus, compound.) Bot. Applied to compound leaves, the common petiole of which is subdivided before bearing the folioles: supercom'pound. Mineral. Applied to a variety the form of which is composed of a great number of facets resulting from divers laws of decrease. Fr. anal. supercomposé, adj.

Sŭperēmargĭnātus, a, um. (Sŭper-; emargĭnātus, without border.) Mineral. Applied to a variety the borders of which, except two opposite each other, are substituted by a facet, at the same time that these two are supplied with two facets: superemar'ginate. Fr. anal. surémarginé, adj.

Sŭperfŏ'lium, ii, n. (Sŭper; fŏlium, a leaf.) Bot. Term by Duhamel for the perula. Fr. anal. surfeuille, f.

Sŭperfluōrūrētum, i, n. Chem. Term for a combination of a fluoruret with hydrofluoric acid: a superfluo'ruret. Fr. anal. surfluorure, m.

Sŭper'fluus, a, um. (Sŭperfluo, to run over.) Bot. In excess; flowing, or running over; abundant: super'fluous. Fr. anal. superflu, adj. Germ. syn. überflüssig, adj.

Sŭperfœcundātio, ōnis, f. (Sŭper; fœcundus, fruitful.) The same as Superfœtatio.

Sŭperfœtātio, ōnis, f. (Sŭper, upon, or added to; fœtus, a fetus.) Physiol. Term for a second impregnation taking place before the first has run its course, the possibility of which is extremely doubtful; while it is denied by obstetricians generally, it is maintained by many physiologists; synonymous with Superimpregnatio, and Superfœcundatio: superfeta'tion. See Epicyema, Epigonon. Fr. anal. superfétation, f. Germ. syn. Ueberschwangerung, f.

Sŭpergĕmĭnālis, is, e. (Sŭper, upon; gĕmĭni, the testicles.) Anat. Situated upon the testicles; anciently applied to the Epididymis (Supergeminalis vas) which is so placed: superge'minal. Fr. anal. supergéminal, adj.

Sŭpergĕnuālis, is, e. (Sŭper, upon; gĕnu, the knee.) Anat. Situated on the knee; formerly applied as an epithet of the patella: superge'nual. Fr. anal. supergénual, adj.

Sŭperimpŏ'sĭtus, a, um. (Sŭper-; impŏsĭtus, placed upon.) Entomol. Applied by Kirby to the abdomen when its pedicle is inserted at the superior part of the post-scutellum, so that a considerable interval exists between it and the post-pectus, as in the Evania. Fr. anal. surimposé, adj.

Sŭpĕrimpregnātio, ōnis, f. (Sŭper, upon; impregnātio, a conception.) Obstet., Physiol. Old term the same as Superfœtatio: superimpregna'tion. See Superfœtatio.

Sŭpē'rior, or, us. (Sŭpĕrus, above.) A general term employed in reference to the relative position of parts; higher: supe'rior. Fr. anal. supérieur, adj. Germ. syn. öber, adj.

Sŭperīrĭ'dĭcopŏtas'sĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to double salts resulting from the combination of a superiridic with a potassic salt, as the Chloruretum superiridicopotassicum. Fr. anal. susiridicopotassique, adj.

Sŭperīrĭ'dĭcus, a, um. Chem. Berzelius terms the fourth degree of oxidation of iridicum Oxydum superiridicum and the fourth degree of its sulphuration Sulphuretum superiridicum; and the combination of chlorine and iridium, which corresponds to the oxide in composition. Fr. anal. susiridique, adj.

Sŭperīrĭdōso-ammŏ'nĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to double salts resulting from the combination of a superiridous with an ammonic salt, as the Chloruretum superiridoso-ammonicum. Fr. anal. susiridoso-ammonique, adj.

Sŭperīrĭdōso-īrĭdōsus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to an oxide resulting probably from the combination of superiridous and iridous oxides. Fr. anal. susiridoso-irideux, adj.

Sŭperīrĭdōso-pŏtas'sĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to double salts resulting from the combination of a superiridous with a potassic salt, as the Chloruretum superiridoso-potassicum. Fr. anal. susiridoso-potassique, adj.

Sŭperīrĭdōso-sōdĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to double salts resulting from the combination of a superiridous with a sodic salt, as the Chloruretum superiridoso-sodicum. Fr. anal. susiridoso-sodique, adj.

Sŭperīrĭdōsus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to an oxide which is the second degree of oxidation of iridium, and to a chloruret the composition of which corresponds to that of the oxide. Fr. anal. susirideux, adj.

Sŭpermercŭrōsus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to an ioduret in which the metal is combined with one and a half as much of the iodine as enters into the mercurous ioduret, etc., which is therefore considered to be a double ioduret, i. e. a mercurous-mercuric ioduret. Fr. anal. susmercureux, adj.

Superna'tant. (Sŭper, above; năto, to swim.) Floating above, or near the surface. Sŭper'nātans, tis, part. Fr. syn. qui flote sur. Germ. syn. aufschwimmend, part. adj.

Sŭperos'mĭcus, a, um. Chem. Berzelius terms the fourth degree of sulphuration of osmium, Sulphuretum superosmicum; and the combinations of the metal and chlorine which correspond to osmic acid as to composition, Chloruretum superosmicum. Fr. anal. susosmique, adj.

Sŭperosmiōsus, a, um. Chem. Berzelius named the second degrees of oxidation and of sulphuration of Osmium, Oxydum and Sulphuretum osmiosum; the combinations of those compounds with acids and sulphides, and those of osmium with the halogenous bodies which correspond with them in composition, Sales osmiosi. Fr. anal. susosmieux, adj.

Sŭpero'xŷdum, i, n. Chem. Name by Berzelius for an oxide which contains too much oxygen to be able to contract union with the acids: a supero'xide. Fr. anal. suroxide, m.

Sŭperplătīnōsus, a, um. Chem. Applied to an oxide which is the second degree of oxidation of platina, but the existence of of which, admitted by Davy, is still doubtful. Fr. anal. susplatineux, adj.

Sŭperpŏsĭtīvus, a, um. (Sŭper; pŏsĭtīvus.) Bot. Applied to prefloration, when the pieces of the calyx or of the corol are applied successively one above the other, by their superior part, as in the Verbascum: superpo'sitive. Fr. anal. superpositif, adj.

Sŭperpŏ'sĭtus, a, um. (Sŭper; pŏno, to place.) Bot. Applied to the bulb when it is developed anew upon the old, as in the Ixia polystachya; to the lobes of the anther when placed the one above the other, as in the Monarda. Fr. anal. superposé, adj.

Superpurga'tion. (Sŭper, signifying above, or excess; purgo, to purge.) Med. Term for excessive purging, or evacuation by stool; hypercatharsis. Superpurgātio, ōnis, f. Fr. anal. superpurgation, f. Germ. syn. Ueberreinigung, f.

Su'persalt. Chem. Term for a salt, or saline substance having the acid in excess over the base. Fr. anal. sursel, m.

Sŭperstannōsus, a, um. Chem. Berzelius thus terms a sulphuret, which is the second degree of sulphuration of stannum, or tin. Fr. anal. sustanneux, adj.

Sŭperthōrax, ācis, m. Entomol. Name by Latreille for the thorax of the Hymenoptera, with pediculated abdomen, and that of the Diptera, because being formed posteriorly by the first segment of the abdomen, it is more than ordinarily complicated, and forms a kind of pivot on which the abdomen and the head move. Fr. anal. surthorax, m.

Sŭpervăcuātio, ōnis, f. (Sŭper, above, or in excess; văcuo, to empty.) Med. Old term the same as Hypercrisis: supervacua'tion. Fr. anal. survacuation, f.

Sŭpervĕ'niens, tis, f. part. (Sŭper; vĕnio, to come upon another thing.) Med. Old term applied to symptoms (Supervenientia) the same as Epigenemata: superve'ning. Fr. syn. qui survient encore. Germ. syn. noch darzu kommend.

Supervŏ'mĭtus, ûs, m. (Sŭper, in excess; vŏmĭto, to vomit often.) Med. Old term the same as Hyperemesis.

Supina'tion. (Sŭpīno, to lie with the face directed upwards.) Anat. Term for the act of turning the palm of the hand upwards. Sŭpīnātio, ōnis, f. Fr. anal. supination, f. Germ. syn. Zurückdrehung, f.

Sŭpīnātor, ōris, f. (Sŭpīno, to lie with the face directed upwards.) Anat. Applied to muscles that turn the palm of the hand upwards. Fr. anal. supinateur, m. Germ. syn. Rückwärtsdreher, m.

Suppēdāneus, a, um. (Sub, under; pes, a foot.) Med., Pharm. The same as Supplantalis.

Supplantālis, is, e. (Sub, under; planta, the sole of the foot.) Med., Pharm. Situated or placed on the sole of the foot; formerly applied to medicines which are placed on the soles of the feet (Supplantalia medicamenta), as poultices mixed with mustard, salt, soap, etc., according to Blancard; they were also called Suppedanea medicamenta. See Suppedaneus. Fr. anal. supplantal, adj. Germ. syn. unterfüssig, adj.

Sup'plement. (Suppleo, to fill up, or supply what is wanting.) Surg. See Ecpleroma. Trigonom. Term for the difference of an arch from 180°, or a semicircle. Supplemen'tum, i, n. Fr. anal. supplement, m. Germ. syn. Ergänzung, f.; Essatz, m.

Tec'tĭcus, a, um. (Τήκω, to melt; terminal -ικὸς.) Med., Pathol. Melting, or causing to melt; applied the same as Colliquativus. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 6. Fr. anal. tectique, adj. Germ. syn. schmelzend, part. adj.

Tectĭpen'nis, is, e. (Tectum, the top of a house; penna, a wing.) Entomol. Applied by Duméril to a Family (Tectipennes, nom. pl. m.) of the Neuroptera, in which the wings in repose are disposed so as to form on the back a roof inclined to the right and left. See Steyopterus. Fr. anal. tectipenne, adj.

Tec'trix, ĭcis, adj. (Tĕgo, to cover.) Ornithol. Covering or hiding; applied to the plumes which cover the feathers of the wings and the tail, termed plumæ tectrices, or simply tectrices. The tectrices of the wings are divided into great, placed immediately upon the remiges; small, which garnish the top of the wing; middle, holding a medium between the preceding; superior, which cover the upper part of the wing; inferior, which occupy the lower. Those of the tail are divided into superior, which cover the upper portion of the origin of the remiges; and inferior, which cover the lower. Fr. anal. tectrice, adj.

Tec'tus, a, um. (Tĕgo, to hide, or cover from view.) Bot. Covered; opposed to Nudus, or naked; applied to seeds, etc. Fr. syn. couvert, adj. Germ. syn. bedecket, adj.

Teeth. (Sax. Tôth, pl. Têth.) Anat. The small, hard, white bones fixed in the alveoli of the jaws, generally 16 in each jaw at maturity, viz.: 10 Molars, 2 Cuspidati, and 4 Incisores. Each tooth is composed of the crown, or part above the gum and covered with enamel, the fang or root, fixed into the socket, and the neck, or grooved boundary between these. Dentes, nom. pl. of Dens, dentis, m. See Teeth, Temporary. Fr. anal. dents, f. pl. Germ. syn. Zähne, m. pl.

Teeth, Grinding of the. Med., Pathol. See Stridor Dentium, Brygmus.

Teeth, Milk. } Anat., Physiol. These
Teeth, Tem'porary. } are 20 in number, there being just 4 molares to each jaw, and are so named because they are shed between the ages of 7 and 14, and their places supplied by the permanent, or adult teeth. Dentes Dēcĭ'dua. Fr. syn. dents de lait; dents caduques. Germ. syn. Milchzähne, m. pl.

Teeth, Looseness of the. Med., Pathol. The condition termed Agomphiasis.

Teeth, Per'manent. Anat., Physiol. These are 32 in number, 3 adult grinders being added to each side of the jaw. Rare cases have occurred where a third set of teeth have appeared about the age of 60 or 70. Den'tes Permănen'tes. Fr. anal. dents permanents.

Teething. Physiol. Common name for the cutting of the teeth, or dentition.

Teething, Difficult. See Dentition, Difficult.

Teetotaller. (Teetotal, long in use among working men in Lancashire, etc., as a redundant spelling of total, and of course signifying entire or complete, was first applied to the temperance movement by a certain Dicky Turner, who, at a meeting in Preston, amidst conflicting opinions, energetically enjoined teetotal abstinence.) Tegĕ'nĕra Mĕdĭcīnālis. Med., Pharm. Term for the blister-fly, or Cantharis.

Teg'men, ĭnis, n. } (Tĕgo, to cover.) Bot.
Tegmen'tum, i, n. } Name by Mirbel for the immediate envelope of the Amygdala, or almond; by Palisot-Beauvois to the external envelope of the flower of the Gramineæ; by Dutrochet to the membrane of the embryonary sac, which he presumes to be derived from the internal membrane of the seed; by Link to the whole of the scales which cover the germs in the bud. Entomol. Applied by Kirby to the superior wings when they are coriaceous or pergamentaceous, and supplied with nervures, as in the Orthoptera. Fr. anal. tegmen, m.

Tegmĭnātus, a, um. Bot. Applied by Mirbel to the embryo when it is enveloped in a tegmen, as the Heisteria coccinea: teg'minate. Fr. anal. tegminé, adj. Germ. syn. bedecket, adj.

Tegmĭnĭpen'nis, is, e. (Tegmen, a covering; penna, a wing.) Entomol. Having wings resembling a species of elytra by their dark colour, as the Anthrax tegminipennis. Fr. anal. tegminipenne, adj. Germ. syn. deckflügelt, adj.

Tĕ'gŭla, æ, f. (Tĕgo, to cover.) A tile. Entomol. Term for a species of callosity or tubercle like a small valve of a shell, the convexity upwards, which is perceived at the origin of the superior wings of the Hymenoptera. Fr. anal. tégule, f.

Tĕ'gŭla Hiber'nĭca. Geol. A name for the Lapis Hibernicus, or Irish slate.

Te'gument. (Tĕgo, to hide, or cover.) Anat., Bot. Term applied by Cavanilles and Ventenat to a membrane which covers the sori of ferns (the inducium of Swartz, the involucrum of Smith, the perisporangium of Hedwig). The proper envelope of the spermoderm was called tegumentum proprium by Gærtner. The calyx and corol are frequently named tegumenta floralia, i. e. the envelopes of sexual organs, when regarded as purely general. Tĕgŭmen'tum, i, n. See Integuments, Operimentum, Velamentum. Fr. anal. tégument, m.

Teinŏdў'nia, æ, f. (Τείνω, to stretch; ὀδύνη, pain.) Med., Pathol. Term for pain of the tendons. Fr. anal. teinodynie, f. Germ. syn. Sehnenschmerz, m.

Teinophlŏgōsis, is, or eos, f. (Τείνω, to stretch; phlogōsis.) Med., Pathol. Term for severe inflammation of the tendons. Fr. anal. teinophlogose, f. Germ. syn. Sehnenentzündung, f.

Tejĭdæ, patron. m. pl. Zoöl. Applied by Gray to a Family of the saurian reptiles, having the Tejus for their type. See Diss. div. i. s. iii. Fr. anal. tejides, m. pl.

Tēla, æ, f. (Texo, to weave.) A web of cloth. Anat. Applied to the cellular membrane. Fr. syn. toile, f. Germ. syn. Gewebe, n.

Tēlāceus, a, um. (Tēla, cloth.) Bot. Like a fine cloth, by its loose network, as the expansions of the Flustra telacea: tela'ceous. Fr. anal. télacé, adj.

Tēlæsthēsis, is, f. (Τῆλε, far off; αἴσθησις, perception.) Med., Physiol. Term for tact, or perception from remote or non-conspicuous grounds or circumstances. Fr. anal. télæsthèse, f. Germ. syn. Fernfühlen, n.

Tĕlămōnes. (Pl. of Tĕlămon, ōnis, f., from τλῆναι, to bear.) Surg. Old term for shreds of linen that were applied to wounds, or rather, small bandages in which wounded members were wrapped.

Tĕlangĭectă'sia, æ, f. } (Τέλος, the end Tĕlangĭec'tăsis, is, or eos, f. } of a thing; ἀγγεῖον, a blood-vessel; ἔκτασις, extension.) Anat., Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for an extension of the vessels. See Neotocopneumonotelectasis. Fr. anal. télangiectasie, f. Germ. syn. eine Ausdehnung der Gefässenden.

Tĕlangiōsis, is, or eos, f. (Τέλος, the end of a thing; ἀγγεῖον, a blood-vessel.) Med., Surg. Pathol. Term by Lobstein for disease of the capillary vessels. Fr. and Germ. anal. télangiose, f. Germ. syn. Haargefässkrankheit, f.

Tĕleamor'pha, æ, f. (Τέλεος, perfect; amorpha.) Med., Pathol. Term for an indeterminate skin eruption, in adults. Fr. anal. télamorphe, f. Germ. syn. der unbestimmte Hautfleck bei Erwachsenen.

Tĕleian'thus, a, um. (Τέλειος, perfect; ἄνθος, a flower.) Bot. Applied by Wachsendorff to plants provided with stamens and pistils: teleian'thous. The same as Hermaphrodite. Fr. anal. téleianthe, adj.

Tĕleobran'chius, a, um. (Τέλεος, complete; βράγχια, the branchiæ.) Ichthyol. Applied by Duméril to an Order (Teleobranchia, nom. pl. n.) of cartilaginous fishes, having the branchiæ complete, i. e. provided with a membrane and opercule. Fr. anal. téléobranche, adj. Germ. syn. mit vollkommen Kiemen oder mit Kiemendeckeln und Kiemenhäuten.

Tĕleogeo'phĭlus, a, um. (Τέλεος, perfect; γῆ, the earth; φιλέω, to love.) Zoöl. Applied by Hartmann to a group (Teleogeophila, nom. pl. n.) of the Gasteropoda, having lungs and living on land: teleogeo'philous. Fr. anal. téléogéophile, adj.

Tĕleohydrŏ'phĭlus, a, um. (Τέλεος, perfect; ὕδωρ, water; φιλέω, to love.) Zoöl. Applied by Hartmann to a group (Teleohydrophila, nom. pl. n.) of the Gasteropoda, that live in water: teleohydro'philous. Fr. anal. téléohydrophile, adj.

Tĕleolo'gical. (Tĕleŏlŏgia, teleology; terminal -ĭcus.) Physiol. Belonging to teleology. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 6. Tĕleŏlŏ'gĭcus, a, um. Fr. and Germ. anal. téleologique, adj.

Teleo'logy. (Τέλεος, perfect, leading to an end, absolute; λόγος, a discourse.) Physiol. Term for the doctrine of an inherent power to act with a definite purpose, or to produce in conformity with a prominent idea. Tĕleŏlŏ'gia, æ, f. Fr. and Germ. anal. teleologie, f.

Tĕleŏmicroscŏ'pium, ii, n. (Τέλος, the end of a thing; microscŏpium.) Nat. Philos. Term for an instrument for enlarging or increasing the forms of more remote or indistinct objects: a teleomi'croscope. Fr. anal. téleomicroscope, m. Germ. anal. Teleomikroskop, n.

Tĕleŏ'pŏdis, is, e. (Τέλεος, complete; πούς, a foot.) Ornithol. Applied by Vieillot to a tribe (Teleopodes, nom. pl. m.) of the Natatores, having the feet complete, i. e. provided with a thumb. Fr. anal. téléopode, adj.

Tĕlĕphie'us, a, um. Bot. Applied by de Candolle to a tribe (Telephieæ, nom. pl. f.) admitted by him into the Paronychieæ, having the Telephium for their type. Fr. anal. telephié, adj.

Tĕlĕ'phium, ii, n. (Tĕlĕphus, who was wounded by Achilles.) Bot. The specific name of the orpine. See Sedum Telephium. Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for a malignant incurable ulcer. Fr. anal. téléphium, m.

Tĕlĕ'phŏrus, a, um. Entomol. Applied by Lamarck to a Family (Telephorii, nom. pl. m.) of the Coleoptera, having the Telephorus for their type. Fr. anal. téléphorien, adj.

Tĕlescŏ'pium, ii, n. (Τῆλε, far off; σκοπέω, to see.) Nat. Philos. Name given sometimes to every optical glass capable of bringing nearer and enlarging distant objects, but more particularly to those apparatus which contain one or two reflecting mirrors and serve the same purpose. Four species of telescopes are distinguished, those of Newton, Gregory, Cassegrain and Herschell: a te'lescope. Fr. anal. télescope, m. Germ. syn. Fernrohr, n.

Tĕlescophthal'mus, a, um. (Tĕlescŏpium; ὀφθαλμὸς, the eye.) Ornithol. Applied to the Muscicapa telescophthalmus, because a membranous circle surrounds its eye. Fr. anal. télescophthalme, adj.

Tĕlescŏ'pĭcus, a, um. (Tĕlescŏpium; terminal -ĭcus.) Astron. Applied to planets such as Ceres, Pallas, Juno, Vesta, and to stars which can only be perceived by the aid of a powerful optical instrument: telesco'pic. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 6. Fr. anal. télescopique, adj. Germ. syn. zum Fernrohr gehörig.

Tĕlescŏpĭfor'mis, is, e. (Tĕlescŏpium; forma, likeness.) Entomol. Applied by Kirby to the terebella, when it consists of many retractile tubes which can be drawn one into the other like the pieces of a telescope: telesco'piform. Fr. anal. télescopiforme, adj. Germ. syn. fernrohrförmig, adj.

Tĕlesphŏrēsis, is, or eos, f. (Τέλος, the end; φέρω, to bring.) Term for a bringing to perfection, or to an end; an accomplishing. Obstet. Applied to complete delivery (at the full time) of the child. Fr. anal. télésphorèse, f. Germ. syn. das zu-Ende tragen; das vollige Austragen (die volle Reife) einer Frucht oder Leibes-frucht.

Tĕles'phŏrus, a, um. (Same as preceding.) Bringing to an end. Obstet. Accomplishing delivery. Fr. anal. télesphore, adj. Germ. syn. zu Ende tragend.

Tĕlĕ'thŭsus, a, um. } (Τέλος, the end; θύσανος, Tĕlĕ'thўsus, a, um. } a tassel, in the pl. a fringe.) Entomol. Applied by Savigny and Latreille to a Family (Telethusæ, nom. pl. f.) of the Annelides, having the posterior extremity of the body provided with branchial fringes. Fr. anal. téléthuse, adj.

Tellīnārius, a, um. Zoöl. Applied by Lamarck to a section (Tellinaria, nom. pl. m.) of the Conchifera Nymphacea, having the Tellina for their type: tellina'rious. Fr. anal. tellinaire, adj.

Tellūrātus, a, um. Chem. Applied to a gas which holds tellurium in solution, as the Gas hydrogeneratum telluratum: tel'lurated. Fr. anal. telluré, adj.

Tellurau'rate. Chem. Term for a genus of salts resulting from the combination of auric telluride with the tellururets. Fr. anal. telluraurate, m.

Tel'lureted Hy'drogen. Chem. Name for a combination of Tellurium and Hydrogen, forming an elastic fluid possessed of very singular properties; discovered by Sir H. Davy in 1809.

Tellu'ric. (Tellūrium; terminal -ic.) Chem. Of or belonging to Tellurium; applied to the peroxide of Tellurium, which is called telluric acid and combines with many of the metallic oxides, producing a class of compounds which have been called Tellurates. Tellūrĭcus, a, um. Fr. anal. tellurique, adj.

Tellūrĭcyā'nūrētum, i, n. Chem. Term for a compound of a cyanuret and tellurium. Fr. anal. telluricyanure, m.

Tellūris, ĭdis, n. Chem. Name by Berzelius for a combination of tellurium with a body less electro-negative than it, which acts as an acid with those in which the metal is united with other electro-positive metals: a tel'luride. Mineral. Applied by Beudant to a Family (nom. pl.) including tellurium and those substances into the composition of which it enters. Fr. anal. telluride, m.

Tellūrĭsal, ālis, m. Chem. Term applied to a Class (nom. pl.) resulting from the combination of tellurides with tellururets, i. e. the acid and the base of which contain two of tellurium: a tellu'risalt. Fr. anal. tellurisel, m.

Tellūrium, ii, n. Chem. Term for a metal made known in 1782 by Muller of Reichenstein, and the existence of which has been demonstrated in 1798 by Klaproth. Fr. anal. tellure, m.

Tellu'rous. (Tellūrium; terminal -ous.) Chem. Of or belonging to tellurium; applied to the protoxide of tellurium, called tellurous acid. Fr. anal. tellureux, adj.

Tellūrūrētum, i, n. Chem. Term for a combination of tellurium with a metal. Berzelius reserves this name for a combination of tellurium with an electro-positive metal, in which the atomic relations are the same as in the bases: a tellu'ruret. Fr. anal. tellurure, m.

Telma. (Τέλμα.) Anat. Old term for either that part of the foot with which we touch or tread the ground, or the thick hard sole of the foot.

Tēlŏrāsis, is, or eos, f. (Τῆλε, far off; ὅρασις, the sense of sight.) Med., Physiol. Term for Presbyopia, or longsightedness. Fr. anal. télorase, f. Germ. syn. Fernsehen, n.

Tēmētum, i, n. (Said to be from tenet mentem; because it holds or binds the mind.) Med., Pharm. Term for any strong intoxicating wine. Fr. anal. témète, m. Germ. syn. jeder schwere berauchende Wein.

Tem'perament. (Tempĕro, to mingle.) Phrenol. The temperaments which are supposed to depend upon the constitution of particular systems of the body, are the lymphatic, the sanguine, the bilious, and the nervous. Physiol. The proportionable mixture, or peculiar constitution of the humours of the body. Temperaments are distinguishable into the choleric, melancholic, phlegmatic, sanguine and nervous. Tempĕrāmen'tum, i, n. See Crassis. Fr. anal. tempérament, m. Germ. anal. Temperament, n.

Tem'perate. (Tempĕro, to mingle in order or measure.) Moderate; without excess; tempered. Tempĕrātus, a, um. Fr. anal. temperant, adj. Germ. syn. mässig, adj.

Tem'perate Zone. Astron., Geog. Term for a space extending from each tropic to its relative polar circle.

Tem'perature. (Tempĕro, to mingle in order or measure.) Nat. Philos. A certain degree of sensible heat, as denoted by the thermometer. Tempĕrātūra, æ, f. Fr. anal. température, f. Germ. anal. Temperatur, f.

Temple. (Tempus, time; so called because they are indexes of time, that is of age, for by the whiteness and thinness of the hair upon them they mark its advancement.) Anat. Name for the flat portion at either side of the head, above the ears. Entomol. Applied, according to Kirby, to the part from each side of the posterior half of the eyes between the forehead and the vertex. Ornithol., Zoöl. Applied to the lateral region of the head comprised between the eyes and ears. Tem'pus, ŏris, n. See Crotaphi, Crotaphos. Fr. anal. tempe, f. Germ. syn. Schlaf, m.

Templīnum O'leum. Term for oil obtained from the cones or nuts of the pine-tree. Germ. syn. Tannenzapfenöl, n.

Tempŏrālis, is, e. (Tempŏra, the temples.) Anat. Of or belonging to the temples: tem'poral; applied (nom. pl. m.) to a muscle of the lower jaw, situated on the temple. See Crotaphitæ. Ornithol. The plumæ temporales are those which are on the temples or cheeks; applied to birds in which the temporal region is distinguished by a particular colour, as the Fringilla temporalis. Fr. anal. temporal, adj.

Temporary Teeth. Anat. See Teeth, Temporary.

Tĕmŭlen'tia, æ, f. (Tĕmŭlentus, drunken.) Med., Pathol. Term for ebriety, or drunkenness: te'mulence. Fr. syn. ivrognerie, f. Germ. syn. Trunkenheit, f.

Tĕnācĭtas, ātis, f. (Tĕnax.) Nat. Philos. Term for the power of resistance which bodies oppose to efforts to break them either by shock, pressure, or traction. Employed especially as to metals to express the property which many have, after being reduced to a wire of a small diameter, of supporting a weight more or less considerable without breaking. Fr. anal. ténacité, f. Germ. syn. Festigkeit, f.; Zähigkeit, f.

Tĕnăcŭlum, i, n. (Tĕneo, to hold fast.) Surg. Name for a small hook-shaped instrument with a sharp point for passing through the coats of a divided vessel to pull it beyond the surface of the wound in order to secure it with a ligature. Fr. syn. ténaille, f. Germ. anal. Tenakel, m.

Tĕnax, ācis, adj. (Tĕneo, to hold.) Geol. Applied to a rock when it is troublesome to break, as the basanite: tena'cious. Fr. anal. ténace, adj.

Tench. (Sax. Tince.) Ichthyol. Common name for the Cyprinus tinca, of Linnæus.

Ten'do, ĭnis, or ōnis, m. (Tendo, to stretch out.) Anat. The smooth, white, shining extremity of a muscle: a ten'don; vulgarly called a guider. See Corrigia, Enervatio, Pronervatio. Fr. anal. tendon, m. Germ. syn. Sehne, f.

Tendo Achillis. Anat. See Achillis, Tendo.

Tendon. Anat. See Tendo.

Tendril. (Fr. Tendron, a twig.) See Cirrus.

Tĕnebrĭ'cŏlus, a, um. (Tĕnebra, darkness; cŏlo, to inhabit.) Entomol. Seeking darkness, as the Chrysomela tenebricola: tenebri'colous. See Lygophylus. Fr. anal. ténébricole, adj.

Tĕnebriōnītes, m. pl. Entomol. Applied by Cuvier, Latreille, Goldfuss, Eichwald, Ficinus and Carus to a tribe of the Coleoptera Melasomata, having the Tenebrio for their type. Fr. anal. ténébrionites, m. pl.

Tĕnelliflōrus, a, um. (Tĕnellus, small; flos, a flower.) Bot. Having small flowers, as the Hydotis tenelliflora: tenelliflo'rous. Fr. anal. ténelliflore, adj. Germ. syn. kleinblümig, adj.

Tĕnesmōdēs, adj. (Tĕnesmus; terminal -ōdēs.) Med., Pathol. Having or full of tenesmus: tenes'mous. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. anal. ténesmeux, adj. Germ. syn. stuhlzwangartig, adj.

Tĕnes'mus, i, m. (Τείνω, to bind together; from the sensation of constriction in the part.) Med., Pathol. Term for a constant desire to go to stool, with great straining, but no discharge. See Proctospasmus. Fr. anal. ténesme, m.

Tĕnon'tăgra, æ, f. (Τένων, a thick muscle of the neck; ἄγρα, a seizure.) Med., Pathol. Term for gouty, or rheumatic affection of the larger muscles, especially those of the neck. Fr. anal. ténontagre, f.

Tĕnontocrig'mus, i, m. (Τένων, a tendon, or a thick muscle; κριγμὸς, a creaking.) Med., Pathol. Term for a creaking of the more rigid tendons. Fr. anal. ténontocrigme, m. Germ. syn. Sehnenklapp, m.; Sehnenknacken, n.

Tĕnontŏ'dyne, es, f. } (Τένων, a tendon; ὀδύνη, Tĕnontŏdy'nia, æ, f. } pain.) Med., Pathol. Term for pain, with crepitation of the tendons. Fr. and Germ. anal. tenontodynie, f. Germ. syn. Sehnenschmerz, m.

Tĕnontogrăphia, æ, f. (Τένων, a tendon; γράφω, to write.) Anat., Physiol. Term for a description (and delineation) of the tendons: tenonto'graphy. Fr. and Germ. anal. ténontographie, f. Germ. syn. die Beschreibung (und Abbildung) der Flechsen.

Tĕnontŏlŏ'gia, æ, f. (Τένων, a tendon; λόγος, a discourse.) Anat., Physiol. Term for the doctrine of the tendons: tenonto'logy. Fr. and Germ. anal. ténontologie, f. Germ. syn. die Lehre von den Sehnen; Sehnenlehre, f.

Tĕnontŏphўma, æ, f. (Τένων, a tendon; φῦμα, a growth, or tumour.) Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for a tumour of a tendon: a tenon'tophyme. Fr. anal. ténontophyme, m. Germ. syn. Sehnengeschwulst, f.

Tĕnonto'phўtum, i, n. (Τένων, a tendon; φυτὸν, a plant.) Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for a morbid growth in or on a tendon: a tenon'tophyte. Fr. anal. ténontophyte, m. Germ. syn. Sehnengewächs, n.

Tĕnontostōma, ătis, n. (Τένων, a tendon; ostōma, an osseous tumour.) Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for an osseous tumour in or on a tendon: a tenon'tostome. Fr. anal. ténontostôme, m. Germ. syn. Sehnenverknöcherung, f.

Tĕnontostōsis, is, or eos, f. Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for the formation or progress of Tenontostoma. Fr. anal. ténontostose, f. Germ. syn. der Process der Sehnenverknöcherung.

Tenontotomia. See Tenotomia.

Tĕnŏtŏ'mia, æ, f. (Τένων, a tendon; τέμνω, to cut.) Surg. Term for the operation practised for remedying certain muscular contractions by subcutaneous cutting of the tendons of the muscles involved: teno'tomy. Fr. and Germ. anal. ténotomie, f. Germ. syn. Sehnenschnitt, m.

Ten'sio, ōnis, f. (Tendo, to stretch.) Term for a contraction or shrinking. Nat. Philos. An augmentation of volume of a body, from the dispersion of its molecules: ten'sion. Fr. anal. tension, f. Germ. syn. Dehnung, f.; Spannung, f.

Ten'sor, ōris, m. (Tendo, to stretch.) Anat. An extender, or stretcher; applied to muscles which act thus. Fr. anal. tenseur, m. Germ. syn. Anspanner, m.

Tent. (Tendo, to stretch.) Surg. Term for a roll of lint, or piece of prepared sponge for keeping open, or dilating sores, sinuses, etc. Līnāmen'tum, i, n.; Pĕnĭcil'lum, i, n., or ŭs, i, m.; Ten'ta, æ, f. See Lemniscus, Licinium, Priapiscus, Turunda. Fr. anal. tente, f. Germ. syn. Messel, f.; Wieke, f.

Tent, Sponge. Pharm., Surg. See Sponge Tent.

Tentăcŭlāria, æ, f. (Tentăcŭlum.) Zoöl. Name for a species of the Entozoa, the Filaria hominis bronchialis. Fr. anal. tentaculaire, f. Germ. syn. Lungenzwirnwurm, m.

Tentăcŭlāris, is, e. (Tentăcŭlum.) Zoöl. Applied (cirri tentaculares) to the anterior feet of the Nereides: tenta'cular. Similar to Tentaculatus. Fr. anal. tentaculaire, adj.

Tentăcŭlātus, a, um. (Tentăcŭlum.) Bot. The Carex tentaculata has its fruit swoln and furnished with a very long beak, which has been compared to a tentaculum. Zoöl. Provided with tentacula, as the abdomen of the Malachii, from which proceed the kind of fleshy balls at the will of the animal, etc.: tenta'culate. Applied by Latreille to a Family (Tentaculata, nom. pl. n.) of the Gasteropoda Tectibranchiata, having the head provided with two or more tentacula. Fr. anal. tentaculé, adj. Germ. syn. zum Fuhlfade gehörig.

Tentăcŭlĭfor'mis, is, e. (Tentăcŭlum; forma, likeness.) Zoöl. Having the form of a tentaculum, or little beard, as the suckers of the Echinoderma: tenta'culiform. Fr. anal. tentaculiforme, adj. Germ. syn. fuhlfadförmig, adj.

Tentăcŭlum, i, n. Tertiānus, a, um. (Ter, thrice.) Happening every third day. Med., Pathol. Applied to a kind of intermittent fever in which the intermission lasts about 48 hours and thus the paroxysm returns every third day, reckoning inclusively; therefore termed Tertiana (febris), or tertian ague; a genus of the Order Febris; Cl. Pyrexiæ, of Cullen's Nosology. See Tritæos. Fr. syn. tierce, adj. Germ. syn. dreitägig, adj.

Ter'tiary. (Tertius, third.) Bot. A tertiary peduncle is the second degree of ramification of a compound peduncle, or a bough of the branch which gives off the peduncle. Geol. Applied collectively to all soils found above the limestone, although they may not all be of the same age. Tertiārius, a, um. Fr. anal. tertiaire, adj.

Ter'tium Sal. (Tertius, third.) Chem. Term for a neutral salt the product of an acid and an alkali, and forming a third body different from either.

Tessellātus, a, um. (Tessĕra, a square.) Having square figures; chequered; tes'sellated. Fr. syn. bigarré, adj. Germ. syn. ausgelegt, adj.

Tes'sĕra, æ, f. (Τέσσαρα, four.) Anat. Name of the four-sided or cuboid bone.

Tes'sular. (Tessŭla, as if Tessĕrŭla, dim. tessĕra, a die, or four-square figure.) Mineral. Applied to a system of crystallization derived from the hexahedron; also, to combinations of that system, into which no halves or fourths enter. Fr. anal. tessulaire, adj.

Test. (Testis, a witness; because it gives evidence of the nature of any substance.) Chem. See Reagent.

Tes'ta, æ, f. (As if Tosta, from torreo, to bake; originally signifying an earthen pot.) Bot. The covering or skin within which all the parts of a seed are contained; the spermatoderm. Ichthyol. The shell of a kind of fish, or molluscous animal. Fr. syn. test, m. Germ. syn. Schale, f. M. Med. The pharmacopœial name (U.S.A.) for the shells of Ostrea edulis: oyster-shell. Fr. syn. des écailles d'huitres. Germ. syn. Austerschalen, f. pl.

Tes'ta Prŏba'trix. Chem. Term for a Cupel or test; also a pot for separating baser metals from gold and silver.

Testāceĭfor'mis, is, e. (Testa; forma, likeness.) Having the form of a kind of shell: testa'ceiform. Fr. anal. testacéiforme, adj. Germ. syn. schaleförmig, adj.

Testāceogrăphia, æ, f. (Testāceus; γράφω, to write.) Zoöl. Term for a description of the Testacea: testaceo'graphy. Fr. and Germ. anal. testacéographie, f.

Testāceŏlŏ'gia, æ, f. (Testāceus; λόγος, a discourse.) Zoöl. Term for a treatise on the Testacea: testaceo'logy. Fr. and Germ. anal. testacéologie, f.

Testa'ceus, a, um. (Testa, a shell.) Of or belonging to, or of the nature of a shell: testa'ceous. See Ostracodermus. Fr. anal. testacé, adj. Germ. syn. mit einer harten Schale, adj.

Tes'tes Cĕ'rĕbri. Anat. Term for the two inferior and posterior of the Tubercula quadrigemina. See Didymia.

Tes'tes Mulĭērum. Anat. The testicles of women; a term applied to the ovaries.

Tes'ticle. (Testis, a witness; because they are the distinctive evidence of the male.) Anat. See Testiculus, Testis, Patrimonium, Perin.

Tes'ticle, Inflamed. } Med., Surg. Pathol.
Tes'ticle, Swelled. } Terms for the disease Orchitis. See Hernia Veneris.

Testicle, Malposition of the. See Parorchideum.

Testĭcon'dus, i, m. (Testis; condo, to hide.) Med., Physiol. The same as Cryptorchis.

Testĭ'cŭlātus, a, um. (Testĭculus.) Bot. Applied to the Dendrobium testiculatum, because two of its petioles form on the middle of a third a sort of purse with two compartments. Fr. anal. testiculé, adj.

Testĭ'cŭlus, i, m. (Dim. Testis, a testicle.) A small testicle. Bot. Applied to the plant Orchis, from the resemblance of its roots.

Testĭ'cŭlus Vĕ'nĕris. Med., Surg. A term for Orchitis, Hernia humoralis, or Hernia veneris.

Tes'tis, is, m. (A witness, because the testicles are the evidence of virility.) Anat. The testicle, a small oval body, two such being contained within the Scrotum, and more immediately covered by a strong white and dense coat called Tunica albuginea. Fr. syn. testicule, m. Germ. syn. Hode, f.

Testītis, ĭdis, f. (Testis; terminal -ītis.) Med., Surg. Pathol. The same as Orchitis.

Testūdĭnārius, a, um. (Testūdo.) Conchol. Applied to many shells the general hue of which, and the arrangement of the spots, recall the colouring of the tortoise, as the Patella testudinaria. Fr. anal. testudinaire, adj.

Testūdĭnātio Crānii. (Testūdo.) Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for an arched fracture of the cranium. See Camarosis.

Testūdĭnātus, a, um. Zoöl. Applied by Merrem, Fitzinger and Gray to a Family or to an Order (Testudinata, nom. pl. n.) of the Reptilia, having the Testudo for their type. Fr. anal. testudiné, adj.

Testūdĭ'nidæ, patron. m. pl. Zoöl. Applied by T. Bell to a Family of the Chelonii, having the Testudo for their type. Fr. anal. testudinides, m. pl.

Testūdĭnoīdeus, a, um. Zoöl. Applied by

Fitzinger to a Family (Testudinoidea, nom. pl. n.) of the Reptilia Testudinata, containing the Testudo. Fr. anal. testudinoïde, adj. Germ. syn. schildkrotähnlich, adj.

Testūdo, ĭnis, f. (Testa, a shell, because covered with a shell.) Med., Surg. Name applied to a melicerous tumour of the scalp, of a flattened appearance, because supposed to be like a tortoise. See Talpa. Zoöl. A genus of animals including the terrestrial species of the Ord. Chelonia. The tortoise. See Chelone. Fr. syn. chélonée, f. Germ. syn. Schildkröte, f.

Teta'nic. (Tĕtănus, a spasmodic disease, with rigidity; terminal -ic.) Med., Pathol., Physiol. Of or belonging to the disease tetanus; also applied to a patient affected with tetanus, when he is in the excited condition, in distinction from that of his being *un*excited, or only Tetanode. Tĕtă'nĭcus, a, um. Fr. anal. tétanique, adj. Germ. syn. am Tetanus leidend.

Tĕtă'nium, ii, n. M. Med. Term by Magendie for Strychnina, because it induces tetanus.

Te'tanode. (Tĕtănus, a spasmodic disease with rigidity; terminal -ode.) Med., Pathol., Physiol. Term applied to a patient affected with tetanus, when he is in the state of excitability, or is *un*excited, as distinguished from his being excited, or tetanic. Tĕtănōdēs, adj. Fr. anal. tetaneux, adj.

Te'tanoid. (Tĕtănus, a spasmodic disease with rigidity; terminal -ĭdēs.) Med., Pathol. Resembling the disease tetanus. See Diss. div. i. s. i. Fr. anal. tétanoïde, adj. Germ. syn. starrkrampfähnlich, adj.

Tĕtănōma, ătis, n. } (Τετανόω, to smooth..)
Tĕtănōthrum, i, n. } Pharm. Old terms for a medicine said to render the skin smooth, especially of the face; also to remove wrinkles. Fr. anal. tétanome, m.

Tĕ'tănus, i, m. (Τείνω, to bend, or stretch.) Med., Pathol. Term for a disease in which there is a spasmodic contraction of the muscles of voluntary motion, with tension and rigidity of the parts affected, and of which there are several varieties; spasm with rigidity; a genus of the Order Spasmi; Cl. Neuroses, of Cullen's Nosology. Physiol. An excited reflex (or direct) action of the spinal system, without Trachelismus, or cerebral symptoms, or Laryngismus, but with spasm of the muscles of the neck and maxilla, and of the pharynx, or Pharyngismus. Fr. anal. tétanos, m. Germ. syn. Starrkrampf, m.; Todtenkrampf, m.

Tĕ'tănus Complētus. Med., Pathol. Complete tetanus; a variety of the disease tetanus, consisting in the spasmodic and rigid contraction of the greater number of the voluntary muscles, which thus antagonise and counteract one another, so that the body is not drawn more in one direction than another; anciently termed T. Holotonicus. See Holotonicus. Fr. syn. tétanos complet.

Tĕ'tănus Emprosthŏ'tŏnos. Pathol. Forward-bending tetanus; a term for a variety of the disease tetanus, consisting in violent spasmodic contraction of certain muscles so as to bend the body forwards. Germ. syn. Vorkrampf, m.

Tĕ'tănus Holŏtŏ'nĭcus. Med., Pathol. A former term the same as Tetanus completus.

Tĕ'tănus Opisthŏ'tŏnos. Med., Pathol. Backward-bending tetanus; a term for a variety of the disease tetanus, consisting in the violent spasmodic contraction of certain muscles so as to bend the body backwards. Germ. syn. Rückenkrampf, m.

Tĕ'tănus Pleurŏthŏ'tŏnos. Med., Pathol. Lateral-bending tetanus; a term for a variety of the disease tetanus, consisting in a violent spasmodic contraction of certain muscles, so as to bend the body to one side. Germ. syn. Seitenkrampf, m.

Tĕ'tănus Tris'mus. Med., Pathol. Term for a variety of the disease tetanus, consisting in spastic rigidity of the muscles of the lower jaw; locked jaw. Germ. syn. Kinnbackenkrampf, m.

Tĕtartæ'us, a, um. (Τεταρταῖος.) Of the fourth. Med., Pathol. Applied formerly to fevers; the same as Quartanus. Fr. anal. tétarté, adj.

Tetar'tohe'drĭcus, a, um. (Τέταρτος, the fourth; ἕδρα, a base.) Crystall. Applied by Naumann to every crystalline form that is the fourth of the whole number of faces of a holohedrical form, symmetrically divided: tetar'tohe'drical. Fr. anal. tétartoëdrique, adj.

Tĕtar'tophy'ia (febris). (Τέταρτος, the fourth; φύω, to produce.) Med., Pathol. Term for a fever with an exacerbation on every fourth day. Fr. anal. tétartophie, f. Germ. syn. ein Fieber mit Exacerbation an jedem vierten Tage.

Tĕtar'to-prisma'tic. (Τέταρτος, fourth; prismătĭcus, belonging to a prism.) Mineral. Applied to a combination of the prismatic system in which, of a scalene-four-sided prism only the fourth part, as to the number of the faces, appears. Tĕtar'to-prismă'tĭcus, a, um. Fr. anal. tétartoprismatique, adj.

Tethydes, f. pl. (Τηθύς, a sea-deity.) Zoöl. Term by Savigny, Schweigger, Latreille, McLeay and Menke to designate a Family of the Mollusca, or an Order of that of the Tunicata, having the Tethya for their type. Fr. anal. téthyes, f. pl.

Tetra-atŏ'mĭcus, a, um. (Τέτρα, for τέσσαρα, four; ἄτομος, an atom.) Chem. Applied by Serullas to a body in which the relative number of simple atoms remaining the same, the absolute number of atoms is quadruple, as the Carburetum dihydricum tetra-atomicum. Fr. anal. tétra-atomique, adj.

Tetrăbo'thrus, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; βόθρος, a hole or hollow.) Zoöl. Having four fossets, as those seen on the head of certain Bothrocephala. Fr. anal. tetra-bothryde, adj.

Tetrabranchiātus, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; βράγχια, the branchiæ.) Zoöl. Applied by R. Owen to an Order (Tetrabranchiata, nom. pl. n.) of the Cephalopoda, having four branchiæ, and corresponding to the Polythalamaceæ of Blainville, the Sipho- nifera of Orbigny, the Siphonidea of Dehaan. Fr. anal. tétrabranche, adj.

Tetrăcă'mărus, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; καμάρα, a vault.) Bot. Applied by Mirbel to the etairium which is composed of four camaræ. Fr. anal. tétracamare, adj.

Tetrăcan'thus, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; ἄκανθα, a thorn.) Bot. Applied to a plant the branches of which have four spines, as the Randia tetracantha. Ichthyol. Applied to a fish with four sharp rays to one of its fins, as the Podianus, the Holocentrus, the Labrus tetracanthus. Entomol. Applied to the Aranea tetracantha, the margin of the abdomen of which is terminated by four spines: tetracan'thous. Fr. anal. tétracanthe, adj. Germ. syn. vierdörnig, adj.

Tetrăcaulŏdon. (Τέτρα, four; caulis, a stem; ὀδοὺς, a tooth.) Zoöl. Term by Godmann (Baltimore Med. Surg. Journ., Oct. 1833) for a new genus of fossil animals.

Tetrăcĕrātus, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; κέρας, a horn.) Zoöl. Applied by Blainville to a Family (Tetracerata, nom. pl. n.) of the Paracephalophora Polybranchiata, having two pairs of tentacula on the head, and corresponding to the Nodibranchia of Cuvier: tetracera'tous. Fr. anal. tetracère, adj. Germ. syn. vierhörnig, adj.

Tetrăchēnium, ii, n. (Τέτρα, four; a, priv.; χαίνω, to open.) Bot. A term by Richard for a simple fruit formed by an ovary adherent to the calyx, which at maturity divides into four portions, as of the Labieæ. Fr. anal. tétrachaine, m.

Tetrăchŏ'tŏmus, a, um. (Τέτραχα, in four parts; τέμνω, to cut.) Bot. Applied by de Candolle to the cyme in which each terminal flower has under it four bracteæ, and gives origin to as many branches, as in certain Euphorbiæ. Fr. anal. tétrachotome, adj.

Tetrăci'thărus, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; κιθάρα, a harp.) Zoöl. The Salacia tetracithara is a polyparium, the cellules of which are grouped four by four, by verticilli, along the branches. Fr. anal. tétracithare, adj.

Tetrăcoc'cus, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; κόκκος, a berry.) Bot. Applied by Mirbel to the dierisilis when composed of four berries, as in the Cleroidendrum infortunatum. Fr. anal. tétracoque, adj.

Tetrăcon'ta-octăhed'ron. (Τεσσαράκοντα, forty; ὀκτὼ, eight; ἕδρα, a basis.) Geom. Term for a solid figure consisting of forty-eight scalene triangles. Tetraconta-octăhe'drum, i, n. Fr. anal. tétraconta-octaëdre, m.

Tetrădac'tŭlus, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; δάκτυλος, a finger.) Ornithol., Zoöl. Having four fingers or toes, as the Chersine tetradactyla. Applied by Viellot to a Family (Tetradactyli, nom. pl. m.) of the Grallatores; by Latreille, Ficinus and Carus to a Family of the Gallinaceæ, which have four toes on each foot. Applied by Klein to a Family of the Mammifera which have four toes to their anterior feet. Fr. anal. tétradactyle, adj. Germ. syn. vierfingerig, adj.

Tetrădĕca'pŏdus, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; δέκα, ten; πούς, a foot.) Zoöl. Applied by Blainville to a Class (Tetradecapoda, nom. pl. n.) of the Entozoa which have seven pairs of articulated appendages. Fr. anal. tétradécapode, adj.

Tetră'dĕnus, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; ἀδὴν, a gland.) Bot. Having four glands, as the petioles of the Passiflora tetradena: tetra'denous. Fr. anal. tétradène, adj.

Tetră'dўmus, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; δύναμις, power.) Bot. Applied to the lamellæ of the Agaricus when between two complete laminæ there are found seven others, four rather short and equal with each other; two a little longer, and a third still longer; the last three separated one from another by the four preceding. Fr. anal. tétradyme, adj. Germ. syn. viermächtig, adj.

Tetradynamia. Bot. See Tetradynamius.

Tetrădўnă'mius, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; δύναμις, power.) Bot. Having four powers; applied to a Linn. Class (Tetradynamia, nom. pl. f.) of plants, comprising such as have hermaphrodite flowers with six stamens, of which four are long and two short: tetradyna'mious, or tetrady'namous. See Note Cryptogamius. Fr. anal. tétradynamié, adj.

Tetrădў'năмus. The same as Tetradynamius.

Tetrăfō'liātus, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; fŏlium, a leaf.) Bot. Having bijugate leaves, as the Cassia tetrafoliata: tetrafo'liate. Fr. anal. tétrafolié, adj.

Te'tragon. (Τέτρα, four; γωνία, an angle.) Geom. Term for a figure of four angles and sides; a square, or quadrangle. Tetrăgōnum, i, n. Fr. anal. tétragone, m.

Tetra'gonal. (Tetrăgōnum, a tetragon.) Geom. Of or belonging to a tetragon. Tetrăgōnus, a, um. Fr. anal. tétragone, adj. Germ. syn. viereckig, adj.; vierseitig, adj.

Tetragōnŏcĕ'phălus, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; γωνία, an angle; κεφαλή, the head.) Zoöl. Having a head presenting four angles, as the Strongylus tetragonocephalus. Fr. anal. tétragonocéphale, adj.

Tetragōnŏ'lōbus, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; γωνία, an angle; λόβος, a lobe.) Bot. Having quadrangular fruits, as the Lotus tetragonolobus. Fr. anal. tétragonolobe, adj.

Tetrăgōnŏthēcus, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; γωνία, an angle; θήκη, a sheath.) Bot. Applied to a synanthereous plant which has the involucre tetragonal, as the Polymnia tetragonotheca. Fr. anal. tétragonothèque, adj.

Tetrăgōnūrĭdes, m. pl. Ichthyol. Term for a Family of acanthopterygian fishes, having the Tetragonurus for their type. Should be Tetragonuridæ, patron. m. pl. Fr. anal. tétragonurides, m. pl.

Tetrăgōnūrus, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; γωνία, an angle; οὐρὰ, a tail.) Zoöl. Having the tail squared or with four flat surfaces, as the Sorex tetragonurus. Fr. anal. tétragonure, adj.

Tetragram'ma. (Τέτρα, four; γραμμὴ, a line.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a variety of Mâcle in which the blackish lines which divide the angles of the interior rhomb border with those of the exterior rhomb. Fr. anal. tétragramme, adj.

Tetragynia. Bot. See Tetragynius.

Tetrăgȳ'nius, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; γυνή, a woman, the symbol of the pistil, or female organ of flowers.) Bot. Having four pistils; four-pistilled; applied to a Linn. Order of plants, comprising such as have four pistils: tetragy'nious. See Note Cryptogamius. Fr. anal. tétragynié, adj. Germ. syn. vierweibig, adj.

Tetră'gȳnus. The same as Tetragynius.

Tetrahe'dral. (Tetrăhedrum, a tetrahedron.) Geom. Of or belonging to a tetrahedron. Tetrăhe'drus, a, um. Fr. anal. tétraëdre, adj.

Tetrăhe'drĭcus, a, um. (Tetrăhedrum; terminal -ĭcus.) Geom. Of or belonging to a tetrahedron: tetrahe'drical. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 6. Fr. anal. tétraëdrique, adj.

Tetrahe'dron. (Τέτρα, four; ἕδρα, a basis.) Geom. A solid figure consisting of four equal sides. Tetrăhedrum, i, n. Fr. anal. tétraëdre, m.

Tetraheptahe'dron. (Τέτρα, four; ἕπτα, seven; ἕδρα, a base.) Crystall., Mineral. Term by Haüy for a variety the surface of which is divided into four assortments, each of seven faces. Tetrăheptăhe'drum, i, n. Fr. anal. tetraëptaëdre, adj.

Tetrăheptăhe'drus, a, um. (Crystall, Mineral., Of or belonging to a tetraheptahedron. Fr. anal. tétraëptaëdre, adj.

Tetrahexahe'dral. (Tetrahexahedrum.) Geom., Mineral. Of or belonging to a tetrahexahedron. Tetrăhexăhe'drus, a, um. Fr. anal. tétraëxaëdre, adj.

Tetrahexahe'dron. (Τέτρα, four; ἕξ, six; ἕδρα, a base.) Geom., Mineral. Term for a figure having four ranges of bases, or faces, six in each range. Tetrăhexăhe'drum, i, n. Fr. anal. tétraëxaëdre, m.

Tetrahy'drĭcus, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; hydrĭcus.) Chem. Applied to compounds in which the quantity of hydrogen is four times that of the other element, as the Nitruretum tetrahydricum. Fr. anal. tétrahydrique, adj.

Tetrăkis. (Τετράκις, four times.) Chem. A prefix to names of certain salts, denoting that one atom of acid is combined with four of base.

Tetrălĕ'pĭdus, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; λεπίς, a scale.) Having four scales: tetrale'pidous. Fr. anal. tétralépide, adj. Germ. syn. vierschüppig, adj.

Tetrămas'thos, Tetrămas'thus, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; μασθός or μαστός, the breast.) Anat., Physiol. Having four breasts; four breasted: tetrama'sthous. See Quadrimammatus. Fr. anal. tétramasthe, adj. Germ. syn. vierbrüstig, adj.

Tetrămĕ'rius, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; μέρος, a part.) Mineral. Applied by Bridsdorff to compound minerals in which the constituent electro-positive and electro-negative principles are binary. Fr. anal. tétramérié, adj. Germ. syn. viertheilig, adj.

Tetră'mĕrus, a, um. (Same as preceding.) Entomol. Applied to Coleoptera that have four joints to all their tarsi: tetra'merous. Fr. anal. tétramère, adj. Germ. syn. viertheilig, adj.

Tetrăme'trĭcus, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; μέτρον, a measure.) Crystall. Applied by Hausmann to forms the symmetry of which accommodates itself to a system of four axes, and which are supposed to refer to a like system: tetrame'tric. Fr. anal. tétramétrique, adj.

Tetră'mўron, Tetră'mўrum, i, n. (Τέτρα, four; μύρον, an ointment.) Pharm. Old term for an ointment of four ingredients.

Tetrandria. Bot. See Tetrandrius.

Tetran'drius, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; ἀνήρ, a man, the symbol of the stamen, or male organ of flowers.) Bot. Having four stamens; four-stamened; applied to a Linn. Class (Tetrandria, nom. pl. n.) of plants, comprising such as have hermaphrodite flowers with four stamens of equal length: tetrand'rious or tetran'drous. See Note Cryptogamius. Fr. anal. tétrandre, adj. Germ. syn. viermannig, adj.

Tetran'drus. The same as Tetrandrius.

Tetrănēmus, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; νῆμα, a thread of a spider's web.) Entomol., Zoöl. Having four filaments or tentacula, as the Oceania tetranema. Fr. anal. tétranème, adj.

Te'trao, ōnis, f. (Τέτραξ.) Ornithol. Name of a genus of the Gallinaceæ; the bustard. Fr. syn. outarde, f. Germ. syn. Trappgans, f.

Tetrao Te'trix. Ornithol. Systematic name of the black cock or black grouse, a rare bird, the flesh of which is nutritious and easy of digestion. Fr. syn. le pétit tétras. Germ. syn. Birkhuhn, n.

Tetraōnĭdæ, patron. m. pl. Ornithol. Applied by Vigors to a Family of the Gallinaceæ, having the Tetrao for their type. Fr. anal. tétraonides, m. pl.

Tetrăpĕ'tălus, a, um. (Τέτρα, four; πέταλον, a petal.) Bot. Having four petals; four-petalled: tetrape'talous. Fr. anal. tétrapétale, adj. Germ. syn. vierblümenblattrig, adj.

Trichrois'mus, i, m. (Tri-; χρόα, colour.) Nat. Philos. Term for a phenomenon which takes place when a body being placed between the eye and the light, seems to be of three different colours, according to the way in which the luminous rays traverse it. Soret observed this in a topaz of Brazil, the colours of which varied from yellowish red to violet and yellowish white: tri'chroism. Fr. anal. trichroisme, m.

Trĭchroĭtis, is, e. Nat. Philos. Applied by Beudant to substances (m. pl.) that present the phenomenon of trichroism, or which manifest a triple colour. Fr. anal. trichroïte, adj.

Trĭchūris, ĭdis, f. (Θρὶξ, a hair.) Zoöl. Name for the Entozöon, commonly called the long hair-worm. Fr. anal. trichuride, m. Germ. syn. Haarwurm, m.

Trĭchūris Bul'bi. Med., Pathol. Epithet for a small tumour in the front of the eyeball, with hairs growing on it.

Trĭcobal'tĭcus. Chem. Applied, like Triammonicus, as to a cobaltic subsalt. Fr. anal. tricobaltique, adj.

Tricoc'cous. (Τρεῖς, three; κόκκος, a seed or grain.) Bot. Having three seeds or grains; three-seeded. Trĭcoc'cus, a, um. Fr. anal. tricoque, adj.

Tricor. Chem. Old term for Aurum.

Trĭcu'prĭcus. Chem. Applied, like Triammonicus, as to a cupric subsalt. Fr. anal. tricuivrique, adj. Ger.m syn. dreikupfern, adj.

Tricus'pid. (Tres, three; cuspis, a point.) Having three points; three-pointed. Anat. Applied to the auriculo-ventricular valves of the right side of the heart. Trĭcus'pis, ĭdis, adj. Trĭcuspĭdātus, a, um. See Trisulcus. Fr. anal. tricuspide, adj. Germ. syn. dreispitzig, adj.

Trĭdacnāceus, a, um. Zoöl. Applied by Menke to a Family (nom. pl. n.) of the Elatobranchia Pelicoidea, having the Tridacna for their type. Fr. anal. tridacnacé, adj.

Trĭdac'neus, a, um. } Zoöl. Applied similarly Trĭdac'nĭtis, is, e. } to the preceding, as having relation to the Tridacna.

Trĭdȳ'nămus, a, um. (Tri-; δύναμις, power.) Bot. Applied by Cassel to the stamens of the daffodil, of which three are longer than the others. Fr. anal. tridyname, adj. Germ. syn. dreikräftig, adj.

Triencĕ'phălus, a, um. (Tri-; ἐγκέφαλον, the brain.) Med., Physiol. Applied by Geoffroy-Saint-Hilaire to a class of monsters deprived of three organs of sense, smell, hearing, and sight. Fr. anal. triencéphale, adj.

Trifa'cial. (Tres, three; făcies, the face.) Anat. Applied to the Trigemini nervi, or fifth pair of nerves, their three divisions being distributed on the face. Trĭfăcĭālis, is, e. Fr. anal. trifacial, adj. Germ. syn. dreigesichtig, adj.

Trifer'rĭcus. Chem. Applied the same as Triammonicus, as to a ferric subsalt. Fr. anal. triferrique, adj.

Trifer'rōsus. Chem. Applied the same as Triammonicus, as to a ferrous subsalt. Fr. anal. triferreux, adj.

Trĭ'fĭdus, a, um. (Tres, three; findo, to cleave.) Having three clefts or separations; three-clefted: tri'fid. Fr. anal. trifide, adj. Germ. syn. dreispaltig, adj.

Trĭfō'lium, ii, n. (Tres, three; fŏlium, a leaf; because it has three leaves on each stalk.) A Linn. genus of plants, Cl. Pentandria; Ord. Monogynia. Fr. syn. trèfle, m. Germ. syn. Dreiblatt, n.; Klee, m.

Trĭfō'lium Aquātĭcum. Bot. A name for the Menyanthes trifoliata, or buckbean.

Trĭfō'lium Arven'se. Bot. A name for the Plantago media, or hare's-foot trefoil.

Trĭfō'lium Au'reum. Bot. A name for the Anemone hepatica of Linnæus.

Trĭfō'lium Cærŭ'leum. Bot. The name of the sweet trefoil.

Trĭfō'lium Fibrīnum. Bot. A name for the Menyanthes trifoliata, or buckbean.

Trĭfō'lium Hēpă'tĭcum. Bot. A name for the Anemone hepatica.

Trĭfō'lium Mĕlĭlōtus Offĭcīnālis. Bot. Systematic name of the officinal melilot, said to be resolvent, anodyne, and emollient; used in clysters, fomentations, and other external applications; also called Corona regia, Lotus sylvestris, Sertula campana, Trifolium caballinum, and Trifolium odoratum.

Trĭfō'lium Pălūdōsum. Bot. A name for the Menyanthes trifoliata, or buckbean.

Trĭgĕ'mĭnus, a, um. (Tres, three; gĕminus, double.) Threefold. Anat. Applied to the fifth pair of nerves (Trigemini, nom. pl. m.) which, having formed the Gasserian ganglion, are divided into three branches, the ophthalmic, and the superior and inferior maxillary. Fr. anal. trigéminé, adj.

Trĭ'glĭdes, patron. m. pl. Ichthyol. Name by Risso for a Family having the Trigla for their type. Fr. anal. triglides, m. pl.

Triglōchin. (Τρεῖς, three; γλωχὶν, a point of a dart.) Anat. Term the same as Tricuspis; three-pointed.

Triglōchīneus, a, um. Bot. Applied by Reichenbach to a group (nom. pl. n.) of the Liliaceæ, having the Triglochin for their type. Fr. anal. triglochiné, adj.

Triglos'seus, a, um. Bot. Applied to a section (nom. pl. f.), admitted by Nees von Esenbeck, of the Bambuseæ, having the Triglossum for their type. Fr. anal. triglossé, adj.

Triglossīneus. Similar to Triglosseus.

Trĭ'glўphus, a, um. (Tri-; γλύπτω, to engrave.) Crystall. Applied by Haüy to a crystal like a cube with striæ, having three perpendicular directions upon three faces. Fr. anal. triglyphe, adj.

Tri'gon. (Τρεῖς, three; γωνία, an angle.) Anat. See Trigone. Geom. A figure of three equal angles and sides; a triangle. Trĭgōnum, i, n. Fr. anal. trigone, m. Germ. syn. Dreieck, m.

Trigo'nal. (Trĭgōnum, a triangle.) Geom. Of or belonging to a trigon or triangle; having three angles. Trĭgōnus, a, um. Fr. anal. trigone, adj. Germ. syn. dreieckig, adj.

Tri'gone. (Trĭgōnum, a triangle.) Anat. Term for the small triangular space, smooth and dense, on the mucous membrane lining the urinary bladder, and which is denoted by imaginary lines from the orifice of the urethra to and between the orifices of the ureters. Trĭgōnus, i, m. Fr. syn. trigone vésicale.

Trĭgōnel'la, æ, f. (Dim. Trĭgōn, a three-sided place; from its small triangular flower.) Bot. A Linn. genus of plants, Cl. Diadelphia; Ord. Decandria. Fr. syn. fenugrec, m.

Trĭgōnel'la Fœ'num Græ'cum. Bot. Systematic name of the fenugreek, a native of Montpelier, the seeds of which are made into meal and used in poultices with milk, to favour the formation of pus; also called Ægoceras, Buceras, Carphos, Epiceras, and Fœnum-græcum.

Trĭgōnĭcor'nis, is, e. (Trĭgōnus; cornu, a horn.) Entomol. Having trigonal antennæ. Fr. anal. trigonicorne, adj. Germ. syn. dreieckhornig, adj.

Trigōnŏcar'pus, a, um. (Trĭgōnus; καρπὸς, fruit.) Bot. Having trigonal fruit. Fr. anal. trigonocarpe, adj. Germ. syn. dreieckfruchtig, adj.

Trĭgōnŏcĕ'phălus, a, um. (Trĭgōnus; κεφαλὴ, a head.) Zoöl. Having a triangular head, as the Distoma trigonocephalum. Fr. anal. trigonocéphale, adj. Germ. syn. dreieckkopfig, adj.

Trigonome'trical. Of or belonging to the art of trigonometry. Trĭgŏnŏmĕ'trĭcus, a, um. Fr. anal. trigonométrique, adj.

Trigonome'trical Canon. Term applied to a table exhibiting the length of the sine, tangent, and secant to every degree and minute of the quadrant with respect to the radius, which is supposed unity, and conceived to be divided into 10,000 or more decimal parts.

Trigono'metry. (Τρίγωνον, a triangle; μετρέω, to measure.) Term for that art by which, having given three parts of a triangle (except the three angles), the rest are determined. Trĭgŏnŏmĕ'tria, æ, f. Fr. and Germ. anal. trigonométrie, f.

Trĭgōnŭlāris, is, e. That which is almost trigonal. Fr. anal. trigonulaire, adj.

Trigynia. Bot. See Trigynius.

Trĭgŷ'nius, a, um. (Τρεῖς, three; γυνὴ, a woman; the symbol of the pistil, or female organ of flowers.) Bot. Having three pistils; three pistilled; applied to a Linn. Order (Trigynia, nom. pl. n.) of plants comprising such as have three pistils: trigy'nious. See Note Cryptogamius. Fr. anal. trigyne, adj. Germ. syn. dreiweibig, adj.

Trihe'drĭcus, a, um. } (Tri-; ἕδρα, a base.)
Trihe'drus, a, um. } Having three bases or faces. Fr. anal. triëdre, adj. Germ. syn. dreisitzend, part. adj.

Trĭhĭlātus, a, um. (Tres, three; hĭlum, the eye, or scar of a seed.) Bot. Having three hila, or eyes; applied to an Order (Trihilatæ, nom. pl. f.) in Linnæus's Fragments of a Natural Method, embracing plants that have the hilum, or scar, well marked, the style having three stigmas. Fr. anal. trihilate, adj.

Trihydrargў'rĭcus. } Applied the same as Tri-
Trĭhydrargyrōsus. } ammonicus, as to a hydrargyric and a hydrargyrous subsalt. Fr. anal. hydrargyrique, adj.; trihydrargyreux, adj.

Trĭhy'drĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to the third degree of hydrogenation of bodies that combine in many different proportions with hydrogen; or to compounds of three atoms of hydrogen with one of another simple body. Fr. anal. trihydrique, adj.

Triiōdūrētum, i, n. Chem. An ioduret containing three times as much iodine as the corresponding simple ioduret, as the Triioduretum potassii: a triio'duret. Fr. anal. triiodure, m.

Trilabe. (Τρεῖς, three; λαβεῖν, to lay hold on often.) Med., Surg. Name of an instrument for extracting foreign bodies of sufficiently moderate size from the bladder through the urethra, having three branches capable of being expanded in the bladder, and then closed on the object to be withdrawn.

Trilĭ'thĭcus. Chem. Applied, like Triammonicus, as to a lithic subsalt. Fr. anal. trilithique, adj.

Trĭlōbĭtis, is, e. (Tres, three; lŏbus, a lobe.) Zoöl. Having three lobes, or sets of lobes; applied to a doubtful kind (nom. pl. m.) of the Crustacea, in which a number of transversal segments are divided into three ranges of parts or lobes, by two longitudinal sulci, or grooves: tri'lobite. Fr. anal. trilobite, adj.

Trĭmagnēsĭcus. Chem. Applied, like Triammonicus, as to a magnesic subsalt. Fr. anal. trimagnésique, adj.

Trimam'mius, a, um. (Tres, three; mamma, the breast.) Anat., Physiol. Having three breasts, or rather three nipples: trimam'mial. Fr. anal. trimammié, adj.

Trĭmangănōsus. Chem. Applied, like Triammonicus, as to a manganous subsalt. Fr. anal. trimanganeux, adj.

Trĭ'mĕrus, a, um. (Tri-; μέρος, a part.) Entomol. Applied to a section (nom. pl. n.) of the Coleoptera having three joints to all the tarsi. Fr. anal. triméré, adj. Germ. syn. dreitheilig, adj.

Trĭmĕ'trĭcus, a, um. (Tri-; μετρέω, to measure.) Crystall. Applied by Hausmann to forms apparently related to a system of axes, three in number. Fr. anal. trimétrique, adj.

having or of three forms. Fr. anal. trimorphe, adj. Germ. syn. dreigörmig, adj.

Trinicco'lĭcus. Chem. Applied, like Triammonicus, as to a niccolic subsalt. Fr. anal. triniccolique, adj.

Tri'nity, Herb. Bot. Common name for the herb Anemone hepatica.

Triŏ'dĭcus, a, um. (Tri-; ὁδός, a road.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a variety the sign of which contains three species of laws; one simple, the second mixed, and the third intermediate, as the Calx carbonatus triodicus. Fr. anal. triodique, adj.

Triœcia. See Triœcius.

Triœ'cius, a, um. (Tri-; οἶκος, a house.) Bot. Applied to a Linn. Order (Triœcia, nom. pl. n.) containing plants of which one bears hermaphrodite, another male, and a third female flowers: triœ'cious. See Note Cryptogamius. Fr. anal. triœcié, adj.

Triony'chĭdæ, patron. m. pl. Zoöl. Applied to a Family of chelonian reptiles containing the Trionyx. Fr. anal. trionychides, m. pl.

Triŏnychoïdes. } Zoöl. Applied like Triony-
Triŏnÿ'cĭdes. } chidæ.

Trior'chis, is, or eos, m. (Τρεῖς, three; ὄρχις, a testicle.) Anat., Physiol. One that has three testicles. Fr. anal. triorchide, m. Germ. syn. Dreihodiger, m.

Triornithŏ'phŏrus, a, um. (Tri-; ὄρνις, a bird; φέρω, to bear.) Bot. The Antirrhinum triornithophorum has flowers so disposed and formed that they seem to represent three birds with extended wings. Fr. anal. triornithophore, adj.

Trios'teum, i, n. Bot. A Linn. genus of plants, Cl. Pentandria; Ord. Monogynia; Juss. Caprifoliaceæ. M. Med. Pharmacopœial name (U.S.A.) for the root of Triosteum perfoliatum.

Trios'teum Perfŏliātum. Bot., M. Med. Systematic name of the fever-root.

Trĭpas'trum Apel'lĭdis. } Surg. Old term for Trĭpas'trum Archĭmēdis. } an instrument for extending fractured limbs, because it resembles a machine invented by Appellides or Archimedes for launching ships, and because it was worked by means of three cords.

Trĭpes, ĕdis, m. (Tres, three; pes, a foot.) Old name of an instrument resting on three feet for placing any vessel on, that fire may be applied below; a tripod. Fr. anal. trépied, m. Germ. syn. Dreifuss, m.

Trĭpetheliāceus, a, um. Bot. Applied by Eschweiler and Fée to a group (pl. f.) of the Lichenes, having the Tripethelium for their type. Fr. anal. tripéthéliacé, adj.

Trĭphar'măcum, i, m. (Tri-; φάρμακον, a medicine.) Med., Pharm. Term for a medicine of three ingredients. Fr. anal. tripharmaque, m.

Trĭphyl'lus, a, um. (Τρεῖς, three; φύλλον, a leaf.) Bot. Having three leaves; three-leaved: triphyl'lous. Fr. anal. triphylle, adj. Germ. syn. dreiblättrig, adj.

Trĭ'pĭlus, a, um. (Tri-; pĭlus, hair.) Entomol. Applied by some to the Ichneumon, because of three bristles which compose its terebella. Fr. anal. tripile, adj. Germ. syn. dreihaarig, adj.

Trĭplătĭnĭcus. Chem. Applied, like Triammonicus, as to a platinic subsalt. Fr. anal. triplatinique, adj.

Triplĭner'vis, is, e. (Triplus, triple; nervus, a nerve.) Bot. Triply-nerved; triply-ribbed; applied to leaves which have two large ribs branching off from the main one above the base, as in the sunflower, etc. Fr. anal. triplinervé, adj. Germ. syn. dreifachgeadert, adj.

Triplŏhe'drĭcus, a, um. (Τριπλόος, triple; ἕδρα, a base.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a variety the surface of which presents towards each summit three orders of facets, each of which is triple, as the Calx carbonatus triplohedricus. Fr. anal. triplohédrique, adj.

Triplŏ'pia, æ, f. (Τρεῖς, three; ὄπτομαι, to see.) Med., Pathol. A term for a kind of disordered vision in which objects are tripled; nearly synonymous with Diplopia. See Visus triplex. Fr. and Germ. anal. triplopie, f.

Triplo'ptĕrus, a, um. (Τριπλόος, triple; πτέρον, a wing.) Zoöl. The Callianira triploptera has on each side of the body a membranous wing or fin divided into three small laminæ. Fr. anal. triploptère, adj.

Triplostĕmŏnis, is, e. (Τριπλόος, triple; στήμων, a stamen.) Bot. Applied by Wachendorff to plants in which the stamens are double in number of the divisions of the corol. Fr. anal. triplostémone, adj.

Triplum'bĭcus. Chem. Applied, like Triammonicus, as to a plumbic subsalt. Fr. anal. triplombique, adj.

Trĭ'polis. Chem. Old name for an intensely yellow-coloured earth; a species of Ochra.

Trĭpotas'sĭcus. Chem. Applied, like Triammonicus, as to a potassic subsalt. Fr. anal. tripotassique, adj.

Trĭpŭ'dium, ii, n. (Trĭpŭdio, to dance.) Med., Pathol. Old name for Chorea; a dancing, saltation, or kind of leaping.

Trĭ'quĕtrus, a, um. (As if Trĭquadrus, that is, quadrate, yet having the form of a triangle, one of the sides of the square being so small as to form but a more obtuse angle of the triangle.) Triangular; trigonal; three-sided. Anat., Bot. Applied to parts of bones, to stems, leaves, etc. Fr. anal. triquètre, adj. Germ. syn. dreieckig, adj.

Tris-. (Τρεῖς, three.) Chem. A prefix denoting that one atom of acid is combined with three of base.

Trĭsal, ālis, m. Chem. A salt containing three times as much acid to the same quantity of base, or three times as much base to the same quantity of acid, as the corresponding neutral salt. Fr. anal. trisel, Germ. syn. Dreisalz, n.

Trĭsĭsŏgōnus, a, um. (Τρεῖς, three; ἴσος, the same; γωνία, an angle.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a variety in which the six angles, planes, or eminences are equal, two by two, as the Calx carbonatus trisisogonus. Fr. anal. trisisogone, adj.

Tris'mus, i, m. (Τρίζω, to gnash.) Med., Pathol. Term for lock-jaw or locked-jaw. See Tetanus Trismus, Capistrum. Fr. anal.

Tris'mus Nascen'tium. Med., Pathol. The locked jaw of infants, which attacks them usually within two weeks from their birth. Fr. anal. trismus des enfants. Germ. syn. der Kinnleidenkrampf Neugebornen.

Tris'mus Traumă'ticus. Med., Pathol. Traumatic locked-jaw, or that which attacks persons of all ages from cold or a wound. Fr. anal. trismus traumatique.

Trisŏdĭcus. Chem. Applied, like Triammonicus, in reference to a sodic subsalt. Fr. anal. trisodique, adj.

Trispastrum. See Tripastrum Apellidis.

Trisper'mon. (Τρεῖς, three; σπέρμα, a seed.) Pharm. Old term for a certain cataplasm composed of three kinds of seed, cumin, parsley, and laurel berries.

Trisplan'chnia, æ, f. Med., Pathol. Term by Scip. Pinel for an affection of the trisplanchnic or great sympathetic nerve; applied to oriental cholera. Fr. and Germ. anal. trisplanchnie, f.

Trisplan'chnĭcus, a, um. (Tri-; σπλάγχνον, a viscus; terminal -ικὸς.) Anat. Applied by Chaussier to the sympathetic nerve, because it is connected with the viscera of the three great cavities of the body: trisplan'chnic. Fr. anal. trisplanchnique, adj.

Trissăgo, ĭnis, f. (Unascertained.) Bot. A name for the Teucrium chamædrys, or common germander. Fr. syn. germandrée commune.

Tristan'nĭcus. } Chem. Applied, like Tricu-
Tristan'nōsus. } pricus, as to a stannic or a stannous subsalt. Fr. anal. tristannique, adj.; tristanneux, adj.

Tristo. Nat. Philos. A Paracelsian term for the material fire which is contained in each of the four elements.

Tristron'tĭcus. Chem. Applied, like Triammonicus, as to a strontic subsalt. Fr. anal. tristrontique, adj.

Trĭsubtractīvus, a, um. (Tri-; subtrăho, to take from.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a variety in the sign of which the stronger exposant is less by three unities than the sum of the other exposants. Fr. anal. trisoustractif, adj.

Trĭsul'cus, a, um. (Tres, three; sulcus, a furrow.) Anat. Having three furrows, hollows, or grooves; applied the same as Tricuspis, to the valves of the heart between the auricle and ventricle of the right side. Fr. anal. trisulque, adj.

Trisulphomolyb'date. Chem. Term for a supersalt containing three times as much molybdic sulphide to the same quantity of base as the corresponding neutral salt. Trĭsulfŏmŏlyb'das, ātis, f. Fr. anal. trisulfomolybdate, m.

Trisul'phuret. Chem. A sulphuret with three times as much base as in another combination of the last with the same body, as the Trisulphuretum potassicum. Fr. anal. trisulphure, m.

Trĭtæŏ'phyus, a, um. (Τριταιοφυὴς, of the nature of tertian fever.) Med., Pathol. Applied (f. sing. febris understood) to tertian fever. Fr. anal. tritéophyé, adj.

Trĭtĭ'ceus, a, um. -Bot. Applied by Link to a tribe (nom. pl. f.) of the Gramineæ, having the Triticum for their type. Fr. anal. triticé, adj.

Triticin'. Chem. Term by Hermbstædt for the gluten of wheat. Trĭtĭcīna, æ, f. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 4. Fr. anal. triticine, f.

Trĭtĭcum, i, n. (Tĕro, to thresh from the husk.) A Linn. genus of plants, Cl. Triandria; Ord. Digynia. Juss. Gramineæ. See Agriosteari. Fr. syn. froment, m. Germ. syn. Wizen, m.

Trĭtĭcum Hyber'num. The systematic name of the wheatplant.

Trĭtĭcum Rĕpens. Bot. Name of the couch-grass, or dog's grass, the roots of which are aperient; also called Gramen caninum, G. Dioscoridis, G. repens, Loliaceum radice repente.

Trĭtio, ōnis, f. The same as Trituration.

Trĭtōma. Surg. Old name of an instrument for the ears, according to Albucasis.

Tritōniăceus, a, um. Zoöl. Applied by Menke to a Family (f. pl.) of the Gasteropoda Gymnobranchia, having the Tritonia for their type. Fr. anal. tritoniacé, adj.

Tritōniānus, a, um. Geognos. Applied by Brongniart and Omalius to a group of thalassic, sedimentous earths in which is found the débris of animals analogous to those that live in the sea. Fr. anal. tritonien, adj.

Tritōnius. Same as Tritoniaceus.

Trītor, ōris, m. (Tĕro, to rub or break down.) A grinder. Zoöl. Applied to certain (Tritores, nom. pl.) of the Crustacea, Arachnides, and Insecta, that have jaws fitted for triturating their food.

Trītōrium, ii, n. (Tĕro, to rub or break down.) Pharm. Term for a mortar; also a glass for separating oil from water in distillation; formerly used the same as Infundibulum, according to Ruland and Johnson, and Paracelsus.

Trito'xide. (Τρὶς, thrice; oxŭdum, an oxide.) Chem. A term applied to certain substances susceptible of several stages of oxidisement, to express the third stage. Trĭtō'xŭdum, i, n. Fr. anal. tritoxide, m.

Trītūra, æ, f. } (Tĕro, to crumble in Trītūrātio, ōnis, f. } pieces.) Term for the process of reducing solid bodies to powder by continued rubbing: tritura'tion. Fr. anal. trituration, f. Germ. syn. Zerstörung, f.

Trītus, ûs, m. The same as Trituration.

Triūnībībīnāris, is, e. (Tri-; ūnus, one; bis, twice; bīnus, double.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a variety resulting from three decreases by one row, and two by two rows, as the Baryta sulphata triunibibinaris. Fr. anal. triunibibinaire, adj.

Triūnībīnāris, is, e. (Tri-; ūnus, one; bīnus, two by two.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a variety resulting from four decreases, three by one row, and one by two, as the Plumbum carbonatum triunibinare. Fr. anal. triunibinaire, adj.

Potassa nitrata triunitaris. Fr. anal. triunitaire, adj.

Triūrus, a, um. (Tri-; οὐρὰ, tail.) Ornithol. Having three tails, as the Turdus triurus, of the caudal feathers of which the four exterior of each side are white, the others blackish. Fr. anal. triure, adj. Germ. syn. dreischwanzig, adj.

Trĭ'vial. (Trĭvium, a place where three sundry ways meet, passing straight forward and to the right and left; and so, common or resorted to, by the passers by each.) Bot. Used synonymously with specific, and added to the generic name to distinguish the particular species, as Rosa, the name of a genus, whose trivial names are Canina, Centifolia, Gallica, etc. Trĭviālis, is, e. Fr. anal. trivial, adj. Germ. syn. schlickt, adj.

Trixĭ'deus, a, um. Bot. Applied by D. Don to a Family (f. pl.) of the Labiatiflores; by Cassini and Lessing to a section of the Nassauviæ, having the Trixis for their type. Fr. anal. trixidé, adj.

Trizin'cĭcus. } Chem. Applied, like Triammo-
Trizir'conĭcus. } nicus, as to a zincic and a zirconic subsalt. Fr. anal. trizincique, adj.; trizirconique, adj.

Upupus, a, um. Ornithol. Applied by Lesson to a Family (n. pl.) having the Upupa for their type. Fr. anal. upupé, adj.

U'răchus, i, m. (Οὖρον, urine.) Anat. Name for the ligamentous cord arising from the base of the urinary bladder, to which it is attached as far as the superior region, and terminating in the umbilical cord. In the fœtus of four-footed animals it is a hollow tube, conveying the urine to the allantoid membrane. See Urinaculum. Fr. anal. ouraque, m. Germ. syn. Harnstrang, f.

Uracrāsia, æ, f. (Οὖρον, urine; ἀκρασία, ill-temperature.) Med., Pathol. Term for a bad quality of the urine. Fr. anal. uracrasie, f. Germ. syn. die Entmischung oder übel Mischung des Harns.

Uræ'mia, æ, f. (Urēa, a constituent of urine; αἷμα, blood.) Chem., Pathol. Term for the presence of urea in the blood: ure'my. Fr. and Germ. anal. urémie, f.

Uræ'on. (Οὐραῖον.) Anat. Old name for the extremity of a bone, especially of the sacrum.

Urāgion. Urāgium, ii, n. } (Οὐραγὸς, the leader of the last troop or band.) Anat. An old term for the apex of the heart.

Urăgōgus, a, um. (Οὖρον, the urine; ἄγω, to drive off.) Bot. Applied to the Myginda uragoga, because its root is employed as a diuretic: u'ragogue. See Note Cholagogus. Fr. anal. uragogue, adj.

U'ramile. Chem. Term for a new substance, consisting in fine crystals of a silky lustre, obtained by mixing a hot and saturated solution of alloxantin with an equal volume of solution of sal ammoniac.

Urami'lic. (Uramile; terminal -ic.) Chem. Term applied to an acid formed by the continued action of dilute acids on uramile. Urămī'lĭcus, a, um. Fr. anal. uramilique, adj.

U'ranate. Chem. Term for a combination of uranic oxide with a salifiable base. Fr. anal. uranate, m.

Ură'nĭcŏcal'cĭcus, a, um. Ură'nĭcŏcu'prĭcus, a, um. Ură'nĭcŏpotas'sĭcus, a, um. } Chem. Applied by Berzelius to double salts resulting from the combination of a uranic with a calcic, a cupric, and a potassic salt respectively. Fr. anal. uranicocalcique, adj.; uranicocuivrique, adj.; uranicopotassique, adj.

Ură'nĭcus, a, um. (Urănium; terminal -ĭcus.) Chem. Applied by Berzelius to the second degree of oxidation (Oxydum uranicum) of uranium, and to its combinations with the acids (Sales uranici): ura'nic. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. t. 6. Fr. anal. uranique, adj.

Ură'nĭdes, m. pl. Mineral. Applied by Beudant to a Family comprising Uranium and its combinations. Fr. anal. uranides, m. pl.

Urăniscĭnītis, ĭdis, f. (Urăniscus; terminal -ītis.) Med., Pathol. Term for inflammation of the palate. Fr. anal. uraniscinite, f. Germ. syn. die Entzündung des Gaumens.

Urăniscoplas'tĭce, es, f. (Urăniscus; πλάσσω, to form.) Med., Surg. Term for the (artificial) formation of a palate. Fr. anal. uraniscoplastique, f. Germ. syn. die (kunstliche) Gaumenbildung.

Urăniscorrhă'phia, æ, f. (Urăniscus; ῥαφή, a seam.) Anat. Term for the suture of the palate. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. uraniscorrhaphie, f. Germ. syn. Gaumennath, f.

Urănis'cus, i, m. (Οὐρανίσκος, from οὐρανὸς, the heavens; from its arched form.) Anat. Old term used by Galen for the palate.

Uranite. Chem., Mineral. See Uranium.

Urā'nium, ii, n. Chem., Mineral. Name of Uranite, a metal discovered by Klaproth in 1789, found in combination with sulphur and portions of iron, lead, and silex, in the mineral called Pechblende, or oxide of uranium; combined with carbonic acid it forms the Chalcolite, or green mica; and mixed with oxide of iron it forms the Uranic ochre.

Urănŏgrā'phia, æ, f. (Οὐρανὸς, heaven; γράφω, to write.) Astron. Term for a description of the heavens. Bode published a work under this title in 1801, and Francœur another in 1821: urano'graphy. Fr. and Germ. anal. uranographie, f.

Urănŏlītes. Same as Ærolites.

Urănŏlŏ'gia, æ, f. (Οὐρανὸς, heaven; λόγος, a discourse.) Astron. Term for a treatise on the heavens. E. Schleusing published a work under this title in 1648: urano'logy. Fr. and Germ. anal. uranologie, f.

Uranorrhaphis. See Uraniscorrhaphia.

Urănŏ'scŏpus, a, um. (Οὐρανὸς, heaven; σκοπέω, to see.) Looking to the heavens. Ichthyol. Applied to the Cyprinus uranoscopus, the eyes of which are directed upwards. Fr. anal. uranoscope, adj.

Urănōsŏpotas'sĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to double salts resulting from the combination of a uranous with a potassic salt: uranosopotas'sic. Fr. anal. uranosopotassique, adj.

Urănōsus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to the first degree of oxidation (Oxydum uranosum) of uranium, to the combinations of that oxide with acids (Sales uranosi), and of the metal with halogenous bodies. Fr. anal. uraneux, adj.

Uran'thus, a, um. (Οὐρὰ, a tail; ἄνθος, a flower.) Zoöl. The Clymene uranthus has its anus surrounded by two circles of papillæ. Fr. anal. uranthe, adj. Germ. syn. schwanzblumig, adj.

Urarin'. Chem. Name for an organic alkali which Roulin and Roussingault have found in urari, a poison with which the savages of America empoison the iron points of their arrows. Urarīna, æ, f. See Woorara. Fr. anal. urarine, f.

U'rate. (Urĭcum acĭdum, Uric acid; terminal -ate.) Chem. Term for a combination of uric or lithic acid with a salifiable base. Uras, ātis, f. Fr. anal. urate, m. Germ. syn. harnsauer Salz.

Urceĭfor'mis, is, e. (Urceus, a vase; forma, likeness.) Zoöl. Formed like a vase or goblet, as the polypi of the Plumatella cristata: urce'iform. Fr. anal. urcéiforme, adj. Germ. anal. urnenförmig, adj.

Urce'ŏla, æ, f. (Urceŏlus, a small pitcher; from its use in scouring glazed pitchers.) Bot. A name for the Parietaria officinalis of Linnæus. Fr. anal. urcéole, m.

Urceŏlārie'us, a, um. Zoöl. Applied by Bory to a Family (f. pl.) of the microscopic Stomoblephari, having the Urceolaria for their type. Fr. anal. urcéolarié, adj.

Urceŏlāris, is, e. Same as Urceolatus.

Urceŏlātus, a, um. (Urceŏlus, a little water-pitcher.) Bot. Shaped or swelling out like a water-pitcher; ventricose: urce'olate; applied to calyces. Fr. anal. urcéolé, adj. Germ. syn. krugförmig, adj.; urnenförmig, adj.

Urceŏlĭfĕrus, a, um. (Urceŏlus, a little vase; fĕro, to bear.) Bot. Having small calyces like little goblets: urceoli'ferous. Fr. anal. urcéolifère, adj. Germ. syn. urnentragend, adj.

Urēa, æ, f. (Urīna, the urine.) Chem. Name for a constituent of the urine which crystallizes in four-sided prisms, transparent and colourless, with a slight pearly lustre. It has a peculiar odour, but not urinous, producing no effect on litmus or turmeric papers, and is not changed by the atmosphere, save in very damp weather, when it becomes slightly deliquescent. Fr. anal. urée, f. Germ. syn. Harnstoff, m.

Urēma, ātis, n. (Οὐρέω, to pass water or urine.) Med. Old term the same as Urina, according to Hippocrates.

Ureorrhœ'a, æ, f. (Οὖρον, the urine; ῥέω, to flow.) Med., Pathol. Term for Diabetes, or morbidly increased flow of urine. See Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. uréorrhée, f. Germ. syn. der reichlich Harnabgang.

Ure'reus, a, um. Bot. Applied by A. Richard to a group (f. pl.) of the Urticeæ, having the Urera for their type. Fr. anal. uréré, adj.

Urēsiæsthēsis, is, or eos, f. (Urēsis; aἴσθησις, a perception.) Med., Pathol. Term by Lor. Martini for a sense or feeling of diuresis. Fr. anal. urésiæsthèse, f. Germ. syn. Pisserigsein, n.

Urēsis, is, or eos, f. (Οὐρέω, to pass water or urine.) Med., Physiol. Old term for Micturition, or the act of passing urine. Fr. anal. urèse, f. Germ. syn. Harnen, n.

-U'ret. (Uro, to burn.) Chem. A terminal denoting a compound of simple inflammable bodies with each other, or with metals, as sulph*uret* of phosphorus, carb*uret* of iron, etc.

Urēter, ēris, m. (Οὐρέω, to pass urine.) Anat. Name of the membranous tube through which the urine is conveyed from the kidney to the urinary bladder. Fr. anal. urétère, m. Germ. syn. Harnleiter, m.

Urētēral'gia, æ, f. (Urēter; ἄλγος, pain.)

Med.,Pathol. Term for pain in the ureters. Fr. anal. urétéralgie, f. Germ. syn. ein Schmerz in den Harnleitern.

Urētērītis, ĭdis, f. (Urēter, the ureter; terminal -ītis.) Med., Pathol. Term for inflammation of the ureter. Fr. anal. urétérite, f. Germ. syn. Harnleiterentzündung, f.

Urētērŏdia'lўsis, is, or eos, f. (Urēter; διάλυσις, a loosing or separating.) Med., Pathol. Term for a rupture of one or both ureters. Fr. anal. urétérodialyse, f. Germ. syn. Zertrennung eines oder beider Harnleiter.

Urētērŏlĭthi'ăsis, is, or eos, f. (Urēter; lĭthīăsis, formation of stone.) Med., Pathol. Term for the generating of stone in the ureters. Fr. anal. urétérolithiase, f. Germ. syn. die Erzeugung von Steinen in den Harnleitern.

Urētērŏ'lўsis, is, or eos, f. The same as Ureterodialysis.

Urētērŏpyōsis, is, or eos, f. (Urēter; pyōsis, the formation of pus.) Med., Pathol. Term for suppuration in the ureters. Fr. anal. urétéropyose, f. Germ. syn. eine Vereiterung in den Harnleitern.

Urētērorrhăgia, æ, f. (Urēter; ῥήγνυμι, to burst forth.) Med., Pathol. Term for a sudden discharge from the ureters, but by habit implying such a discharge of blood. See Note Catarrh, Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. urétérorrhagie, f. Germ. syn. eine Blutung aus den Harnleitern.

Urētērostegnōsis, is, or eos, f. (Urēter; στέγνωσις, a making costive.) Med., Pathol. Term for the formation or progress of Ureterostenoma. Fr. anal. urétérostegnose, f.

Urētērostēnōma, ătis, n. (Urēter; στένωμα, a narrow place.) Med., Pathol. Term for coarctation or contraction of the ureters. Fr. anal. urétérosténôme, m. Germ. syn. der verengerte Zustand der Harnleiter.

Urētēro'stŏma, ătis, n. (Urēter; στόμα, a mouth.) Anat., Physiol. Term for the opening of the ureters (into the pelvis of the kidneys, or into the bladder). Fr. anal. urétérostôme, m. Germ. syn. die Mündung eines Harnleiters (im Nierenbecken oder in der Harnblase.)

Urēthra, æ, f. (Οὐρέω, to pass urine.) Anat. Name for the membranous canal through which the urine is voided, continued from the neck of the bladder through the extent of the penis, at the extremity of which it terminates in a slit-like orifice called the Meatus urinarius. In the female, the urethra does not exceed two inches in length, having besides a much larger calibre than in the male. See Urias. Fr. anal. uréthre, m. Germ. syn. Harnröhre, f.

Urēthræmor'rhăgia, æ, f. (Urēthra; hæmorrhăgia.) Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for hemorrhage in the urethra. Fr. anal. uréthrémorrhagie, f. Germ. syn. Blutung aus der Harnröhre.

Urēthral'gia, æ, f. (Urēthra; ἄλγος, pain.) Med., Pathol. Term for pain in the urethra. Fr. anal. uréthralgie, f. Germ. syn. Harnröhrenschmerz, m.

Urēthrālis, is, e. Anat., Med. Of or belonging to the urethra: ure'thral. Fr. anal. uréthral, adj. Germ. syn. Harnröhre gehörig.

Urēthremphra'xis, is, or eos, f. (Urēthra; ἔμφραξις, a stoppage.) Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for a stoppage in the urethra. Fr. anal. uréthremphraxie, f. Germ. syn. Harnröhrenverstopfung, f.

Urēthreuryn'ter, ēris, m. (Urēthra; εὐρύνω, to dilate.) Med., Surg. Term for a dilator of the urethra. Fr. anal. uréthreurytère, m. Germ. syn. Harnröhrenausdehner, m.

Urēthrītis, ĭdis, f. (Urēthra; terminal -ītis.) Med., Pathol. Term for inflammation in the urethra: urethri'tis. Fr. anal. uréthrite, f. Germ. syn. Harnröhrentzündung, f.

Urēthrītis Vĕnĕ'rea. Pathol. A more correct term for the disease commonly, but erroneously, designated Gonorrhœa; also called Blennorrhœa venerea. See Baptorrhœa.

Urēthrītoprostătītis, ĭdis, f. Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for urethritic or gonorrhœal prostatitis. Fr. anal. uréthritoprostatite, f. Germ. syn. die aus Urethritis entstand'ne Vorsteherdrüsenentzündung.

Urēthrītorchītis, ĭdis, f. Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for urethritic or gonorrhœal orchitis. Fr. anal. uréthritorchite, f. Germ. syn. die aus Urethritis enstand'ne Hodenentzündung.

Urēthrītŏsў'phĭlis, ĭdis, f. Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for urethritis or gonorrhœa and syphilis existing at the same time. Fr. and Germ. anal. uréthritosyphilis, f.

Urēthroblennorrhœ'a, æ, f. (Urēthra; blennorrhœa.) Med., Pathol. Term for a discharge of mucus from the urethra. Fr. anal. uréthroblennorrhée, f. Germ. syn. Harnröhrenschleimfluss, m.

Urēthrocătar'rhus, i, m. Med., Pathol. Catarrh, or mucous discharge from the urethra. Fr. anal. uréthrocatarrhe, m. Germ. syn. Harnröhrencatarrh, m.

Urēthrŏlă'părŏcystĭdŏtŏ'mia, æ, f. (Urēthra; lăpărŏcystĭdŏtŏmia.) Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for a combination of the lateral operation for lithotomy, with that of cutting into the bladder above the pubes. Fr. anal. uréthrolaparocystidotomie, f. Germ. syn. der Seitenstein-und Bauchblasenschnitt.

Urēthrŏmĕ'lănorrhœ'a, æ, f. (Urēthra; mĕlănorrhœa.) Med., Surg. Pathol. Term much the same as Melanorrhœa itself; a black flow from the urethra, incorrectly called by some black gonorrhœa. Fr. anal. uréthromélanorrhée, f. Germ. syn. der schwarze Tripper.

Urēthrŏphўma, ătis, n. (Urēthra; φῦμα, a swelling.) Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for a swelling of the urethra. Fr. anal. uréthrophyme, m. Germ. syn. Harnröhrengeschwulst, f.

Urēthrŏpisthorrhe'xis, is, or eos, f. (Urēthra; opisthorrhexis.) Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for a tearing or disruption of the urethra backwards. Fr. anal. uréthropisthorrhexis, f. Germ. syn. die Rückwärtszerreissung der Harnröhre.

Ure'throplas'tic. Med., Surg. Of or belonging to the operation of urethroplasty. Urēthroplas'tĭcus, a, um. Fr. anal. uréthro- plastique, adj. Germ. syn. harnröhrenformend, part. adj.

Ure'throplasty. (Urēthra; πλάσσω, to form.) Med., Surg. Term given to an operation by which a new urethra was formed by Ricord in the male; applicable to the repair of any lesion of the urethra by supplying the deficiency from the healthy parts. Fr. anal. uréthroplastie, f. Germ. syn. Harnröhrenbildung, f.

Urēthrorrha'gia, æ, f. (Urēthra; ῥήγνυμι, to burst forth.) Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for a sudden discharge, but by custom implied to be one of blood, from the urethra. Fr. anal. uréthrorrhagie, f. Germ. syn. eine Blutfluss aus den Harnröhre.

Urēthrorrhœ'a, æ, f. (Urēthra; ῥέω, to flow.) Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for a flow, as of mucus, pus, urine, semen, etc., from the urethra. Fr. anal. uréthrorrhée. f. Germ. syn. ein Ausfluss aus der Harnröhre.

Urēthrospas'mus, i, m. Med., Pathol. Spasm of the urethra. Fr. anal. uréthrospasme, f. Germ. syn. Harnröhrenkrampf, m.

Ure'throstĕnōsis, is, or eos, f. (Urēthra; στένωσις, a being straitened.) Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for stricture of the urethra. Fr. anal. uréthrosténose, f. Germ. syn. Harnröhrenverengerung, f.

Urēthrōsystŏ'leus, a, um. (Urēthra; systŏleus, pertaining to contraction..) Anat. Of or belonging to contraction of the urethra; applied (m. sing.) as an epithet of the compressor urethræ muscle. Fr. anal. uréthrosystolé, adj. Germ. syn. zusammendrückend die Harnröhre.

Urethro'tomy. (Urēthra; τέμνω, to cut.) Surg. Term for the division, by means of a cutting instrument, of urethral stricture. Urethrŏtŏ'mia, æ, f. Fr. anal. uréthrotomie, f. Germ. syn. Harnröhrenschnitt, m.

Urēthrўmĕ'nia, æ, f. (Urēthra; ὑμήν, a membrane.) Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for the formation of a membrane in the urethra. Fr. anal. uréthryménie, f. Germ. syn. die Bildung einer Haut in der Harnröhre.

Urētĭcus, a, um. (Οὐρέω, to pass urine.) Anat. Of or belonging to the urine; applied to the openings or canals which convey the urine from the kidneys, that is, the ureters: ure'tic. Med., Pharm. Formerly used by Galen for medicines (Uretica medicamenta) which promote the flow of the urine; the the same as Diureticus. Fr. anal. urétique, adj. Germ. syn. den Harn betreffend.

Urētris, ĭdis, f. (Οὐρητρὶς.) Term for a urinal, or chamber-pot. Fr. syn. pot de chambre. Germ. syn. Nachttopf, m.

Urgi'nea Scilla. M. Med. The new name given (Pharm. L. 1851) for the plant which affords the squill. See Scilla.

U'rias, ădis, f. (Οὖρον, urine.) Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for a urinary fistula.

Uri'ăsis, is, f. Same as Uresis.

U'ric. (Οὖρον, urine; terminal -ic.) Chem. Belonging to the urine; applied to an acid, otherwise called Lithic acid, obtained from urine. Ūrĭcus, a, um. See Lithic. Fr. anal. urique, adj. Germ. syn. Harnsauer, adj.; urinsauer, adj.

U'ric O'xide. Chem. Term for a substance constituting a very rare ingredient in vesical calculi, and otherwise termed urous oxide, and xanthic oxide.

Uridrōsis, is, or eos, f. (Οὖρον, urine; ἱδρὼς, sweat.) Med., Pathol. Term for urinous sweat. Fr. anal. uridrose, f. Germ. syn. Harnschwitzen, n.

Uri'lic A'cid. Chem. Name given to a hypothetical body which remains on subtracting the elements of urea from uric acid. Acĭdum Urĭ'lĭcum. Fr. anal. acide urilique.

Urīna, æ, f. (Οὖρον, the urine.) Med., Physiol. The saline secretion of the kidneys which proceeds from them through the ureters, guttatim, into the urinary bladder: u'rine. See Adsamar, Albor, Alcolita, Anodus, Lotium, Oriens, Urema. Fr. anal, urine, f. Germ. syn. Harn, m.; Urin, m.

Amblytĕrus, a, um. (Ἀμβλύνω, to be blunt.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a crystal in which all the edges and angles undergo decreases, except one edge at the junction of two faces, which form together an obtuse angle, as the Baryta sulphata amblytera. Fr. anal. amblytère, adj.

Ambo'reus, a, um. Bot. Applied by A. Richard to a Section (f. pl.) of the Monimieæ having the Ambora for their type. Fr. anal. amboré, adj.

Ambreīnus, a, um. (Ambra.) Containing, having the colour (yellow), or odour (ambergrease) of amber. Fr. anal. ambré, adj. Germ. syn. mit Amberstoff.

Ambrōlō'gia, æ, f. (Ἄμπαρ, amber; λόγος, a discourse.) Term for a treatise on amber: ambro'logy. Fr. and Germ. anal. ambrologie, f.

Ambrōsiāceus, a, um. Bot. Applied by Richard to a Family (f. pl.) having the Ambrosia for their type. Fr. anal. ambrosiacé, adj.

Ambrŏsie'us, a, um. Bot. Applied by H. Cassini to a Tribe (f. pl.) of the Synantherea, by Lessing to a sub-Tribe of the Senecionideæ, having the Ambrosia for their type. Fr. anal. ambrosié, adj.

Ambŭlacrāris, is, e. Of or belonging to an Ambulacrum.

Ambŭlacrĭfor'mis, is, e. (Ambŭlacrum; forma, likeness.) Having the form of an Ambulacrum: ambula'criform. Fr. anal. ambulacriforme, adj. Germ. syn. gangförmig, adj.

Ambŭla'crum, i, n. (Ambŭlo, to walk.) Conchol. Applied by comparison with a walk of a garden, sometimes to the space between two strigæ, sometimes to each striga, itself formed by the series of small holes seen on the shell of the Echinus. Fr. anal. ambulácre, m. Germ. syn. Gang, m.

Ambŭ'lĭpes, pĕdis, m. (Ambŭlo, to walk; pes, a foot.) Zoöl. Applied by Blainville to a Family (nom. pl.) of the Carnivora, the limbs of which, terminated by analogous extremities, are proper for progression. Fr. anal. ambulipède, m. Germ. syn. gehenfüssig, adj.

Ameivo'deus, a, um. Zoöl. Applied by Fitzinger to a Family of saurian reptiles having the Ameiva for their type. Fr. anal. ameivodé, adj.

Amelloīdeus, a, um. Bot. Applied by Lessing to a Section (f. pl.) of the Asteroideæ Astereæ, having the Amellus for their type. Fr. anal. amelloidé, adj.

Amēnia, æ, f. (A, priv.; μὴν, a month.) Same as Amenorrhœa.

Amēnŏmă'nia, æ. f. (Amœnus, pleasant; mania, madness.) Med., Pathol. Term by Begin, etc., for airy or cheerful mania. See Habromania. Fr. anal. aménomanie, f. Germ. syn. der lustige Wahnsinn.

Amĕta'bŏlis, is, e. (A, priv.; μεταβολὴ, a change.) Entomol. Applied by Leach to a sub-Class (n. pl.) which do not undergo metamorphosis. Fr. anal. amétabole, adj.

Amĕtămorphōsis, is, or eos, f. (A, priv.; mĕtămorphōsis.) Entomol. Term for the state of insects that do not undergo metamorphosis. Fr. anal. amétamorphose, f. Germ. syn. ohne Verwandelung.

Amĕtămorphōtus, a, um. (Same as preceding.) Same as Ametabolis.

Amĕthys'teus, a, um. } Same as Amethystus.
Amĕthystīnus, a, um. }

Amētria, æ, f. (A, priv.; μήτρα, the womb.) Med., Physiol. The state of a woman with the uterus awanting. Fr. and Germ. anal. amétrie, f.

Amētrus, a, um. (Same as preceding.) Med., Physiol. Having no uterus. Fr. anal. amètre, adj. Germ. syn. ohne Gebärmutter.

Amiantāceus, a, um. Bot. Pertaining to the Amiantus. Fr. anal. amiantacé, adj.

Amiantoïdēs, adj. (Amiantus; terminal -īdēs.) Resembling the Amiantus: amian'toid. Chem. Applied to the arseniate of copper, the filamentous crystals of which are disposed in tufts. See Diss. div. i. s. i. Fr. anal. amiantoïde, adj.

-Amid. Chem. A modern terminal signifying a combination of two atoms nitrogen with four hydrogen, and added to the names of other substances with which it is associated, as Benjamid, Kaliumamid, etc.

Amĭdīnus, i, m. Bot. Name by Chevreul for the smooth tegument forming the exterior part of each grain of Amylum. Fr. anal. amidin, m.

Amĭdŏ'lĭca, n. pl. (Fr. Amidon, starch.) Chem. Term by Béral for combinations of starch, as in paste, glue, etc.

Ammaptēnŏ'dўtēs, adj. (Ἄμμος, sand; α, priv.; πτηνός, volatile; δύω, to get into.) Ornithol. Applied by J. A. Ritgen to a Family (m. pl.) that do not fly and that live in the sands, as the ostrich. Fr. anal. ammapténodyte, adj.

Ammĭ'neus, a, um. } Bot. Applied by K.
Am'mĭnus, a, um. } Sprengel and de Candolle to a Tribe (f. pl.) of the Umbelliferæ having the Ammi for their type. Fr. anal. amminé, adj.

Ammŏ'dўtēs, adj. (Ἄμμος, sand; δύω, to get into.) Bot. Living or growing in sand, as the Astragalus ammodytes on the sandy hills of southern Siberia. Zoöl. The specific name of an ophidian reptile, the Coluber ammodytes or Ammodytes terrestris. Fr. anal. ammodyte, adj.

Ammŏ'lĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to salts having ammolin for their base. Fr. anal. ammolique, adj.

Ammolin'. (First syllable of ammoniacum; oleum, oil.) Chem. Name for a salifiable base which Unverdorben extracted from the unrectified animal oil of Dippel. Ammŏlīna, æ, f. See Animina, Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 4. Fr. anal. ammoline, f.

Ammōnāceus, a, um. Zoöl. Applied by Blainville to a Family (n. pl.) of the Cephalophora Polythalamacea having the Ammonites for their type. Fr. anal. ammonacé, adj.

Ammōneānus, a, um. Geol. Applied by Omalius to designate an Order of soils in which are found fossils very different from the living beings, and which contain abundantly the Ammonites. Fr. anal. ammonéen, adj.

Ammōneus, a, um. Zoöl. Applied by Lamarck, Eichwald and Orbigny to a Family (f. and n. pl.) of the Mollusca Cephalopoda having the Ammonites for their type. Fr. anal. ammoné, adj.

Ammōni'ăca, æ, f. Chem. Name for a gaseous alkali composed of three parts hydrogen to one of nitrogen, and which Berzelius regards as an oxide of ammonium: ammo'niac. Fr. anal. ammoniaque, f. Germ. syn. Salazmoniack, m.

Ammoni'acal. Chem. Of or belonging to ammoniacum. Ammōniācālis, is, e. Fr. anal. ammoniacal, adj.

Ammōniāceus, a. um. Chem. Containing ammoniac. Fr. anal. ammoniacé, adj.

Ammo'niate. Chem. Name by Klaproth for a compound of ammoniac with a metallic oxide. Ammōnias, ātis, f. Fr. anal. ammoniate, m.

Ammōnĭco-. Chem. A prefix by Berzelius in many compound epithets of double salts resulting from the combination of an ammonic salt with another which is indicated by the remainder of the epithet, and which latter will be found explained in its proper place of alphabetical arrangement, as Ammonico-argenticus, etc. Fr. anal. ammonico-.

Ammōnĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to salts resulting from the combination of ammoniacum with aqueous salts; to ammoniac considered as an oxide of ammonium, and termed ammonic oxide, etc.: ammo'nic. Fr. anal. ammonique, adj.

Ammōniorrhœ'a, æ, f. (Ammōnium; ῥέω, to flow.) Med. Term for the discharge of ammonium with the urine, perspiration, etc. See Note Catarrh, Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. ammoniorrhée, f.

Ammonoxalon. See Oxalammon.

Ammŏ'phĭlus, a, um. (Ἄμμος, sand; φιλέω, to love.) Loving sand. Bot. Applied to the Carex ammophilus, because it grows in sandy places. Fr. anal. ammophile, adj.

Amnēmŏ'sўne, es, f. (Ἀμνήμιων, to be unmindful.) Med., Pathol. Term for forgetfulness. See Amnesia. Fr. anal. amnémosyne, f. Germ. syn. Vergessenheit, f.

Amnestŏthă'leus, a, um. (Ἀμνηστεία, celibacy; θάλειος, flourishing.) Bot. Applied by G. Allmann to plants having the sexes in separate flowers. Fr. anal. amnestothalé, adj.

Amnĭ'cŏlus, a, um. (Amnis, a river; cŏlo, to inhabit.) Zoöl. Living on the borders of rivers, as the Leucania amnicola: amni'colous. Fr. anal. amnicole, adj. Germ. syn. sandliebend, part. adj.

Am'nic. Properly Amniotic.

Amniītis, ĭdis, f. } (Amnion; terminal -ītis.)
Amnītis, ĭdis, f. } Med., Pathol. Term for inflammation of the amnion. Fr. anal. amniite, amnite, f. Germ. syn. Entzündung des sogenannten Schaafhäutchens.

Amnioclep'sis, is, or eos, f. (Amnion; κλέπτω, to do a thing secretly.) Med., Obstet. Term for the unperceived escape of the waters. Fr. anal. amnioclepsie, f. Germ. syn. das zu frühe Abgehen des sog. Schaafwassers.

Amniorrhœ'a, æ, f. (Amnion; ῥέω, to flow.) Med., Obstet. Term for the discharge of the waters. See Note Catarrh, Diss. div. i. s. vi. Fr. anal. amniorrhée, f. Germ. syn. der Abgang der Fruchtwassers.

Amoëbœ'us, a, um. Bot. Applied by C. G. Ehrenberg to a Tribe (n. pl.) of the Canneæ having the Amoëba for their type. Fr. anal. amoëbé, adj.

Amœnomania. See Amenomania.

Amor'phia, æ, f. (A, priv.; μορφὴ, form.) Med., Physiol. Term for defect of form; deformity. Fr. anal. amorphie, f. Germ. syn. Formlosigkeit, f.

Amorphis'mus, i, m. (Same as preceding; terminal ismus.) Med., Physiol. Term for a condition of shapelessness: amor'phism. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 7. Fr. anal. amorphisme, m. Germ. syn. der gestaltlose Zustand.

Amorphŏ'phўtum, i, n. (Amorphus; φυτὸν, a plant.) Bot. Applied by Necker to plants that have irregular or anomalous flowers: an amor'phophyte. Fr. anal. amorphophyte, m.

Amorphŏpўgăgra, æ, f. (Amorphus; pўgăgra, pain in the anus.) Med., Pathol. Term for irregular pain in the anus. Fr. anal. amorphopygagre, f. Germ. syn. das unregelmässig gestaltete Steissleiden.

Amorphosis. See Anamorphosis.

Amorphosteŏ'phўtum, i, n. (Amorphus; osteŏphўtum, an osseous tumour.) Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for a shapeless osteophyte. Fr. anal. amorphostéophyte, m. Germ. syn. Amorphosteophyt, n.

Amorphozōus, a, um. (Amorphus; ζῶον, an animal.) Zoöl. Applied by Blainville to a type (n. pl.) comprehending animals unformed, or without determinate form, as the sponges. Fr. anal. amorphozoaire, adj.

Ampĕ'lĭdæ, patron. m. pl. } (Ἄμπελος, the Ampĕ'lĭdes, patron. m. pl. } vine.) Bot. Applied by Kunth to a Family having the Vitis for their type. Fr. anal. ampélides, m. pl.

Ampĕlītis, ĭdis, f. (Ἄμπελος, the vine.) Geol. Term for a kind of fossil or bituminous earth. Fr. anal. ampélite, f. Germ. syn. Heilerde, f.

Ampĕlogrăphia, æ, f. (Ἄμπελος, the vine; γράφω, to write.) Bot. Term for a treatise on the vine: ampelo'graphy. Fr. and Germ. anal. ampélographie, f.

Ampĕlŏleu'ce, es, f. (Ἄμπελος, the vine; λεύκος, white.) Bot., M. Med. A name for the Bryonia alba, or white vine.

Ampĕlo'prăsum, i, n. (Ἀμπελόπρασον.) Bot. name for a kind of leek. See Allium ampeloprasum.

Ampĕlur'gia, æ, f. (Ἄμπελος, the vine; ἔργον, a work.) Bot. Term for the culture of wine-bearing vines. Fr. anal. ampélurgie, f. Germ. syn. Weinbau, m.

Amphamphŏtĕrŏdiplōpia, æ, f. (Ἀμφω, both; ἀμφότερος on both sides; diplōpia, double sight.) Med., Pathol. Term for double sight in both eyes together, and particularly with a single eye. Fr. anal. amphamphotérodiplopie, f.

Amphan'thium, ii, n. (Ἀμφὶ, about; ἄνθος, a flower.) Bot. Name by Link for a receptacle dilated by the opening of the peduncles which support, as in the Synantheræ, or contain, as in the Fici, the flowers. Fr. anal. amphanthe, m. Germ. syn. Blüthenfrucht, f.

Amphēmĕrus. Same as Amphemerinus.

Amphĭbĭcŏrīsus, a, um. (Amphĭbius; κόρις, a bug.) Entomol. Applied by L. Dufour to a Family (f. pl.) of the Hemiptera Heteroptera. Latreille had already created this Family in 1804 under the name of Ploteres. Fr. anal. amphibicorise, adj.

Amphĭbio'lĭthus, i, m. (Amphĭbius; λίθος, a stone.) Geol. Term for a fossil amphibium: an amphibi'olith. Fr. anal. amphibiolithe, m. Germ. syn. Amphibiolith, m.

Amphĭbiŏlŏ'gia, æ, f. (Amphĭbius; λόγος, a discourse.) Zoöl. Term for a treatise or history of reptiles or of amphibia. Fr. and Germ. anal. amphibiologie, f.

Amphibles'trŏcarcĭnōma, ătis, n. (Ἀμφίβληστρον, a net; carcĭnōma.) Med., Surg. Pathol. Term for carcinoma of the retina. See Dictyocarcinoma. Fr. anal. amphiblestrocarcinôme, m.

Amphibles'troïde-apople'xia, æ, f. }
Amphibles'troïde-atrŏ'phia, æ, f. }
Amphibles'troïdeŏ-mălă'cĭa, æ, f. }
Amphibles'troïdĕo'-phthĭsis, æ, f. } (Amphiblestroïdes; apoplexia, atrŏphia, mălăcia, phthĭsis.) Med., Pathol. Terms for apoplexy, atrophy, softening and wasting of the retina, respectively. Fr. and Germ. anal. amphiblestroïde-apoplexie, -atrophie, -omalacie, -ophthisie, f.

Amphĭbŏ'lĭcus, a, um. (Ἀμφίβολος, ambiguous; terminal ικὸς.) Geognos. Applied to every rock into which the crystallized amphibola enters as an essential constituent part, or of which it forms the base: amphibo'lic. Fr. anal. amphibolique, adj.

Amphĭbŏlĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Amphĭbŏlus; fĕro, to bear.) Geognos. Containing amphibolæ, as the Granite amphiboliferus. Fr. anal. amphibolifère, adj.

Amphĭbŏlīnus. Ornithol. Applied by C. Bonaparte the same as Amphibolus. Fr. anal. amphibolin, adj.

Amphĭbŏlostўlus, a, um. (Ἀμφίβολος, ambiguous; στῦλος, a style.) Bot. Applied by Wachendorff to plants in which the style is not apparent. Fr. anal. amphibolostyle, adj.

Amphĭ'bŏlus, a, um. (Ἀμφὶ, about; βολέω, to throw.) Bot. Applied by K. Sprengel to a Section (f. pl.) of the Hydrophyta corresponding to the Diatomeæ of Agardh. Ornithol. Applied by Illiger and Goldfuss to a Family (m. pl.), and by Savi to a Tribe, of the Passeres having two toes in front and two behind, the external posterior of which is versatile. Fr. anal. amphibole, adj.

Amphĭcar'pus, a, um. (Ἀμφὶς, on both sides; καρπὸς, fruit.) Bot. Having fruit of two kinds, either as to its form or the time of its maturation: amphicar'pous. Fr. anal. amphicarpe, adj. Germ. syn. doppelfruchtig, adj.

Amphĭcur'tus, a, um. (Ἀμφίκυρτος.) Curved on both sides. Bot. Applied to the Equoria amphicurta, its umbrel being almost hemispherical. Fr. anal. amphicurte, adj.

Amphĭdesmītis, is, e. (Ἀμφὶς, on both sides; δεσμὸς, a band.) Zoöl. Applied by Latreille to a Family (m. pl.) of the Conchifera having a double cardinal ligament. Fr. anal. amphidesmite, adj.

Amphĭde'xius. Same as Ambidexter.

Amphĭgas'trium, ii, n. (Ἀμφὶ, about; γαστὴρ, the belly.) Bot. Applied by Ehrhart and Link to those of the stipules of certain Jungermanniæ that are inserted upon the stem, which they cover and surround. Fr. anal. amphigastre, m.

Amphĭ'gĕnus, a, um. (Ἀμφὶς, on both sides; γίνομαι, to be born.) Chem. Applied by Berzelius to simple bodies that produce acids and bases: amphi'genous. See Basigenus. Fr. anal. amphigène, adj.

Amphĭhexăhe'drus, a, um. (Ἀμφὶ, about; ἕξ, six; ἕδρα, a base.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a crystal in which the faces, ranged in two different manners, the one lateral the other longitudinal, compose the contour of a hexahedral prism: amphihexahe'dral. Fr. anal. amphihexaëdre, adj.

Amphĭmē'trĭcus, a, um. (Ἀμφὶ, about; μετρέω, to measure.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a variety of carbonated lime composed of the equiaxis and of a dodecahedron, produced by a decrease upon the inferior edges: amphime'tric. Fr. anal. amphimétrique, adj.

Amphĭmīmētĭcus, a, um. (Ἀμφὶ, about; μιμητὴς, an imitator.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a variety of carbonated lime composed of a primitive rhomboid and two dodecahedrons, one of which has the great angle of its faces equal to the greater incidence of the faces of the primitive; the other, the greater incidence of its faces double of the smaller part of that of the primitive: amphimime'tic. Fr. anal. amphimimétique, adj Amphĭnō'meus, a, um. Zoöl. Applied by Blainville to a Family (f. pl.) of the Chetopoda; by Sauvigny, Lamarck and Latreille to a Family (n. pl.) of the Annelides having the Amphinome for their type. Fr. anal. amphinomé, adj.

Amphĭnō'mius, a, um. Zoöl. Applied by Andouin and M. Edwards (m. pl.) the same as Amphinomeus.

Amphĭpneus'tus, a, um. (Ἀμφὶ, on both sides; πνέω, to breathe.) Zoöl. Applied by Merrem to a Tribe (n. pl.) of reptiles having both branchiæ and lungs, i. e. two respiratory apparatus. Fr. anal. amphipneuste, adj. Germ. syn. umhaucht, adj.

Amphĭpŏdĭfor'mis, is, e. (Amphĭpŏdus; forma, likeness.) Entomol. Applied by Kirby to hexapodous, herbivorous larves which, with long antennæ, have a body short and compressed like the Amphipoda: amphipo'diform. Fr. anal. amphipodiforme, adj.

Amphĭsar'ca, æ, f. (Ἀμφὶ, about; σὰρξ, flesh.) Bot. Name by Desvaux for a fruit indehiscent, multilocular, dry, and lignous at the exterior, pulpy in the interior, as the Adansonia Baobab. Fr. anal. amphisarque, m.

Amphĭsar'cus, a, um. (Same as preceding.) Bot. Fleshy on both or on all sides. Fr. anal. amphisarque, adj. Germ. syn. an beiden oder an allen Seiten fleischig.

Amphisbæ'næ Vēnæ. Anat. Term for the veins running between the uterus and the breast.

Amphisbæ'nius, a, um. Zoöl. Applied by Latreille to a Family (m. pl.), by Ficinus and Carus to a Tribe, and by Blainville to a Section, of ophidian reptiles having the Amphisbæna for their type. Fr. anal. amphisbénien, adj.

Amphisbænoïdæ. Same as Amphisbænidæ.

Amphisbæ'nus, a, um. (Ἀμφὶς, on both sides; βαίνω, to walk.) Zoöl. Walking equally in opposite directions, as the Lumbricus amphisbæna. Fr. anal. amphisbène, adj.

Amphis'cius, a, um. (Ἀμφὶ, on both sides; σκιὰ, a shade.) Zoöl. Applied to the people that inhabit the torrid zone, because they have their shadows turned one while to the south, another to the north, according to the position of the earth in relation to the sun. Fr. anal. amphiscien, adj.

Amphitrīteus, a, um. } Amphitrītis, is, e. } Amphitrītus, a, um. } Entomol., Zoöl. Applied by Savigny, Lamarck, Latreille, Goldfuss, Ficinus and Carus to a Family (f. pl.) of the Annelides; by Blainville to a Family (n. pl.) of the Chetopoda; and by Eichwald to a Family of the Grammazoa, having the Amphitrite for their type. Fr. anal. amphitrité, adj.

Amphitrŏ'pia, æ, f. (Ἀμφὶ, about; τροπέω, to turn.) Bot. Term for the phenomenon which takes place when, in the progressive development of the ovule, the hilum, which is confounded with the chalaza, does not remain with it directly opposite the exostome, but when the relative situation of the hilum, chalaza, and exostome is subsequently changed, the ovule bending itself separates the hilum from the chalaza. Fr. anal. amphitropie, f.

Amphiūmīdeus, a, um. Zoöl. Applied by J. E. Gray to a Family (n. pl.) of the Reptilia having the Amphiuma for their type. Fr. anal. amphiumidé, adj.

Amphiūmoïdæ, patron. m. pl. Zoöl. Applied by Fitzinger the same as the n. pl. of Amphiumideus. Fr. anal. amphiumides, m. pl.

Amphŏdiplōpia, æ, f. (Ἄμφω, both; diplōpia, double sight.) Med., Pathol. Term for double vision with both eyes together. Fr. anal. amphodiplopie, f. Germ. syn. das Doppeltsehen mit beiden Augen zugleich.

Amphŏtĕrŏdiplōpia, æ, f. (Ἀμφότερος, both; diplōpia, double sight.) Med., Pathol. Term for double vision of one eye in particular. Fr. anal. amphoterodiplopie, f. Germ. syn. das Doppeltsehen auf jedem Auge besonders.

Amplectīvus, a, um. (Amplector, to embrace.) Bot. Applied to æstivation or prefloration when the leaves are placed longitudinally and have their borders serrated into another leaf, which is also folded in the same manner, as the Iris. Fr. anal. amplectif, adj. Germ. syn. umarmend, part. adj.

Amplexātilis, is, e. (Amplector, to embrace.) Bot. Applied by Richard to the embryo when the radicle is enlarged at the point of embracing all the rest, as in certain Gramineæ. Fr. anal. amplexatile, adj.

Amplexĭcaudātus, a, um. (Amplector, to embrace.) Entomol. Having the tail embraced or entirely enveloped in the interfemoral membrane, as the Phyllostoma amplexicaudata. Fr. anal. amplexicaudé, adj. Germ. syn. umarmeschwanzig, adj.

Amplexĭflōrus, a, um. (Amplector, to embrace; flos, a flower.) Bot. Embracing the flower; applied to the squamellæ of the clinanthium of certain Synantherœæ. Fr. anal. amplexiflore, adj. Germ. syn. umarmeblumig, adj.

Amplexĭfŏ'liātus, a, um. (Amplector, to embrace; fŏlium, a leaf.) Bot. Having amplexicauline leaves, as the Loranthus amplexifolius. Fr. anal. amplexifolié, adj. Germ. syn. umarmeblättrig, adj.

Ampliātiflōrus, a, um. (Ampliātus; flos, a flower.) Bot. Applied by H. Cassini to the corona of the Synantherœæ when composed of flowers with amplified corols. Fr. anal. ampliatiflore, adj. Germ. syn. erweiterblümig, adj.

Ampliātus, a, um. (Amplio, to increase.) Bot. Applied by H. Cassini to every corol of the Synantherœæ, the limb of which, notably enlarged or dilated, is widened in all directions, as the Cyanus segetum; amplified. Entomol. Applied by Kirby to the elytra when disproportionably broad at their extremity, as the Lycus fasciatus. Fr. anal. amplié, adj.; syn. amplifié, adj. Germ. syn. erweitert, adj.

Amplĭpen'nis, is, e. (Amplus, full; penna, a wing.) Entomol. Having large or broad wings, as the elytra of the Apion amplipenne. Fr. anal. amplipenne, adj. Germ. syn. weitflügelicht, adj.

Amplĭtūdo, ĭnis, f. (Amplio, to increase.) Astron. Term for the arc of the horizon comprised between the true point of east or west and the centre of a star at the instant of its rising or setting: am'plitude. Fr. anal. amplitude, f. Germ. syn. Weite, f.

Ampullāceus, a, um. } Having the appearance
Ampullāris, is, e. } of an ampulla. Fr. anal. ampullacé, adj.; ampullaire, adj.

Ampullātus, a, um. Bot. Pertaining to an ampulla. Fr. anal. ampoulé, adj. Germ. syn. blasig, adj.

Amydes, f. pl. Zoöl. Name by Oppel for a Family established by him in the chelonian reptiles. Fr. anal. amydes, f. pl.

Amydrōsis. The same as Amaurosis.

Amygdălāris, is, e. (Amygdăla.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to rocks in which the kernels or almonds they contain are found in the same condition as if they were come too late to lodge in cellules prepared for their reception. Fr. anal. amygdalaire, adj. Germ. syn. mandelförmig, adj.

Amygdălātum, i, n. (Amygdăla.) Med., Pharm. Term for the almond emulsion. Germ. syn. Mandelmilch, f.

Arctŏ'mydes, m. pl. Zoöl. Name by Latreille for a Family of the Mammifera, having the Arctomys for their type. Fr. anal. arctomydes, m. pl.

Arctŏti'deus, a, um. Bot. Applied by H. Cassini to a Tribe (f. pl.) of the Synantherea; by Lessing to a sub-Tribe of the Cynarea, having the Arctotis for their type. Fr. anal. arctotidé, adj.

Arctūrus, a, um. (Ἄρκτος, a bear; οὐρὰ, a tail.) Bot. Applied to the Celsia arcturus, because its flower is compared to a bear's tail. Fr. anal. arcture, adj.

Arcythŏ'phȳtum, i, n. (Ἄρκευθος, the juniper; φυτὸν, a plant.) Bot. Name by Necker for a plant which bears fruit like that of the Juniperus: an arcy'thophyte. Fr. anal. arcythophyte, m.

Ardas. (Ἄρδα.) Med. The same as Sordes.

Ardisiāceus, a, um. Bot. Applied by Jussieu to a Family (f. pl.) having the Ardisia for their type. See Ophiospermeus. Fr. anal. ardisiacé, adj.

Ardisie'us, a, um. Bot. Applied by Bartling to a Tribe (f. pl.) of the Ardisiaceæ, having the Ardisia for their type. Fr. anal. ardisié, adj.

Arecin'. Chem. Name for the red, insoluble colouring matter of the fruit of the Areca catechu. Arēcīna, æ, f. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 4. Fr. anal. arécine, f.

Arēcīneus, a, um. Bot. Applied by Martius to a Tribe of the Palmæ, having the Areca for their type. Fr. anal. aréciné, adj.

Arēnāceus, a, um. (Arēna.) Mineral. Applied to a mineral, etc., which has the appearance of sand. Fr. anal. arénacé, adj. Germ. syn. sandartig, adj.

Arēnārius, a, um. (Arēna.) Bot. Applied to a plant that grows in sand, in sandy and arid soils. Fr. anal. arénaire, adj.

Arēnĭ'cŏlus, a, um. (Arēna; cŏlo, to inhabit.) Entomol. Applied by Cuvier and Latreille to a Section of the Scarabæides that dig deep holes in the earth or sand. Zoöl. Living in sandy places, as the Lacerta arenicola; by Blainville to a Family (f. pl.) of the Chetopoda: areni'colous. Fr. anal. arénicole, adj. Germ. syn. sandbewohnend, part. adj.

Arēnĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Arēna; fĕro, to bear.) Accidentally bearing or containing sand. Fr. anal. arénifère, adj. Germ. syn. sandtragend, part. adj.

Arēnĭfor'mis, is, e. (Arēna; sand; forma, likeness.) Resembling sand: are'niform. Fr. anal. aréniforme, adj. Germ. syn. sandformig, adj.

Arēnōsus, a, um. (Arēna; terminal -ōsus.) Having or full of sand; sandy. See Diss. div. i. s. iv. Fr. anal. aréneux, adj.; syn. sablonneux, adj. Germ. syn. voll Sand.

Arēnŭlāceus, a, um. (Arenŭla, fine sand.) Zoöl. Applied to small worms that resemble grains of sand. Fr. anal. arenulacé, adj. Germ. syn. feinsandig, adj.

Areŏlāris, is, e. (Areŏla.) Anat. Having areolæ; sometimes used as synonymous with Cellularis. Fr. anal. aréolaire, adj.

Areŏlātus, a, um. (Areŏla.) Bot. Applied to a leaf that is marked with inequalities or slight wrinkles. Entomol. Applied by Kirby to the wings when divided into areolæ, as the Diptera. Fr. anal. areolé, adj. Germ. syn. felderig, adj.

Arĕthūseus, a, um. Bot. Applied by J. Lindley to a Tribe (f. pl.) of the Orchideæ, having the Arethusa for their type. Fr. anal. aréthusé, adj.

Argen'tate. Chem. Term for the combination of ammonic with argentic oxide, which in that case plays the part of an acid. Argen'tas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. argentate, m.

Argentātus, a, um. (Argentum.) Having the appearance, colour, or lustre of silver: ar'gentate. Fr. anal. argenté, adj.

Argen'tĭco-plum'bĭcus, a, um.
Argen'tĭcŏ-potas'sĭcus, a, um.
Argen'tĭcŏ-sōdĭcus, a, um.
Argen'tĭco-stron'tĭcus, a, um.
Chem. Applied by Berzelius to double salts resulting from the combination of an argentic with an ammonic, a calcic, a plumbic, a potassic, a sodic, and a strontic salt. Fr. anal. argentico-ammonique, -calcique, plombique, -potassique, -sodique, strontique, adj.

Argen'tĭcus, a, mm. (Argentum; terminal -ic.) Chem. Applied by Berzelius to the first degree of oxidation of silver, or oxydum argenticum; to the oxysalts that have this oxide for their base; to the halosalts with a base of silver, and to sulphosalts corresponding to the oxysalts in their composition, or sales argentici. Fr. anal. argentique, adj. Germ. syn. silberig, adj.

Argentĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Argentum; fĕro, to bear.) Chem. Accidentally containing silver, as the Plumbum sulphuratum argentiferum: argenti'ferous. Fr. anal. argentifère, adj. Germ. syn. silberhaltig, adj.

Argentīnus, a, um. (Argentum.) Chem. Having the appearance, or shining colour, and especially the clear sound of silver: argen'tine. Fr. anal. argentin, adj. Germ. syn. silberfarben, adj.

Argillĭ'cŏlus, a, um. (Argilla; cŏlo, to inhabit.) Zoöl. Living in argil or clay: argilli'colous. Fr. anal. argillicole, adj. Germ. syn. thonbewohnend, part. adj.

Argillĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Argillum; fĕro, to bear.) Geol. Accidentally containing argil: argilli'ferous. Fr. anal. argillifère, adj. Germ. syn. thonhaltig, adj.

Argillĭfor'mis, is, e. (Argilla; forma, likeness.) Geol. Resembling argil, as the Trass argilliforme. Fr. anal. argilliforme, adj. Germ. syn. thonförmig, adj.

Argillo-arēnāceus, a, um. (Argilla; arēnāceus.) Geol. Formed of argil and sand. Fr. anal. argillo-arénacé, adj. Germ. syn. thonsandartig, adj.

Argillo-arēnōsus, a, um. (Argilla; arēnōsus.) Geol. Applied by Brongniart to a group of rocks the name of which indicates their nature. Fr. syn. argillosabuleux, adj. Germ. syn. thonsandig, adj.

Argillōferrūgĭnōsus, a, um. Geol. Containing argil and oxide of iron. Fr. anal. argilloférugineux, adj. Germ. syn. thonrostfärbig, adj.

Argillōgypsōsus, a, um. Geol. Containing argil and gypsum. Fr. anal. argillogypseux, adj. Germ. syn. thongypsartig, adj.

Argilloīdēs, adj. (Argilla; terminal īdēs.) Geol. Resembling argil; applied to rocks the chief bulk of which presents the aspect or properties of certain argils: argil'loid. See Diss. div. i. s. i. Fr. anal. argilloïde, adj. Germ. syn. thonähnlich, adj.

Argillolī'thĭcus, a, um. (Argilla; lĭthĭcus.) Geol. Formed of hardened argil: argillo-li'thic. Fr. anal. argillolithique, adj.

Argillōsus, a, um. Similar to Argillaceus.

Argŏ'līdæ, patron. m. pl. Zoöl. Name by Leach for a Family of the Entomostraca, having the Argulus for their type. Fr. anal. argolides, m. pl.

Argonautāceus, a, um. Conchol. Applied by Blainville to a Family (f. pl.) of shells, having the Argonauta for their type. Fr. anal. argonautacé, adj.

Argўran'thĕmus, a, um. (Ἄργυρος, silver; ἄνθος, a flower.) Bot. Having flowers of a shining white. Fr. anal. argyranthème, adj. Germ. syn. silberblumig, adj.

Argў'rĭdes, m. pl. (Ἄργυρος, silver.) Chem., Mineral. Name by Ampère for a genus of simple bodies; by Beudant for a Family of minerals, having silver for their type. Fr. anal. argyrides, m. pl.

Argўrŏce'phălus, a, um. (Ἄργυρος, silver; κεφαλή, a head.) Having the head of argentine white, as the Araba argyrocephala. Fr. anal. argyrocéphale, adj. Germ. syn. silberkopfig, adj.

Argўrophthal'mus, a, um. (Ἄργυρος, silver; ὀφθαλμός, the eye.) Ornithol. Having the eyes of a silver white, as the Garrulus argyrophthalmus. Fr. anal. argyrophthalme, adj. Germ. syn. silberaugig, adj.

Argўrŏphyl'lus, a, um. (Ἄργυρος, silver; φύλλον, a leaf.) Bot. Having leaves covered with close down or soft hair, whitish and shining. Fr. anal. argyrophylle, adj. Germ. syn. silberblattrig, adj.

Argўrŏpўgus, a, um. (Ἄργυρος, silver; πυγή, the rump.) Entomol. Having the extremity of the abdomen white, as the Bombylus argyropygus. See Leucopygus. Fr. anal. argyropyge, adj. Germ. syn. silberrumpfig, adj.

Argўrostig'mus, a, um. (Ἄργυρος, silver; στίγμα, a spot.) Bot. Applied to plants that have flowers marked here and there with white spots, as the Begonia argyrostigma. Fr. anal. argyrostigme, adj. Germ. syn. silberfleckig, adj.

Argўro'stŏmus, a, um. (Ἄργυρος, silver; στόμα, a mouth.) Entomol. Having the mouth of a silver white, as the Musca argyrostoma. Fr. anal. argyrostome, adj. Germ. syn. silbermundig, adj.

Arhīzoblas'tus, i, m. (A, priv.; ῥίζα, a root; βλαστάνω, to grow.) Bot. Applied by Willdenow to embryoes that have no root. Fr. anal. arhizoblaste, adj.

Arhizus. See Ahrizus.

Aricin'. Chem. Term for a salifiable, organic, and crystallisable base discovered by Pelletier in bark, every way like that of the Cinchona flava. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 4. Arĭcīna, æ, f. Fr. anal. aricine, f.

Aricīnis, is, e. Entomol. Applied by Robineau-Desvoidy to a Tribe (m. pl.) of the Myodaria Mysomydæ, having the Aricia for their type. Fr. anal. aricine, adj.

Aricius, a, um. Zoöl. Applied by Andouin and M. Edwards to a Family (m. pl.) of the Annulata errantia. Fr. anal. aricien, adj.

Arĭdifŏlie'us, a, um. (Arĭdus, dry; fŏlium, a leaf.) Bot. Applied by Agardh to a Class having the leaves generally dry, as the Epacrideæ, Ericeæ, etc. Fr. anal. aridifolié, adj.

Arĭ'dĭtas, ātis, f. (Arĭdus, dry.) Dryness: ari'dity. Fr. anal. aridité, f. Germ. syn. Trockenheit, f.

Arillārius, a, um. Bot. The arilla much divided and in form of a pulpous membrane of some of the Passifloreæ is termed the arillary tunic, or pulp. Fr. anal. arillaire, adj. Germ. syn. samendeckig, adj.

Aristŏlŏ'chĭcus, a, um. (Same as Aristolochia.) Med., Pharm. Applied to remedies (n. pl.) for the lochia. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 6. Fr. anal. aristolochique, adj.

Aristolochie'us, a, um. The same as Aristolochiaceus.

Aristŭlātus, a, um. (Dim. Aristus.) Bot. Having a very small arista. Fr. anal. aristulé, adj. Germ. syn. kleingrannig, adj.

Armāmentārium, ii, n. } (Arma, weapons.)
Armārium, ii, n. } Med., Surg. Term for a stock or store of weapons, or means, as of medicines, instruments, etc. Fr. anal. armamentarium, m. Germ. syn. Waffenvorrath, m.

Armātus, a, um. (Arma.) Having arms; armed. Bot. Applied by Debach to a Tribe (f. pl.) of the Ammoneæ that have many rows of spines. Ichthyol. Applied to fishes the body of which is covered with a strong cuirass, etc. Fr. anal. armé, adj. Germ. syn. bewaffnet, part. adj.

Armentārius, a, um. (Armentum, a flock.) Entomol. Applied to a Family (f. pl.) of the Muscidæ which torment to excess the larger quadrupeds. Fr. anal. armentaire, m.

Armēriāceus, a, um. Bot. Applied by Marquis to a Family (f. pl.) having the Armeria for their type. Fr. anal. armériacé, adj.

Ar'mĭceps, ĭpĭtis, adj. (Arma; cāput, the head.) Ichthyol. Applied by Latreille to a Tribe (m. pl.) of the Clepeides, having the head defended by osseous pieces or calcareous scales. Fr. anal. armiceps, adj.

Armi'gĕnus, a, um. (Arma; gĕna, the cheek.) Ichthyol. Applied by Ficinus and Carus to a Tribe (f. pl.), by Latreille and Eichwald to a Family, having the cheeks shielded. Fr. anal. armigène, adj.

Armĭ'gĕrus, a, um. (Arma; gĕro, to bear.) Conchol., Ornithol. Applied to the Purpura armigera because furnished with long tubercles; to the Aquila armigera, because it has strong claws. Fr. anal. armigère, adj.

Armillāris, is, e. (Armilla.) Astron. Applied to an artificial sphere composed of circles that represent the orbs of celestial bodies, of which the solar system is composed. Bot. Applied to the Jacquinia armillaris, because its branches are surrounded by verticillated leaves, which resemble rings or bracelets. Fr. anal. armillaire, adj. Germ. syn. armbandig, adj.

Armillātus, a, um. (Armilla.) Like a bracelet, or having bracelets. Fr. anal. armillé, adj. Germ. syn. armbandig, adj.

Bĭ'gĕnus, a, um. (Bis, double; gĕno, to beget.) Bot. Applied by Nees von Esenbeck to trees that at the end of summer produce a second but feeble shoot of leaves, as the Pyrus. Fr. anal. bigène, adj.

Bĭgnōnie'us, a, um. Bot. Applied by A. Richard to a Section (f. pl.) of the Bignoniaceæ, having the Bignonia for their type. Fr. anal. bignonié, adj.

Bigram'mĭcus, a, um. (Bis; γραμμή, a line.) Entomol. Presenting two coloured lines, as the Bores bigrammica, the elytra of which bear two white rays. Fr. anal. bigrammique, adj.

Bĭguttātus, a, um. (Bis; gutta, a drop.) Entomol. Having two spots like drops, as the elytra of the Stenus biguttatus. Fr. anal. bimoucheté, adj.

Bĭ'lŏphus, a, um. (Bis, double: λόφος, a tuft.) Ornithol. The Trochilus bilophus has a tuft of long, thin feathers behind each eye. Fr. anal. bilophe, adj.

Biniflorus. Same as Biflorus.

Bīnoquadriūnĭtārius, a, um. (Bīnus; quadri-; unĭtārius.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a crystal resulting from five decreases, one by five rows, and each of the other four by a single row. Fr. anal. binoquadriunitaire, adj.

Bīnōsēnārius, a, um. (Bīnus; sex.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a crystal produced from two decreases, one by two, the other by six rows. Fr. anal. binosénaire, adj.

Biŏchēmĭcus, a, um. (Bíos, life; χημεία, chemistry.) Med., Physiol, Applied by Harless to the action which odorous bodies exercise upon animal organic matter, and upon the nervous power, in order to produce the sensation of odours. Fr. anal. biochimique, adj. Germ. syn. lebenschemisch, adj.

Biŏchȳmus, i, m. (Bíos, life; χῦμος, juice.) Bot., Physiol. Term for the life-juice of plants. Fr. anal. biochyme, m. Germ. syn. Lebenssaft, m.

Biŏdes'mus, i, m. (Bíos, life; δεσμὸς, a tie or band.) Med., Physiol. Term for the general and special tie or fundamental condition of life. Fr. anal. biodesme, m. Germ. syn. Lebensband, n.

Biŏdȳnă'mica, æ, f. (Bíos, life; δύναμις, power.) Med., Physiol. Term for the doctrine of actual life: biodyna'mics. See Biosophia. Fr. anal. biodynamique, f. Germ. syn. Biodynamik, f.

Biognōsis, is, or eos, f. (Bíos, life; γνῶσις, knowledge.) Med., Physiol. Term for the investigation, or knowledge of life. Fr. anal. biognose, f. Germ. syn. die Erforschung des Lebens.

Biŏmagnētis'mus, i, m. (Bíos, life; magnētismus.) Term for Animal Magnetism.

Biŏmĕ'tria, æ, f. (Bíos, life; μετρέω, to measure.) Med., Physiol. Term for the art of computing and reckoning life; bio'metry. Fr. and Germ. anal. biometrie, f.

Biophænŏ'mĕnŏlŏ'gia, æ, f. (Bíos, life; phænŏmĕnŏlŏgia.) Med., Physiol. Term for a treatise on the phenomena of life: phenomeno'logy. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 5. Fr. and Germ. anal. biophænomenologie, f.

Bioscŏ'pia, æ, f. (Bíos, life; σκοπέω, to behold.) Med., Physiol. Term for an exploration or examination of life: bio'scopy. Fr. anal. bioscopie, f. Germ. syn. Bioskopie, f.

Biŏsis, is, or eos, f. (Bíos, life.) Med., Physiol. Term for the progress or formation of life. Fr. anal. biose, f. Germ. syn. der Act des Lebens.

Biosphæ'ra, æ, f. (Bίος, life; σφαῖρα, a sphere.) Med., Physiol. Term for the globules of life. Fr. anal. biosphère, f. Germ. syn. Lebenskügelchen, n.

Biostă'tĭca, æ, f. (Bίος, life; στατικὸς, causing to stand.) Med., Physiol. Term for the doctrine of the equilibrium of life: biosta'tics. Fr. anal. biostatique, adj. Germ. anal. Biostatik, f.

Biŏtau'ra, æ, f. (Bίοτος, life; aura, air.) Med., Physiol. Term for Vital air.

Biōtĭcus, a, um. (Bίος, life; terminal -ικὸς.) Physiol. Some apply this to a hypothetical imponderable substance which they supposed to be the agent or chief vital material. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 6. Fr. anal. biotique, adj. Germ. syn. zum Leben gehörig.

Bioxalhy'drate. Chem. A salt containing twice as much oxalhydric acid, as the corresponding neutral salt. Oxalhy'dras, ātis, f. Fr. anal. oxalhydrate, m.

Bĭpărăsītĭcus, a, um. (Bis; părăsītĭcus.) Bot. Applied to a plant that lives parasitically on another parasite plant, as the Tremella parasitica on the stipes of the Agaricus parasiticus. Fr. anal. biparasite, adj.

Biphŏrīdeus, a, um. Zoöl. Applied by G. S. Macleay to a Family (f. pl.) of the Tunicata, having the Biphora for their type. Fr. anal. biphoridé, adj.

Bipŏlāris, is, e. Nat. Philos. Applied by Erman to bodies, imperfect conductors of electricity, exercising but one feeble or simply partial action on the pile placed in communication with them, i. e., those which at the same time that they determine a circulation from one pole to the other, have their two moieties constituted in opposite electric states. Fr. anal. bipolaire, adj. Germ. syn. zweipolar, adj.

Bisaddĭtīvus, a, um. (Bis, twice; addo, to add.) Mineral. Applied by Haüy to a crystal in the sign of which the stronger exposant surpasses by two unities the sum of the others, as the Baryta sulphata bisadditiva. Fr. anal. bisadditif, adj.

Bis'dĕcempunctātus, a, um. Entomol. Marked with twenty coloured points upon a ground of another tint, as the Coccinella bisdecempunctata. Fr. anal. bisdecemponctué, adj.

Bisi'licate. Chem. A silicate in which the oxygen of silicic acid is multiplied by two of that of the base combined with that acid. Fr. anal. bisilicate, m.

Călă'mŭla, æ, f. (Dim. Călămus.) A small reed or feather: a ca'lamule. Fr. anal. calamule, f. Germ. syn. Federchen, n.

Calandœ'ïdes, m. pl. Entomol. Name for a Group of the Curculionides. Fr. anal. calandeïdes, m. pl.

Călăthĭ'diflōrus, a, um. (Καλαθὶς, a little basket; flos, a flower.) Bot. Applied to an involucre when it surrounds a clinanthium charged with sessile flowers, or nearly so, somewhat resembling a small basket. Fr. anal. calathidiflore, adj.

Călăthĭ'dium, ii, n. (Καλαθὶς, a little basket.) Bot. Name by Mirbel and Cassini for a kind of inflorescence composed of sessile flowers thickly placed upon a common involucre. Adopted by Link, but applied by him only, to compound flowers which, before florescence or during the night, are enveloped totally by the common calyx: a ca'lathide. Fr. anal. calathide, f. Germ. syn. Blüthenkorb, m.

Călăthīnus, a, um. (Călăthus, a cup.) Bot. Applied to the Narcissus calathinus, because its crown is large and in form of a cup. Fr. anal. calathin, adj.

Călăthĭ'phŏrus, i, n. (Καλαθὶς, a little basket; φέρω, to bear.) Bot. Applied to the part which, in the Synantherecæ, bears the calathidia of the capitule. Fr. anal. calathiphore, m. Germ. syn. Blüthenkorbtrager, m.

Calcāreo-ferrūgĭnōsus, a, um.
Calcāreo-magnēsiānus, a, um.
Calcāreo-sābŭlōsus, a, um.
Calcāreo-sĭlĭcĭōsus, a, um.
(Calx, lime.) Chem., Geol. Containing, severally, lime and oxide of iron; magnesia; calcareous rocks and the débris of quartz rocks; silex. Fr. anal. calcareo-ferrugineux, -magnésien, -sableux, -siliceux, adj.

Calcārĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Calx, lime; or calcar, a spur; fĕro, to bear.) Mineral., Zoöl. Containing or mingled with lime. Bearing spurs. Fr. anal. calcarifère, adj.

Calcārōsus, a, um. Similar to Calcareus.

Calcēdŏ'nius, a, um.
Calcēdŏ'nĭcus, a, um.
See Chalcedonius.

Calceifor'mis, is, e. (Calceus, a shoe; forma, likeness.) Somewhat like a shoe. Fr. anal. calcéiforme, adj.

Calceŏlātus, a, um. Zoöl. Applied by Desmoulins to the only Family (m. pl.) of the Rudista, having the Calceola for their type. Fr. anal. calcéolé, adj.

Calce'ŏlifor'mis, is, e. (Calceŏlus, a little shoe; forma, likeness.) Same as preceding.

Cal'cĭco-. (Calx, lime.) Chem. A prefix in several compound terms, applied by Berzelius to double salts resulting from the combination of a calcic salt with another, indicated by the terminal portion of the epithet, as Calcico-ammonicus, etc.; the latter will be found explained in its proper place. Fr. anal. calcico-.

Cal'cĭdes, m. pl. Chem. Name for a genus of simple bodies, and a Family of ponderable bodies, having Calcium for their type. Fr. anal. calcides, m. pl.

Calcĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Calx; fĕro, to bear.) Mineral. Containing carbonate of lime. See Chalicophorus. Fr. anal. calcifère, adj. Germ. syn. kalktragend, part. adj.

Calcĭ'phўtus, a, um. (Calx; φυτὸν, a plant.) Zoöl. Applied by Blainville to a Class (n. pl.) of the Pseudozoa, containing organized, phytoid bodies composed of an internal fibrous and an external cretaceous substance, as the Corallina. Fr. anal. calciphyte, adj. Germ. syn. kalkpflanzig, adj.

Caleidŏphōnum, i, n. (Καλὸς, fair; εἶδος, appearance; φωνέω, to sound.) Nat. Philos. Name by Wheatstone for an optic and acoustic instrument for rendering visible the vibrations necessary to the production of sound: a calei'dophone. Fr. anal. caleidophone, m.

Calen'dŭlāceus, a, um. Bot. Applied to a sub-Tribe (f. pl.) of the Synantherecæ, having the Calendula for their type. Fr. anal. calendulacé, adj.

Calenduleus. Same as Calendulaceus.

Calendulin'. Chem. Name for a substance discovered by Geiger in the flowers of the Calendula officinalis, pertaining, according to Berzelius, to the class of vegetable mucilages, and which Gmelin considered as allied to zein, or starch. Calen'dŭlina, æ, f. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 4. Fr. anal. calenduline, f.

Călĭ'gidæ, patron. m. pl. Zoöl. Name for a Family of the Crustaceæ Branchiopoda, having the Caligus for their type. Fr. anal. caligides, m. pl.

Călĭ'gŭla, æ, f. (A half-boot.) Ornithol. Name by Illiger for the skin which covers the tarsus. Fr. anal. caligule, f. Germ. syn. Stiefel, m.

Calĭsay'cus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to salts having the Calisayna for their base. Fr. anal. calisayque, adj.

Calĭsay'na, æ, f. Chem. A vegetable alkali discovered by Pelletier and Caventou in the bark of the Cinchona calisayna. Fr. anal. calisayne, f.

Calisthĕ'nia, æ, f. (Καλὸς, fair; σθένος, strength.) Med. Name for a fashionable exercise, or play, for strengthening the body, and giving ease and elegance to the movements of the limbs: calis'thenics. Fr. anal. calisthénie, f. Germ. syn. Kalisthenie, f.

Callāceus, a, um. Bot. Applied to a Family (f. pl.) having the Calla for their type. Fr. anal. callacé, adj.

Calleus. Similar to Callaceus.

Callichrōmus, a, um. (Κάλλος, beauty; χρῶμα, colour.) Ornithol. Applied to a Tribe (m. pl.) of the Passeres remarkable for the beauty and brilliancy of their colours, as the Coracias, etc. Fr. anal. callichrome, adj.

Callĭfĕrus, a, um. (Callus; fĕro, to bear.) Conchol. Bearing or having callus, as the Trochus calliferus. Fr. anal. callifère, adj. Germ. syn. schwieltragend, part. adj.

Callĭpȳgus, a, um. (Κάλλος, beauty; πυγή, the buttocks.) Applied to the Venus callipyga, because of a white spot in form of an angular star at its base. Fr. anal. callipyge, adj.

Callitrĭ'cheus, a, um. } Bot. Applied to a
Callitrĭchīneus, a, um. } Tribe (f. pl.) of the Haloragea, having the Callitriche for their type. Fr. anal. callitriché, adj.

Cal'lus, i, m. Bot. A polymorphous organ, admitted by Trinius into the Gramineæ, and which, according to Raspail, is only the base of the inferior palea. Fr. anal. callus, m.

Călŏcĕ'phălus, a, um. (Καλός, fair; κεφαλή, a head.) Bot. Applied to many plants because of the beauty of their calathidia. Fr. anal. calocéphale, adj. Germ. syn. schönkopfig, adj.

Călŏ'phȳtus, a, um. (Καλός, fair; φυτόν, a plant.) Bot. Applied by Bartling to a Class (f. pl.) containing the Pomaceæ, Rosaceæ, Dryadeæ, Spireaceæ, Amygdaleæ, Chrysobalaneæ, Papilionaceæ, Swartzieæ, Cesalpinieæ, and Mimoseæ. Fr. anal. calophyte, adj. Germ. syn. schönpflanzig, adj.

Călŏpŏ'dium, ii, n. (Καλοπόδιον, a shoemaker's last.) Bot. Name for the spatha of the Aroideæ, from its form. Fr. anal. calopode, m. Germ. syn. Kolbenhulle, f.

Călōps, adj. (Καλός, fair; ὤψ, the eye.) Ichthyol. Having a very great or very brilliant eye, as the Labrus calops. Fr. anal. calops, adj. Germ. syn. schönaugig, adj.

Călo'ptĕrus, a, um. (Καλός, fair; πτέρον, a wing.) Entomol. Having beautiful wings. Fr. anal. caloptère, adj. Germ. syn. schönflugelicht, adj.

Călŏpūs, a, um. (Καλός, fair; πούς, a foot.) Bot. Having a beautiful foot, or stipes. Fr. anal. calope, adj. Germ. syn. schönfussig, adj.

Călōrĭ'fĭcus, a, um. (Călor; făcio, to make.) Nat. Philos. Making heat; applied to those luminous rays which produce heat: calori'fic. Fr. anal. calorifique, adj. Germ. syn. erwarmend, part. adj.

Călōrĭmōtor, ōris, m. (Călor; mōtor.) Nat. Philos. Name for an electric apparatus by R. Hare, from its property of producing by its discharge highly elevated temperatures, and their phenomena. Fr anal. calorimoteur, m.

Cal'pa, æ, f. (Καλπή, an urn.) Bot. Name for the urn of mosses. Fr. anal. calpe, f.

Călȳ'bio, ōnis, f. (Καλύβιον, a small hut.) Bot. Name for a fruit formed of one or several glands, contained wholly or partly in a cupula. Fr. anal. calybion, m.

Călȳcan'drius, a, um. (Călyx; ἀνήρ, a man.) Bot. Applied by L. C. Richard to a Class (n. pl.) of his modified sexual system, having more than ten stamens inserted into a calyx, the ovary being free or parietal. Fr. anal. calycandrié, adj.

Călȳcanthīneus, a, um. Bot. Applied to a Class (f. pl.) including the Granateæ and Calycantheæ.

Călȳcātus. Same as Calycinus.

Călȳcĭfor'mis, is, e. (Călyx; forma, likeness.) Bot. Formed like a calyx: cali'ciform. Fr. anal. caliciforme, adj. Germ. syn. kelchförmig, adj.

Calȳcīnāris, is, e. } Same as Calycinus.

Călȳcīniānus, a, um. Bot. Applied by Mirbel to the induviæ when they come from the calyx. Fr. anal. calycinien, adj.

Călȳcoïdēs, adj. (Călyx; terminal -ĭdēs.) Resembling a calyx: ca'lycoid. See Diss. div. i. s. i. Fr. anal. calycoïde, adj. Germ. syn. kelchähnlich, adj.

Călȳcostēmŏnis, is, e. (Călyx; στήμων, a stamen.) Bot. Applied to a Class (f. pl.) having the stamens inserted on the calyx. Fr. anal. calycostémone, adj.

Călyptērātus, a, um. (Καλυπτήρ, a covering.) Entomol. Applied to a Family (f. pl.) of the Myodariæ, having broad alulæ, with double squamæ, and covering the halteres. Fr. anal. calyptéré, adj.

Călyptēria, n. pl. (Same.) Ornithol. Name for the covertures of the tail of birds. Fr. anal. calyptères, m. pl. Germ. syn. Schwanzdekken, f. pl.

Călyptrānōlēnus, a, um. (Καλυπτήρ, a covering; a, priv.; ὠλένη, the arm.) Zoöl. Applied to an Order (n. pl.) of the Mollusca Acephala having no arms. Fr. anal. calyptranolène, adj.

Camēlornīthes, m. pl. (Κάμηλος, the camel; ὄρνις, a bird.) Ornithol. Name for a Family including the ostrich, from the faculty with which it traverses the desert like the camel. Fr. anal. camélornithes, m. pl.

Căměrĭtēlus, a, um. (Căměra, a chamber; tēla, a web.) Entomol. Applied to spiders that make intricate webs, within which they hide themselves. Fr. anal. camérité, adj.

Căměro'stŏma, æ, f. (Căměra, a vault; στόμα, a mouth.) Entomol. Name for the anterior part of the body of the Arachnides, forming a kind of cover or vault above the organs of manducation. Fr. anal. camérostôme, m.

Cămĕ'rŭla, æ, f. Dim. of Camera.

Campānellātus, a, um. (Campāna.) Bot. Applied to the corol when tubulous at the base, globulous in the middle, and again tubulous above, as in the Synantherecæ. Fr. anal. campanellé, adj.

Campāniflōrus, a, um. (Campāna; flos, a flower.) Bot. Having bell-shaped flowers. Fr. anal. campaniflore, adj. Germ. syn. glockenblättrig, adj.

Campānŭliflōrus. Same as preceding.

Campānŭlīnus, a, um. (Campāna, a bell.) Bot. Applied by Bartling to a Class (f. pl.) comprehending the Goodenovieæ, Stylideæ, Lobeliaceæ, and Campanulaceæ. Fr. anal. campanuliné, adj.

Camphŏleu'lea, n. pl. Med., Pharm. Term by Béral for combinations of ethereal oils with camphor.

Camphŏ'rīda, æ, f. Chem. Generic name by Fechner for substances of vegetable origin that approach camphor in their properties, as alcornin, betulin, cerin, succinic camphor, and that of bitter almonds: a cam'phoride. Fr. anal. camphoride, f.

Campĭ'cŏlus, a, um. (Campus, a field; cŏlo, to inhabit.) Living or growing in fields. Fr. anal. campicole, adj. Germ. syn. feldbewohnend, part. adj.

Campsi'chrōtes, m. pl. (Κάμπτω, to fold; χροτή, the surface of the body.) Zoöl. Name for an Order of the Reptilia, having the skin more or less soft and the body flexible, as the Saurii and Batrachii. Fr. anal. campsichrotes, m. pl.

Campŭli'trōpus, a, um. (Καμπύλος, bent; τρέπω, to turn.) Bot., Physiol. Applied by Mirbel to the embryo when, in the progressive development of the ovule, the hilum, which is confounded with the chalaza, does not remain with it directly opposite the exostome, but when that situation, relative to the hilum, the chalaza and exostome, changes very slowly, the ovule bends on itself so as to bring its summit near to its base. Fr. anal. campulitrope, adj.

Campўlŏcēlus, a, um. (Καμπύλος, bent; κοιλία, the intestines.) Zoöl. Applied to the Infusoria Enterodela, the internal canal of which, provided with two openings, is not limited to the length of the body, but has flexuosities. Fr. anal. campylocèle, adj. Germ. syn. mit verkrümmten Eingeweiden.

Campўlŏchīrus, a, um. (Καμπύλος, bent; χείρ, the hand.) Zoöl. Having the hands, arms, or anterior extremities bent. Fr. anal. campylochire, adj. Germ. syn. mit verkrümmten Händen.

Campylŏ'phўtum, i, n. (Καμπύλος, bent; φυτόν, a plant.) Bot. Applied to plants the superior part of the corol of which is obliquely inflected, and more frequently, turned spirally before blowing. Fr. anal. campylophyte, m.

Campўlo'ptĕrus, a, um. (Καμπύλος, bent; πτερόν, a wing.) Ornithol. Applied to the Trochilus campylopterus, because some of the large feathers of its wing have the quill enlarged, and bent in the form of the blade of a sabre. Fr. anal. campyloptère, adj. Germ. syn. mit verkrümmten Flugeln.

Campўlor'rhăchis, eos, f. } (Καμπύλος, bent; Campўlorrhīnus, i, m. } ῥάχις, the spine; ῥίν, the nose.) Med., Physiol. Terms for a fetus with a distorted back, or with crooked nose. Fr. anal. campylorrhachis, f.; campylorrhine, m. Germ. syn. Missgeburt mit Rückgratsverkrümmung, oder mit Nasenverkrümmung.

Campўlosper'meus, a, um. (Καμπύλος, bent; σπέρμα, seed.) Bot. Applied to a Section (f. pl.) of the Umbelliferæ, having the embryo bent. Fr. anal. campylosperme, adj.

Cănălĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Cănālis; fĕro, to bear.) Conchol. Having canals or siphons, as the Spatangus canaliferus. Fr. anal. canalifère, adj. Germ. syn. röhrtragend, part. adj.

Cancerideus. Same as Cancroides.

Cancĕrōma. Celsus's term for Carcinoma.

Cancrastăcoīdēs, adj. (Cancer; ἀστακός, a crawfish; terminal -īdēs.) Zoöl. Applied to a Class (m. pl.) of the Decapoda. See Diss. div. i. s. i. Fr. anal. cancrastacoïde, adj.

Cancrĭfor'mis, is, e. (Cancer; forma, likeness.) Zoöl. Formed like a crab. Fr. anal. cancriforme, adj. Germ. syn. krebsförmig, adj.

Cancrĭ'vŏrus, a, um. } (Cancer; vŏro, to de-Cancro'phăgus, a, um. } vour; φάγω, to eat.) Zoöl. Devouring or eating crabs, as the Procyon cancrivorus, Alcedo cancrophaga. Fr. anal. cancrivore, adj.; cancrophage, adj. Germ. syn. krebsfressend, part. adj.

Canellin'. Chem. Name by Fechner for a saccharated, crystallisable material which exists in the Canella. Canellīna, æ, f. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 4. Fr. anal. canelline, f.

Cănōrus, a, um. (Cănor, a singing.) Ornithol. Having a voice more or less harmonious. Fr. syn. chanteur, adj.

Cantărel'la, A'qua. Same as Aquetta, or Aqua Toffana.

Canthectŏ'mia, æ, f. (Canthus; ἐκτομή, a cutting out.) Med., Surg. Term for excision of the canthus: canthec'tomy. Fr. anal. canthectomie, f. Germ. syn. Augenwinkelnausschnitt, m.

Canthītis, ĭdis, f. (Canthus; terminal -ītis.) Med., Pathol. Inflammation of one or both canthi. Fr. anal. canthite, f. Germ. syn. eine Entzundung in einem oder beiden Augenwinkeln.

Căpillārĭtas, ātis, f. (Căpillus.) Nat. Philos. Term for that power on which the capillary phenomena depend, and which is exercised in contact with the lightest particle of ponderable matter: capilla'rity. Fr. anal. capillarité, f. Germ. syn. Haarröhrchenanziehung, f.

Căpillĭfŏ'lius, a, um. (Căpillus; fŏlium, a leaf.) Bot. Having capillary leaves, as the Polygala capillifolia. Fr. anal. capillifolié, adj. Germ. syn. haarblättrig, adj.

Căpillĭfor'mis, is, e. (Căpillus; forma, likeness.) Having the form or appearance of hair: capil'liform. Fr. anal. capilliforme, adj. Germ. syn. haarförmig, adj.

Căpĭtellātus, a, um. (Căpĭtellum.) Bot. Similar to Capitulatus.

Căpĭtŭlāriāceus, a, um. Bot. Applied to a Group (f. pl.) of the Lichenes. Fr. anal. capitulariacé, adj.

Căpĭ'tŭlĭfor'mis, is, e. (Căpĭtŭlum; forma, likeness.) Bot. Having the appearance of a small head: capi'tuliform. Fr. anal. capituliforme, adj. Germ. syn. kopfchenförmig, adj.

Capno'ptĕrus, a, um. (Καπνὸς, smoke; πτέρον, a wing.) Entomol., Ornithol. Having yellowish wings. Fr. anal. capnoptère, adj. Germ. syn. gelbflugelicht, adj.

Capricus. Same as Caproicus.

Caprin'. Chem. Name by L. Gmelin for a greasy substance, as having a probable existence, which, by saponification, is transformed into capric acid and glycerin. Caprīna, æ, f. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 4. Fr. anal. caprine, f. Germ. syn. Caprinfett, n.

Caproin'. Same as Caprin.

Capsicin'. Chem. Name for an acrid, oleaginous, or resinoid substance which Braconnot found in the Capsicum annuum, but which had been seen before him by Bucholz. Capsĭcīna, æ, f. Fr. anal. capsicine, f.

Capsin'cŏlus, a, um. (Capsŭla; incola, an inhabitant.) Entomol. Living in legumes, which they devour, as the Bruchus capsincola. Fr. anal. capsincole, adj. Germ. syn. kapselbewohnend, part. adj.

Capsŏcătărac'ta, æ, f. (Capsŭla; cătăracta.) Med., Pathol. Term for capsular cataract. Fr. anal. capsocataracte, f. Germ. syn. Kapselstaar, m.

Capsŭlĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Capsŭla; fĕro, to bear.) Bot. Applied to the tubercles of the Florideæ, because they contain capsules, which again contain the reproductive bodies. Fr. anal. capsulifère, adj. Germ. syn. kapseltragend, part. adj.

Capsŭlītis, ĭdis, f. (Capsŭla; terminal -ītis.) Med., Pathol. Term for inflammation of the capsule of the lens of the eye. Fr. anal. capsulite, f. Germ. syn. die Entzündung der Linsenkapsel im Auge.

Căpŭ'leus, a, um. (Căpŭla, a cup.) Zoöl. Applied to a Family (n. pl.) of the Gasteropoda Aspidobranchiata, having a shell like a cup. Fr. anal. capulé, adj.

Căpŭloīdēs, adj. (Căpŭla, a cup; terminal -īdēs.) Resembling a cup: ca'puloid. Fr. anal. capuloïde, adj. Germ. syn. becherähnlich, adj.

Cărăbĭcus, a, um. Entomol. Applied to a Tribe (m. pl.) of the Coleoptera, having the Carabus for their type. Fr. anal. carabique, adj.

Carapin'. Chem. Name by Boullay for an alkaloid substance found in the oil of Carapa; in the bark of the Carapa Guianensis by Petroz and Robinet. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 4. Cărăpīna, æ, f. Fr. anal. carapine, f.

Carbazo'tate. (Carbăzōticum acĭdum; terminal -ate.) Chem. A combination of carbazotic acid with a salifiable base. Carbăzōtas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. carbazotate, m. Germ. syn. kohlenstickstoffsauer Salz.

Carbohy'drĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to an acid body (carbohydric sulphide) discovered by Zeise, resulting from the combination of a hydric with a carbonic sulphide: carbohy'dric. Fr. anal. carbohydrique, adj.

Carbōneus, a, um. Chem. Containing carbon. Fr. anal. carboné, adj.

Car'bonite. Chem. Name for the oxalates, if that of Acidum carbinosum be adopted for oxalic acid. Carbōnis, ītis, f.

Carbōnōsus, a, um. Chem. Dœbereiner terms oxalic acid, which contains less of carbon than carbonic acid, Acidum carbinosum. Berzelius terms the first of the three degrees of combination of carbon with chlorin Chloridum carbonosum, and the third, Chloruretum carbonosum. Fr. anal. carboneux, adj.

Carbōno'xўdum, i, m. Chem. Name by Beudant for the natural combinations of carbon and oxygen: a carbono'xide. Fr. anal. carbonoxide, m.

Carbōsulphŭrētum, i, n. Chem. Name by Berzelius for a combination of carburet of sulphur with an alkali: a carbosul'phuret. Fr. anal. carbosulfure, m. Germ. syn. Schwefelkohlenstoffkali, n.

Carbōsulphŭrōsus, a, um. Chem. Berzelius termed a body discovered, in 1812, by Marcet, and which he believed to be a combination of carbonic oxichloride with a corresponding compound of sulphur, and called sulphurous oxichloride. Fr. anal. carbosulfureux, adj.

Carcĕ'rŭla, æ, f. Bot. Name by Mirbel for dry indehiscent fruits which are neither Cypelæ nor Cerionæ: a car'cerule. Fr. anal. carcérule, f.

Carcĕrŭlāris, is, e. (Carcĕrŭla.) Bot. Applied by Mirbel to dry indehiscent fruits containing few seeds, and free, i. e. not enveloped in other organs: carce'rular. Fr. anal. carcérulaire, adj.

Carcĭnelcōsis, is, or eos, f. (Καρκίνος, a crab; ἕλκωσις, ulceration.) Med., Pathol. Term for a cancerous ulcer. Fr. anal. carcinelcose, f. Germ syn. Krebsgeschwür, n.

Carcĭnoīdēs, adj. (Καρκίνος, a crab; terminal -īdēs.) Resembling the crab: car'cinoid. See Diss. div. i. s. i. Fr. anal. carcinoïde, adj. Germ. syn. krebsähnlich, adj.

Carcĭnŏlŏ'gia, æ, f. (Καρκίνος, a crab; λόγος, a discourse.) Zoöl. Term for a treatise on crabs or on the Crustaceæ: carcino'logy. Fr. and Germ. anal. carcinologie, f.

Carcĭnŏpŏ'lўpus, i, m. (Carcĭnus; pŏlўpus.) Med., Pathol. A cancerous or carcinomatous polypus. Fr. anal. carcinopolype, m. Germ. syn. krebsartig Polyp.

Carcy'thium, ii, n. Bot. Name by Necker for the more slender parenchyma of vegetables changed by the influence of external agents, becoming, according to him, the rudiment of mushrooms. See Cercidium, Mycelium. Fr. anal. carcythe, m.

Cardi'ăgra, æ, f. (Cardia; ἄγρα, a seizure.) Med., Pathol. Pain of the heart. See Cardiodynia. Fr. anal. cardiagre, f. Germ. syn. Herzschmerz, m.

Cĕrātostrōma, ătis, n. (Cĕrāto; στρῶμα, anything spread out.) Med. A covering of the skin with horn. Fr. anal. cératostrome, m. Germ. anal. Ceratostrom, n.

Cĕrātostrōsis, is, or eos, f. (Cĕrāto; στρῶσις, a spreading.) Med. The progress of Ceratostroma. Fr. anal. cératostrose, f.

Cĕrātŏsўphĭlŏ'lĕpis, ĭdis, f. (Cĕrāto; sўphĭlŏlĕpis.) Med., Pathol. Horny syphilolepis, or syphilitic scaly eruptions of the hand. Fr. anal. cératosyphilolépis, f. Germ. syn. das hornartige Schuppensyphilid des Handtellers.

Cĕrātŏtŏ'mia, æ, f. (Cĕrāto; τέμνω, to cut.) Med., Surg. Term for a section of the cornea: cerato'tomy. Fr. anal. cératotomie, f. Germ.syn. Hornhautschnitt, m.

Cĕrauniar'gўrus, i, m. (Κεραυνὸς, thunder; ἄργυρος, silver.) Chem. Fulminating silver. Fr. anal. cérauniargyre, m. Germ. syn. Knallsilber, n.

Cĕraunydrar'gўrum, i, m. (Κεραυνὸς, thunder; ὑδράργυρος, quicksilver.) Chem. Fulminating mercury. Fr. anal. cérauny drargyre, m. Germ. syn. Knallquecksilber, n.

Cerchnas'mus. Same as Cerchnus.

Cercidium. Same as Carcythium.

Cercŏpĭthēcus, i, m. (Κέρκος, a tail; πίθηκος, an ape.) Zoöl. Applied to a Family (nom. pl.) of the Mammifera Quadrumana, having a tail. Fr. anal. cercopithèque, m. Germ. syn. Schwanzaffe, m.

Cēreānus, a, um. (Cēra.) Entomol. Applied to the Galleria cereana, because its larve lives in the wax of the cells of bees: ce'rean. Fr. anal. céréan, adj. Germ. syn. wachsen, adj.

Cĕrĕ'bria, æ, f. (Cĕrĕbrum.) Med., Pathol. Term by Scip. Pinel for mental derangement or disordered brain. Fr. anal. cérébrie, f. Germ. syn. Geistesstörung, f.

Cerebrin'. (Cĕrĕbrum.) Chem. Name by Vauquelin, Gmelin, and O. P. Kuhn for the cerebral, lamellous stearin obtained from the brain-mass. Cĕrĕbrīna, æ, f. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 4. Fr. and Germ. anal. cérébrine, f.

Cĕrĕbrōsis, is, or eos, f. (Cĕrĕbrum.) Med., Pathol. Name for Phrenitis.

Cēreĭfor'mis, is, e. (Cēreus, a taper; forma, likeness.) Bot. Formed like a wax-taper; applied to slender stems: cere'iform. Fr. anal. céréiforme, adj. Germ. syn. wachskerzformig, adj.

Cĕrĕ'rium, ii, n. Chem. Klaproth's name for Cerium.

Ceretrin'. A term believed to be intended for Cetrarin.

Cĕ'rĭco-pŏtas'sĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to a double salt formed by a combination of a ceric with a potassic salt. Fr. anal. cérico-potassique, adj.

Cĕ'rĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to an oxide, or the second degree of oxidation of cerium; to a chloruret, sulphuret, and fluoruret which correspond to that oxide in composition; to salts produced by the combination of the ceric oxide with oxacids: ce'ric. Fr. anal. cérique, adj.

Cĕ'rĭdes, m. pl. Chem. Name by Ampère for a genus of simple bodies having Cerium for their type. Fr. anal. cérides, m. pl.

Cērĭ'fĕrus, a, um. (Cēra; fĕro, to bear.) Bot. Bearing or producing wax, as the Myrica cerifera. Fr. anal. cérifère, adj. Germ. syn. wachstragend, part. adj.

Cērĭ'gĕrus, a, um. (Cēra; gĕro, to bear.) Ornithol. Applied to the beak when furnished with a cera. Fr. anal. cérigère, adj. Germ. syn. wachshauttragend, part. adj.

Cērĭros'tris, is, e. (Cēra; rostrum, a beak.) Ornithol. Having the beak supplied with a cera at its base. Fr. anal. cérirostre, adj. Germ. syn. wachshautschnabelig, adj.

Cēroīdēs, adj. (Cēra; terminal -īdēs.) Resembling wax: ce'rous. See Diss. div. i. s. i. Fr anal. céroïde, adj. Germ. syn. wachsähnlich, adj.

Cēroīdeus. Same as Ceroides.

Cĕrŏ'mўces, ētis, m. (Cēra ; μύκης, a fungus.) Same as Cerospongus.

Cĕrŏ'phŏrus, a, um. (Κέρας, a horn ; φέρω, to bear.) Zoöl. Applied to a Section (n. pl.) of the Ruminantia having round horns. Fr. anal. cérophore, adj. Germ. syn. hornttragend, part. adj.

Cĕrō'sia, æ, f. } (Κηρός, wax.) Chem. Name
Cĕrōsīna, æ, f. } for the wax found in plants : ce'rosine. Fr. anal. cérosine, f. Germ. anal. Kerosine, f.

Cĕrōso-cĕ'rĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to a chloruret, and an oxide produced by the combination of a cerous chloruret, or oxide, with a ceric chloruret, or oxide. Fr. anal. céroso-cérique, adj.

Cĕrōso-pŏtas'sĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied by Berzelius to double salts produced by the combination of a cerous with a potassic salt. Fr. anal. céroso-potassique, adj.

Cĕrospon'gus, i, m. (Cēra ; σπόγγος, a fungus.) Bot. The wax-mushroom. Fr. anal. cérospongus, m. Germ. syn. Wachsschwamm, m.

Cerostroma. See Ceratostroma.

Cerostrosis. See Ceratostrosis.

Cĕrōsus, a, um. Chem. Applied to an oxide, which is the first degree of oxidation of cerium, etc. : ce'rous. Fr. anal. céreux, adj.

Cerotomalagma. See Ceratomalagma.

Ceroxylin'. Chem. Name by Bonastre for a crystalline substance extracted from the wax obtained by grating the bark of the Ceroxylon anaticola. Cēroxўlīna, æ, f. Fr. anal. céroxyline, f.

Cervĭcobranchiātus, a, um. (Cervix ; βράγχια, the branchiæ.) Zoöl. Applied to an Order (n. pl.) of the Paracephalophora, having the branchiæ in a cavity above the neck. Fr. anal. cervicobranche, adj. Germ. syn. halskiemig, adj.

Cervĭcor'nis, is, e. (Cervus ; cornu, a horn.) Entomol. Applied to the Ontophagus cervicornis, because its head has two straight and ramous horns. Fr. anal. cervicorne, adj. Germ. syn. hirschhornig, adj.

Cervĭcŭlātus, a, um. (Cervix.) Entomol. Applied to the prothorax when lengthened, slender, and distinct from the antepectus by a suture, so that it forms a long, well-developed neck. Fr. anal. cervicalé, adj. Germ. syn. mit Hals.

Chīrorrheu'ma, ătis, n. (Χείρ, the hand; rheuma.) Med., Pathol. Rheumatism of the hand: chirorrheu'matism. Fr. anal. chirorrhumatisme, m. Germ. syn. eine Rheumatismus an der Hand.

Chīrōthēr, ēris, m. (Χείρ, the hand; θήρ, a wild beast.) Zoöl. Name for a wild animal with hand-like feet or claws. Fr. anal. chirothère, m. Germ. syn. Handthiere, m.

Chīrōthērium, ii, n. Zoöl. Dim. of Chirother.

Chīrurgorgăneu'ma, ătis, n. } (Chīrurgorgă- Chīrurgorgănōma, ătis, n. } num.) Med., Surg. A surgical instrument-chest. See Chirapotheca. Fr. anal. chirurgorganome, m. Germ. syn. ein chirurg. Instrumentenkasten.

Chīrurgor'gănum, i, n. (Chīrurgus; orgănum.) Med., Surg. A surgical instrument. Fr. anal. chirurgorganon, m. Germ. syn. ein chirurgisch Werkzeug. Also the same as Chirurgorganeuma. See Chirapotheca. Fr. anal. chirurgorgane, m.

Chismobranchiātus, a, um. (Χίσμη, a slit; βράγχια, the branchiæ.) Zoöl. Applied to an Order (n. pl.) of the Paracephalophora having the branchiæ in a cavity communicating externally by a broad slit. Fr. anal. chismobranche, adj. Germ. syn. spaltkeimig, adj.

Chismo'pneus, a, um. (Χίσμη, a slit; πνέω, to breathe.) Ichthyol. Applied by Duméril to an Order (f. pl.) of the Cartilaginosi the branchiæ of which, without opercules, are covered by a membrane having a slit on each side of the neck. Fr. anal. chismopné, adj. Germ. syn. spaltathmend, part. adj.

Chitīna, æ, f. (Χιτών, a doublet.) Entomol. Name by Odier for the hard crust which forms the outward tegument, and especially the elytra, of the Coleoptera. Fr. anal. chitine, f.

Chlămȳdoblas'tus, a, um. (Χλαμύς, a cloak; βλαστός, a sucker.) Bot. Applied by Bartling to a Group (f. pl.) of dicotyledoneous plants having the embryo in a proper sac. Fr. anal. chlamydoblaste, adj.

Chliărōlūtrum, i, n. (Χλιαρός, warm; λουτρόν, a bath.) Med., Pharm. A tepid bath.) Fr. anal. chliarolutron, m. Germ. syn. das warme Bad.

Chlēnāceus, a, um. (Χλαῖνα, a cloak.) Bot. Applied to a Family (f. pl.) having the capsule enveloped by a thick involucre. Fr. anal. chlénacé, adj.

Chloīna, æ, f. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 4. Fr. anal. chloine, f.

Chlōrăc'ĭdum, i, n. (Χλωρός, green; acĭdum.) Chem. Name for an acid in which chlorin is supposed to play the part of acidifying principle: a chlora'cid. Fr. anal. chloracide, m.

Chlōræmătīna, æ, f. (Chlōrium; hæmătīna.) Chem. Name by Brett and Bird for a yellow substance obtained from a solution of dry hematin in dilute nitric acid: chlore'matin'. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 5. Fr. and Germ. anal. chlorématin, f.

Chlōran'thia, æ, f. (Χλωρός, green; ἄνθος, a flower.) Bot. Name by Dupetit-Thouars for a vegetable monstrosity or luxuriance, consisting in the transformation of floral organs into veritable flowers, as in the Tetragonia expansa. Fr. and Germ. anal. chloranthie, f.

Chlōran'thus, a, um. (Same.) Bot. Having green flowers, as the Pyrola chlorantha. Fr. anal. chloranthe, adj. Germ. syn. grünblümig, adj.

Chlōrēpătītis, ĭdis, f. (Χλωρός, green; hēpătītis.) Med., Pathol. Chlorotic inflammation of the liver. Fr. anal. chlorépatite, f. Germ. syn. die Leberentzündung mit Bleichsucht.

Chlōrēphidrōsis, is, or eos, f. (Χλωρός, green; ephidrōsis.) Med., Pathol. Greenish perspiration. Fr. anal. chloréphidrose, f. Germ. syn. der grüne Schweiss.

Chlo'ric E'ther. Med., Pharm. Term for a solution of chloroform in rectified spirit. In U.S.A. two varieties are known; that of commerce, containing 1 part chloroform to 15 of alcohol; the other, 1 to 9. The last proportions are said to be those used at the London Apothecaries' Hall. Æther Chlōrĭcus. Fr. anal. éther chlorique.

Chlōric'tĕrus, a, um. (Χλωρός, green; ἴκτερος, yellow.) Ornithol. The Tachyphonus chloricterus has plumage from a yellow to a deep saffron colour. Fr. anal. chlorictère, adj. Germ. syn. grüngelbig, adj.

Chlori'odate. (Chlōriōdĭcum acĭdum; terminal -āte.) Chem. A combination of chloriodic acid with a salifiable base. Chlōriōdas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. chloriodate, m. Germ. syn. Chloriodsalz, n.

Chlōris, ītis, f. Chem. A combination of chlorous acid with a salifiable base: a chlo'rite. Fr. anal. chlorite, m.

Chloris'tĭcus, a, um. Chem. The chloristic theory admits chlorine to be a simple body, with the consequences flowing from that principle. Fr. anal. chloristique, adj.

Chlōrītĭcus, a, um. } chlori'tic: chlori'tous.
Chlōrītōsus, a, um. } Fr. anal. chlorité, chloritique, chloriteux, adj.

Chloro-antimo'niate. } Chem. Combinations of Chloro-argen'tate. } an antimonic or an argentic chloruret with electro-positive metals. Chlōro-antimonius, ātis, f.; -oxygentas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. chloro-antimoniate, -argentate, m.

Chloro-au'rate. Chem. A combination of auric chloride with a chloruret of an electro-positive metal. Chlōro-au'ras, ātis, f. Fr. anal. chloro-aurate, m.

Chlorobo'ruret. Chem. By combining boric and ammonic chloride gases, a body is produced called ammoniacal chloroboruret. Chlōrōbōrūrētum, i, n. Fr. an. chloroborure, m.

Chlorocarbonas. See Chloroxycarbonas.

Chlōrōcĕ'phălus, a, um. (Χλωρός, green; κεφαλή, a head.) Ornithol. Having a green head.

Fr. anal. chlorocéphale, adj. Germ. syn. grünkopfig, adj.

Chlorocu'prate. Chem. A combination of a cupric chloruret with a chloruret of an electro-positive metal. Chlōrōcu'pras, ātis, f. Fr. anal. chlorocuprate, m.

Chlōrōcy'ānas, ātis, f. Chem. A combination of chlorocyanic acid with a salifiable base: a chlorocy'anate. Fr. anal. chlorocyanate, m.

Chlōrocyă'nuret. Chem. A combination of a chloruret and a cyanuret. Chlōrōcyānūrētum, i, n. Fr. anal. chlorocyanure, m.

Chlōrōfer'rocyă'nĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied to an acid supposed to be formed of chlorine, cyanogen, and iron. Fr. anal. chloroferrocyanique, adj.

Chlorofluo'ruret. Chem. Name by Berzelius for a double salt resulting from a combination of a chloruret and a fluoruret. Chlōrofluōrūrētum, i, n. Fr. anal. chlorofluorure, m.

Chlōrōgastĕr, tra, trum. (Chloro ; γαστὴρ, the belly.) Zöol. Having a yellow belly. Fr. anal. chlorogastre, adj. Germ. syn. gelbbauchig, adj.

Chlōrōgŏni'dium, ii, n. (Chlōro-; γονὴ, seed.) Bot. Name for gonidia of a golden yellow colour. Fr. anal. chlorogonidie, m. Germ. syn. Grünbrutzelle, f.

Chlorohydrar'gyrate. Chem. Name for a combination of mercuric chloruret with great part of the chlorurets of electro-positive metals. Chlōrōhydrar'gўras, ātis, f. Fr. anal. chlorohydrargyrate, m.

Chlorohydricus. Same as Hydrochloricus.

Chlōrōleu'cus, a, um. (Chlōro-; λευκὸς, white.) Bot. Of a green and white colour. Fr. anal. chloroleuque, adj. Germ. syn. grünweissig, adj.

Chlōrŏ'lŏphus, a, um. (Chlōro-; λοφία, a horse-mane.) Ornithol. Having a yellowish green crest. Fr. anal. chlorolophe, adj.

Chlōrŏ'mĕtrum, i, n. (Chlōro-; μέτρον, a measure.) Chem. An apparatus for estimating the quantity of chlorine in combination with water or with a base: a chloro'meter. Fr. anal. chloromètre, m.

Chlōrŏnīta. Same as Chlorophylle.

Chlōrŏnōtus, a, um. (Chlōro-; νῶτος, the back.) Having an olive-green back. Fr. anal. chloronote, adj. Germ. syn. mit grün Rücken.

Chloropal'ladate. Chem. Name for a double salt from combination of chloruret of palladium with chlorurets of electro-positive metals. Fr. anal. chloropalladate, m.

Chlōro'phănus, a, um. (Chlōro-; φαίνω, to shine.) Of a yellow, or yellowish appearance. Fr. anal. chlorophane, adj. Germ. syn. grünschimmernd, part. adj.

Chlōrophosphŏ'rĭcus, a, um. Chem. The deuto-chloruret of phosphorus is termed chlorophosphoric acid, because it reddens litmus paper. Fr. anal. chlorophosphorique, adj.

Chlōrophosphŏrōsus, a, um. Chem. The proto-chloruret of phosphorus is termed chloro-phosphorous acid, because it reddens the litmus, or turnsol-paper. Fr. anal. chlorophosphoreux, adj.

Chlōrophosphūrētum, i, n. Chem. A compound containing chlorine and phosphorus more than any other body: a chlorophos'phuret. Fr. anal. chlorophosphure, m.

Chlōro'phthĭsis, is, or eos, f. (Chlōro-; φθίσις, a wasting.) Med., Pathol. Chlorotic tabes. Fr. anal. chlorophthisie, f. Germ. syn. die Bleichsucht mit Schwindsucht.

Chlōro'phўtum, i, n. (Chlōro-; φυτὸν, a plant.) Bot. Applied to all plants having a successive evolution, and green parts or expansions: a chlo'rophyte. Fr. anal. chlorophyte, m. Germ. syn. Gründpflanze, f.

Chloropla'tinate. Chem. A combination of platinic chloruret with those of electro-positive metals. Chlōroplătīnas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. chloroplatinate, m.

Chlōrŏ'pŏdus. Same as Chloropus.

Chlōrŏpus, a, um. (Chlor-; πούς, a foot.) Bot. Having greenish feet or yellow peduncles. Fr. anal. clorope, adj. Germ syn. grünfüssig, adj.

Chlōrŏpўgus, a, um. (Chlōro-; πυγὴ, the rump.) Entomol. Having a green rump. Fr. anal. chloropyge, adj. Germ. syn. grünrumpfig, adj.

Chlōrosōchrus, a, um. (Chlōro-; ὠχρὸς, yellow.) Nat. Philos. Greenish, tinged with red. Fr. anal. chlorosocracé, adj.

Chlōrostă'chys, yos, adj. (Chlōro-; στάχυς, an ear.) Bot. Having green ears or spikes. Fr. anal. chlorostachyé, adj. Germ. syn. grünöhrig, adj.

Chlōro'stŏmus, a, um. (Chlōro-; στόμα, a mouth.) Conchol., Entomol. Having a yellow or green opening or mouth. Fr. anal. chlorostome, adj. Germ. syn. grünmundig, adj.

Chlōrostўlus, a, um. (Chlōro-; στῦλος, a pillar.) Bot. Having a green style. Fr. anal. chlorostyle, adj. Germ. syn. grüngriffelig, adj.

Chlōrōsulphŭ'rĭcus, a, um. Chem. The chloruret of sulphur is termed chlorosulphuric acid, because it reddens litmus paper. Fr. anal. chlorosulphurique, adj.

Chlōrou'rus, a, um. (Chlōro-; οὐρὰ, a tail.) Ichthyol. Having a green tail. Fr. anal. chloroure, adj. Germ. syn. grünschwanzig, adj.

Chloro'xalate. Chem. A combination of chloroxalic acid with a salifiable base. Chlōro'xălas, ātis, f. Fr. anal. chloroxalate, m.

Chlōroxă'lĭcus, a, um. Chem. Applied to a combination of oxalic and hydrochloric acids, discovered by Dumas, and regarded as constituting a peculiar acid: chloroxa'lic. Fr. anal. chloroxalique, adj.

Chlōroxan'thus, a, um. (Chlōro-; ξανθὸς, yellow.) Bot. Of a green or olive and yellow colour. Fr. anal. chloroxanthe, adj.

Chloroxycarbonic. Same as Chlorocarbonic.

Chlōroxўcarbūrētum, i, n. Chem. Berzelius termed a double anhydrous salt, produced by condensing four volumes of gaseous ammoniac by one volume carbonic oxychloride gas, an ammoniacal chloroxycarburet. Fr. anal. chloroxicarbure, m.

Chlōro'xȳlus, a, um. (Chlōro-; ξύλον, wood.) Bot. Having yellow wood. Fr. anal. chloroxyle, adj. Germ. syn. mit grün Holz.

Chloroxysulphūrētum, i, n. Chem. Berzelius termed a compound, obtained simultaneously with the ammoniacal chloroxicarburet, and introducing into the ammoniacal gas the white crystalline body resulting from the action of aqua regia on the carbonic sulphide,—a chloroxysul'phuret. Fr. anal. chloroxisulfure, m.

Chœrădentĕrō'phthīsis, is, or eos, f. (Χοιράς, scrofula; enterophthĭsis.) Med., Pathol. Scrofulous intestinal phthisis. Fr. anal. Fr. anal. chœradentérophthisie, f. Germ. syn. die scrofulose Darmschwindsucht.

Chœrangiŏcĕrātŏdītis, ĭdis, f. (Χοιράς, scrofula; angiŏcĕrātŏdītis.) Med., Pathol. Scrofulous, vascular inflammation of the cornea. Fr. anal. chœrangiocératodite, f. Germ. syn. die Hornhautentzündung mit Gefässentwickelung.

Chœrŏcălym'ma, ătis, n. (Χοῖρος, the female pudenda; κάλυμμα, a covering.) Anat. The velamen vulvæ, as of the Hottentot. Fr. anal. chœrocalymme, m. Ger. syn. Schaamhülle, f.

Chœrocnes'mus, i, m. (Χοῖρος, the female pudenda; κνησμός, an itching.) Med., Pathol. Pruritus of the vulva. Fr. anal. chœrocnesme, m. Germ. syn. das Jucken der weibl. Schaam.

Chœrŏlym'phŏcĕrātŏdītis, ĭdis, f. (Χοῖρας, scrofula; lymphŏcĕrātŏdītis.) Med., Pathol. Scrofulous, lymphatic inflammation of the cornea. Fr. anal. chœrolymphocératodite, f.

Chŏlec'chўsis, is, or eos, f. (Χολή, bile; ἔκχυσις, a pouring out.) Med., Pathol. A discharge of bile. Fr. anal. cholecchyse, f. Germ. syn. Gallenergiessung, f.

Chŏlēcysteurys'ma, ătis, n. (Chŏlēcystis; εὐρύς, wide.) Med., Pathol. Dilatation of the gall-bladder. See Cholocystectasia. Fr. anal. cholécysteurysme, m. Germ. syn. Gallenblasenerweiterung, f.

Chŏlēcys'tis, ios, f. (Χολή, bile; κύστις, a bladder.) Anat. The gall-bladder. Fr. anal. cholecyste, f. Germ. syn. Gallenblase, f.

Chŏlēcystītis, ĭdis, f. (Chŏlēcystis; terminal -ītis.) Med., Pathol. Inflammation of the gall bladder. Fr. anal. cholécystite, f. Germ. syn. Gallenblasentzündung, f.

Chŏlēcyston'cus, i, n. (Chŏlēcystis; ὄγκος, a tumour.) Med., Pathol. Swelling of the gall-bladder. Fr. anal. cholécystoncus, m. Germ. syn. eine Ausdehnung der Gallenblase mit Verhärtung, f.

Cholein'. (Chŏlē-.) Chem. Name for the peculiar principle of the bile. Chŏlēīna, æ, f. See Diss. div. ii. s. vi. t. 4. Fr. anal. choléine, f. Germ. syn. der eigenthümliche Gallenstoff.

Chŏlēlĭthi'āsis, is, or eos, f. (Chŏlē; lĭthiāsis.) Med., Pathol. Gall-stone disease. Fr. anal. cholélithiase, f. Germ. syn. Gallensteinkrankheit, f.

Chŏlĕ'mĕsis, is, or eos, f. (Chŏlē; ĕmĕsis.) Med., Pathol. Bilious vomiting. Fr. anal. cholémésie, f. Germ. syn. ein gallichtes Erbrechen.

Chŏlēpoiēsis, is, or eos, f. (Χολή, bile; ποιέω, to make.) Med., Physiol. Term by Ortlob for generation or secretion of bile. Fr. anal. cholépoièse, f. Germ. syn. Gallenbereitung, f.

Chŏlēpўra, æ, f. } (Chŏlē; πῦρ, fever.) Med.,
Chŏlēpў'rĕtus, i, m. } Pathol. Bilious fever. Fr. anal. cholépyre, f. Germ. syn. Gallenfieber, n.

Cyănōsus, a, um. Chem. The first degree of oxidation of cyanogen is termed acidum cyanosum; one of the combinations of chlorine with cyanogen, chloridum cyanosum; sulpho-cyanogen, considered as playing the part of an acid, sulphis cyanosa. Fr. anal. cyaneux, adj.

Cyanu'rate. (Cyănūrĭcum acĭdum; terminal -ate.) Chem. A combination of cyanuric acid and a salifiable base. Cyănūras, ātis, f. Fr. anal. cyanurate, m.

Cyăthoīdēs, adj. (Cyăthus; terminal -ĭdēs.) Resembling a cup: cy'athoid. See Diss. div. i. s. i. Fr. anal. cyathoïde, adj. Germ. syn. becherähnlich, adj.

Cyăthoīdeus. Same as Cyathoides.

Cyăthŏphŏrus, a, um. (Cyăthus; φέρω, to bear.) Bot. Applied to the Passiflora cyathophora because it has two large hollow glands on its petioles like cups. Fr. anal. cyathophore, adj. Germ. syn. Becher tragend.

Cyclŏcar'pus, *a, um. Cyclŏcœ'lus, a, um. (Κύκλος, a circle; καρπὸς, fruit; κοιλία, the intestine.) Bot., Zoöl. Having orbicular fruit; having a circularly disposed intestinal canal. Fr. anal. cyclocarpe,—cèle, adj. Germ. syn. kreisfruchtig,—darmig, adj.

Cyclŏcautērium, ii, n. Same as Caustocyclus.

Cyclŏgas'ter, *tra, trum. Cyclōlŏ'beus, a, um. Cyclŏmor'phus, a, um. Cyclŏnōtus, a, um. (Κύκλος, a circle; γαστὴρ, the belly; λοβὸς, a lobe; μορφὴ, form; νῶτος, the back.) Having the abdominal fins united into a disc, a perispherical embryo, an orbicular and depressed form, a red central ring. Fr. anal. cyclogastre—lobé,—morphe,—note, adj. Germ. syn. kleisbauchig,—lappig,—förmig,—rückenartig, adj.

Cyclopanophthal'mia, æ, f. (Cyclōpia; anophthalmia.) Med., Physiol. Name for the state of Cyclopia, with one orbit and perfect or imperfect eyelids, without eyeball. Fr. anal. cyclopanophthalmie, f. Germ. syn. Kyklopanophthalmie, f.

Cyclŏ'phŏrus, *a, um. Cyclophyl'lus, a, um. (Κύκλος, a circle; φέρω, to bear; φύλλον, a leaf.) Having a circle, a leaf-like border. Fr. anal. cyclophore,—phylle, adj. Germ. syn. kleistragend,—blättrig, adj.

Cyclōpia, æ, f. (Κύκλωψ, a Cyclops.) Med., Physiol. A kind of monstrosity consisting in the fusion of two eyes into one place in the middle of the forehead, like the Cyclops. Fr. anal. cyclopie, f. Germ. anal. Kyklopie, f.

Cyclo'ptĕrus, a, um. (Κύκλος, a circle; πτέρον, a wing.) Bot. The Hiræa cycloptera has fruit with an almost orbicular wing. Fr. anal. cycloptère, adj. Germ. syn. kreisflugelt, adj.

Cyclōsyphĭlĭdoch'thus, i, m. (Κύκλος, a circle; syphilĭdochthus.) Med., Pathol. Circular, syphilitic tubercle. Fr. anal. cyclosyphilidochthus, m. Germ. syn. das kreisförmige Knotensyphilid.

Cyclŏthēlus, a, um. (Κύκλος, a circle; θηλὴ, the nipple.) Bot. Having orbicular papillæ. Fr. anal. cyclothèle, adj. Germ. syn. kreisbrustwarzig, adj.

Cyclozōum, i, n. (Κύκλος, a circle; ζῶον, an animal.) Zoöl. Name for a type of animals the body of which is generally constructed upon a circular plan, including the Acalepha and Radiaria. Fr. anal. cyclozoaire, m. Germ. syn. Kreisthier, n.

Cyclūrus, a, um. (Κύκλος, a circle; οὐρὰ, a tail.) Zoöl. Having an orbicular tail. Fr. anal. cyclure, adj. Germ. syn. kreisschwanzig, adj.

Cyēsiŏcōlĭca. Same as Encyocolica.

Cyēsiŏdiarrhœ'a, æ, f. Cyēsiognōmōn, ōnis, m. Cyēsiognōsis, is, or eos, f. Cyēsiognos'tĭca, æ, f. Cyēsiŏlŏ'gia, æ, f. (Κύησις, pregnancy; diarrhœa; γνώμων, a guide; γνῶσις, a knowing; same; λόγος, a discourse.) Med., Obstet. Names for the diarrhœa, the signs, the knowledge, the art of detecting, the doctrine, of pregnancy, respectively. Fr. anal. cyésiodiarrhée,—gnome,—gnose,—gnostique,—logie, f. Germ. syn. der Durchfall wegen Schwangerschaft; ein Zeichen, die Erkennung der S.; anal. Kyesiognostik; syn. Schwangerschaftslehre, f.

Cÿlindrăneurys'ma, ătis, n. (Cÿlindrus; aneurysma.) Med., Pathol. Cylindriform aneurysm. Fr. anal. cylindraneurysme, m. Germ. syn. das cylinderförmige Aneurysma.

Cÿlindrĭfor'mis, is, e. Same as Cylindricus.

Cÿlindristă'chyus, a, um. (Cÿlindrus; στάχυς, an ear.) Bot. Having flowers disposed in cylindrical ears or spikes. Fr. anal. cylindristachyé, adj. Germ. syn. kylinderöhrig, adj.

Cÿlindrŏbăsiostēmŏnus, a, um. (Cÿlindrus; βάσις, the base; στήμων, a stamen.) Bot. Applied to plants having the stamens soldered together by the base or filaments. Fr. anal. cylindrobasiostémone, adj.

Dictyīnosteŏ'phўtum, i, n. (Δίκτυον, network; ἶς, muscular fibre; osteŏphўtum.) Med., Pathol. Name by Lobstein for fibrillo-reticular, osseous growth. Fr. anal. l'ostéphyte fibrillo-reticulaire.

Dictyītis, ĭdis, f. (Δίκτυον, network; terminal -ītis.) Med., Pathol. Same as Retinitis.

Dictyŏcarcĭnōma, ătis, n. (Δίκτυον, network; carcĭnōma.) Med., Pathol. Reticular carcinoma. Fr. anal. dictyocarcinóme, m. Germ. syn. der Krebs mit netzförmigen Gewebe.

Dictyŏcar'pus, a, um. } (Δίκτυον, network; καρπὸς, fruit; terminal -ĭdēs; πτέρον, a wing; ῥίζα, a root.) Bot., Entomol. Having reticulated fruit, appearance, wings, roots. Fr. anal. dictyocarpe,—ïde,—ptère,—rhize, adj. Germ. syn. netzfruchtig,—ähnlich,—flugelicht,—krautig, adj.
Dictyoīdēs, adj.
Dictyorhi'zus, a, um.

Dĭcyclopriōn, ŏnis, m. (Δίς, two; κύκλος, a circle; πρίων, a saw.) Med., Surg. Name for a bicircular saw. Fr. anal. dicloprion, n. Germ. syn. Doppelcirkelsäge, f.

Dĭdac'tўlus, a, um. (Δίς, two; δάκτυλος, a finger.) Zoöl. Having two fingers or toes. Fr. anal. didactyle, adj. Germ. syn. zweifingert, adj.

Dĭdĕcăhe'drus, a, um. (Δίς, two; δέκα, ten; ἕδρα, a base.) Mineral. Applied to a variety, presenting two solids with six faces. Fr. anal. didécaëdre, adj.

Dĭdel'phĭdæ, patron. m. pl. Zoöl. Applied to the Didelphi.

Dĭdel'phus, a, um. (Δίς, two; δελφὺς, the womb.) Zoöl. Applied by Blainville to a sub-Class, by Tiedemann to an Order (m. pl.) of the Mammifera, having a double uterus, i. e. externally a kind of abdominal pouch for receiving their young. Fr. anal. didelphe, adj. Germ. syn. mit doppelte Gebärmutter.

Dĭdi'plăsus, a, um. (Δίς, twice; διπλάσιος, double.) Mineral. Twice double; applied to a variety of carbonated chalk. Fr. anal. didiplase, adj.

Dĭdōdĕcăhe'drĭcus, a, um. (Δίς, two; δώδεκα, twelve; ἕδρα, a base.) Mineral. Applied to a variety with twenty-four faces, which form in imagination two dodecahedrons. Fr. anal. didodécaëdre, adj.

Dĭdў'mium, ii, m. (Dĭdўmus.) Chem. Name by Scheerer for a twin-metal found in Christiana, partaking of cererium and lanthanum. Fr. anal. didymium, m.

Dĭdўmŏcar'pus, a, um. (Dĭdўmus; καρπὸς, fruit.) Bot. Having didymous fruit. Fr. anal. didymocarpe, adj. Germ. syn. doppelfruchtig, adj.

Dĭdўnă'mĭcus, a, um. Bot. Pertaining to what is didynamous. Fr. anal. didynamique, adj. Germ. anal. didynamisch, adj.

Dĭdy'nămus. Same as Didynamius.

Diectăsītēs, adj. (Δίς, two; ἔκτασις, extension.) Mineral. Applied to a variety resulting from two decreases on an even border or angle, the one in breadth the other in height. Fr. anal. diectasite, adj.

Dien'neahe'drĭcus, a, um. (Δίς, twice; ἐννέα, nine; ἕδρα, a base.) Mineral. Applied to a crystal terminated by eighteen faces. Fr. anal. diennéaëdrique, adj.

Dĭēpă'tias, æ, f. (Δίς, two; ἦπατίας, of the liver.) Med., Physiol. A monster-fetus with two livers. Fr. anal. diépatie, f. Germ. syn. eine Missgeburt mit zwei Lebern.

Dĭērĕ'sĭlis, is, f. (Διαιρέω, to divide.) Bot. Name for a capsular, dry, and regular fruit formed of many divisions ranged around an axis. See Synochorium. Fr. anal. dierésile, adj.

Dĭērĕsĭ'lius, a, um. (Same.) Bot. Applied to simple fruits that at their maturity are divided into a greater or less number of grains. See Synochorionarius. Fr. anal. diérésilien, adj.

Dĭgĕnēs, adj. } (Δίς, two; γένος, a race.)
Dĭgĕneus, a, um. } Med., Physiol. Of two sexes; bisexual; applied to generation. Fr. anal. bigène, adj. Germ. syn. zweigeschlechtlich, adj.

Dĭgĕ'nia, æ, f. (Same.) Same as Generatio.

Dĭgĕnus, a, um. (Same.) Bot. Applied to the Cotyledones, because they have two surfaces of increase. Fr. anal. digène, adj.

Dĭgĭtālĭcus, a, um. Chem. Pertaining to digitalin: digital'ic. Fr. anal. digitalique, adj. Germ. syn. zum Digitalin gehörig.

Dĭgĭtĭfō'lius, a, um. (Dĭgĭtus; fŏlium, a leaf.) Bot. Having digitated leaves. Fr. anal. digitifolié, adj. Germ. syn. fingerblättrig, adj.

Dĭgĭtĭner'vis, is, e. (Dĭgĭtus; nervus.) Bot. Applied to leaves the nervures of which proceed from the base, and are directed to the summit without division, as in the Gramineæ. Fr. anal. digitinerve, adj. Germ. syn. fingernervig, adj.

Diglos'sia, æ, f. (Δίς, two; γλῶσσα, the tongue.) Med., Physiol. The state of having a double tongue. Fr. anal. diglossie, f. Germ. syn. der Zustand mit einer doppelten Zunge.

Dĭgōnus, a, um. (Δίς, two; γωνία, an angle.) Having two angles. Fr. anal. digone, adj.

Dĭgymnosper'mus, a, um. (Δίς, two; gymnospermus.) Bot. Having two naked seeds. Fr. anal. digymnosperme, adj.

Dĭgўnus. Same as Digynius.

Dīheptă'pŏdus, a, um. (Δὶς, two; ἑπτὰ, seven; πούς, a foot.) Zoöl. Proposed by Latreille as a substitute for Blainville's Tetradecapodus.

Dīhexahe'drus, a, um. (Δὶς, two; ἓξ, sex; ἕδρα, a base.) Mineral. Applied to a crystal having twelve faces, presenting two solid hexahedrons. Fr. anal. dihexaëdre, adj.

Dīhy'drĭcus, a, um. (Δὶς, two; hydrĭcus.) Chem. Applied to a compound containing twice as much hydrogen as another of the same genus. Fr. anal. dihydrique, adj.

Dīhystĕ'ria, æ, f. (Δὶς, two; ὑστέρα, the womb.) Med., Physiol. The state of having two wombs or two vaginas. See Dimetra. Fr. anal. dihystérie, f. Germ. syn. doppelte Gebärmutter, auch mit doppelter Scheide.

Dīlă'lia, æ, f. (Δὶς, two; λαλέω, to talk.) Med., Physiol. Similar to Ventriloquismus; double speaking. Fr. anal. dilalie, f.

Dīlāticol'lis, is, e. (Dilātātus; collum.) Entomol. Having a dilated neck or corselet. Fr. anal. dilaticolle, adj.

Dīlĕ'pĭdus, a, um. (Δὶς, two; λεπὶς, a scale.) Having two scales. Fr. anal. dilépide, adj.

Dīlŏphus, a, um. (Δὶς, two; λόφος, a tuft.) Ornithol. Having two tufts of plumes. Fr. anal. dilophe, adj.

Dīmĕrĕdis, is, e. (Δὶς, two; μερὸς, a part.) Ichthyol. Applied to a Family (m. pl.) of the Holobranchia, having many flexible rays distinct from the pectoral fins. Fr. anal. dimérède, adj.

Dīmĕrŏsōmătus, a, um. (Same; σῶμα, a body.) Entomol. Applied to an Order (n. pl.) of the Arachnides, having the body divided into two great segments. Fr. anal. dimérosòmate, adj.

Dīmĕrus, a, um. (Same.) Entomol. Having the trunk formed of two great segments, as the Coleoptera. Fr. anal. dimère, adj. Germ. syn. zweitheilig, adj.

Dīmētra, æ, f. (Δὶς, two; μήτρα, the womb.) Med., Physiol. A double womb. Fr. anal. dimètre, f. Germ. syn. die doppelte Gebärmutter.

Dīmētria, æ, f. (Same.) Med., Physiol. The state of having a double womb. See Dihysteria. Fr. anal. dimétrie, f. Germ. syn. der Zustand mit einer doppelten Gebärmutter.

Dīmorphis'mus, i, m. (Δὶς, two; μορφὴ, form.) Geol. The property by which particular substances can crystallise in two forms, as shown by Mitscherlich. Fr. anal. dimorphisme, m.

Dīmyārius, a, um. (Δὶς, two; μῦς, a muscle.) Conchol. Having two muscular impressions. Fr. anal. dimyaire, adj.

Dīmyus, a, um. (Same.) Zoöl. Applied to a sub-Order (n. pl.) of the Elatobranchia Ostracea, having two muscular impressions on their shell. Fr. anal. dimyé, adj.

Dīnēmus, a, um. (Δὶς, two; νῆμα, a thread.) Zoöl. Applied to a Medusa, having two arms on each side of its body. Fr. anal. dinème, adj. Germ. syn. zweifadig, adj.

Dīoctăhe'drus, a, um. (Δὶς, two; ὀκτὼ, eight; ἕδρα, a base.) Mineral. Applied to a crystal presenting in its faces the combination of two different octahedrons. Fr. anal. dioctaëdre, adj.

Dīoctōnālis, is, e. (Δὶς, two; ὀκτὼ, eight.) Mineral. Applied to a crystal presenting the combination of an octahedron with a solid also of eight faces, but the form of which is of a different kind. Fr. anal. dioctaëdre, adj.

Dīŏdon, ontis, adj. (Δὶς, two; ὀδοὺς, a tooth.) Same as Bidens.

Dīŏdonther'cos, eos, n. (Δὶς, two; odonthercos.) Med., Physiol. A double series of teeth. Fr. anal. diodonthercos, m. Germ. syn. eine doppelte Zähnreihe.

Dīŏdontŏcĕphălus. Same as Diodoncephalus.

Dīŏdontostoe'chus. Same as Diodonthercos.

Dīophrys, yos, adj. (Δὶς, two; ὀφρὺς, the eyebrow.) Ornithol. Applied to the Sylvia diophrys, because the eyes are placed between two black strokes. Fr. anal. diophrys, adj. Germ. syn. mit zwei Augenbrauen.

Dīophthal'mus, a, um. (Δὶς, two; ὄφθαλμος, an eye.) Having two eyes. Fr. anal. diophthalme, adj.

Dīōps, ōpis, adj. (Δὶς, two; ὤψ, the eye.) Having two eyes. Fr. anal. diops, adj. Germ. syn. mit zwei Augen.

Dioscŏrīnus. Applied like Dioscoreus.

Dīōtus, a, um. (Δὶς, two; οὖς, the ear.) Anat. Having two ears. Fr. anal. diote, adj. Germ. syn. mit zwei Ohren.

Dīpĕrian'thus, a, um. (Δὶς, two; περὶ, around; ἄνθος, a flower.) Bot. Applied to dicotyledonous plants with two distinct floral envelopes. Fr. anal. dipérianthé, adj.

Dīpĕtălŏprĭōn, ŏnis, m. (Δὶς, two; πέταλον, a petal; πρίων, a saw.) Med., Surg. Name for a two-leaved or bilaminated saw. Fr. anal. dipétaloprion, m. Germ. syn. eine zweiblättrige Säge.

Diphthĕ'ria, æ, f. (Διφθέρα, leather.) Med., Pathol. A name at present more generally used for Diphtheritis.

Dīphyllobran'chius, a, um. (Δὶς, two; φύλλον, a leaf; branchiæ.) Zoöl. Applied to an Order (n. pl.) of the Mollusca Saccophora, answering to the Biphora of Cuvier. Fr. anal. diphyllobranche, adj.

Dīphўta, æ, f. (Δὶς, two; φυτὸν, a plant.) Bot. Applied to a Section (nom. pl.) of the Chaodineæ, on which there seems two distinct vegetable existences, the principal filaments and ramules of very different form, the ciliform prolongations of which secrete mucus: a di'phyte. Fr. anal. diphyte, f. Germ. syn. Zweipflanze, f.

Dĭphȳtan'thus, a, um. (Same; ἄνθος, a flower.) Bot. Bearing different flowers on different pedicles. Same as Dioïcus. Fr. anal. diphytanthe, adj.

Diplĕcoï'a, æ, f. (Διπλόος, double; ἀκοή, hearing.) Med. Double hearing. Fr. anal. diplécoïe, f. Germ. syn. Doppelhören, n.

Diplĕcŏlō'beus, a, um. (Δίς, two; πλέκω, to plait; λόβος, a lobe.) Bot. Applied to an Order (f. pl.) of the Cruciferæ, having the cotyledons folded twice across. Fr. anal. diplécolobé, adj.

Dipleu'robran'chius, a, um. (Δίς, two; pleurobranchius.) Zoöl. Applied (n. pl.) by J. E. Gray to the Pleurobranchia of Cuvier. Fr. anal. dipleurobranche, adj.

Diplŏcĕphă'lia, æ, f. Diplŏgas'tria, æ, f. Diplogĕ'nĕsis, is, or eos, f. (Διπλόος, double; κεφαλή, the head; γαστήρ, the belly; γένεσις, production.) Med., Physiol. Names by Breschet for organic deviations characterised by the presence of two heads, two trunks, the union of two or more germs. Fr. anal. diplocéphale,—gastrie,—génésie, f. Germ. syn. Doppelkopf,—bauch, m.,—zeugung, f.

Diplŏneu'rus, a, um. Diplŏ'nŏmus, a, um. Diplŏperistŏ'mătus, a, um. Diplŏpĕristŏ'mius, a, um. (Διπλόος, double; νεῦρον, a nerve; νόμος, a law; pĕristŏma; same.) Comp. Anat., Mineral. Bot. Having two nervous systems, laws, peristomes (see Diplopogon). Fr. anal. diplonеure,—nome,—péristomate,—péristomié, adj. Ger. syn. doppelnervig,—gesetzig,—mundrandig, adj.

Diplophyl'lum, i, n. Diplophȳsēter, ēris, m. Diplŏpies'mus, i, m. (Διπλόος, double; φύλλον, a leaf; φυσητήρ, bellows; πιεσμός, a pressing.) Bot., Nat. Philos. Terms for double calyx, bellows, compression. Fr. anal. diplophylle,—physitère,—piésme, m. Germ. syn. Zweikelch, m.; ein doppelter Blasebalg; Doppeldruck, m.

Diplopneu'mēnus, a, um. (Διπλόος, double; πνεύμων, the lung.) Zoöl. Applied to Amphibia that have double branchial apparatus. The opposite of Monopneumenus. Fr. anal. diplopneumène, adj. Germ. syn. doppelathmend, part. adj.

Diplŏpōgōn, ōnis, adj. Diplo'ptĕrus, a, um. Diplosanthērus, a, um. Diplostēmŏnis, is, e. Diplostēmŏnŏpĕ'tălus, a, um. (Διπλόος, double; πώγων, a beard; πτέρον, a wing; ἀνθηρός, flourishing; στήμων, a stamen; same, πέταλον, a petal.) Bot., Ichthyol. Having double peristomes (see Diploperistomatus), fins divided into two folioles, stamens double in number that of the divisions of the corol. Fr. anal. diplopogone,—ptère,—santhéré,—stémone,—stémonopétale, adj. Germ. syn. doppelmundrandig,—flugelicht,—staubfadig, adj.

Diplŏtĕ'gia, æ, f. (Διπλόος, double; τέγος, a roof.) Bot. Name for a dry indehiscent fruit contained in the calyx, as of the Campanula. Fr. anal. diplotége, m. Germ. syn. Doppeldach, n.

Dipneumŏ'neus, a, um. Dipnous, a, um. Dīpŏdus, a, um. Dīpŏlўcŏtўlēdŏ'neus, a, um. Dīpŏrobran'chius, a, um. Dīprŏsōpus, a, um. (Δίς, two; πνεύμων, the lung; πνέω, to breathe; πούς, a foot; πολύς, many, κοτυλήδων, a cotyledon; πόρος, a pore, branchiæ; πρόσωπον, the face.) Nat. Hist. Having two pulmonary sacs, branchiæ and lungs, two feet, two multifid cotyledons, branchiæ opening externally by two holes, the two eyes on one side as in certain Sternopterygii. Fr. anal. dipneumoné,—pnoé,—pode,—polycotylédone,—porobranche,—prosope, adj. Germ. syn. zweilungig, adj.; mit Fischkiemen und Lungen; zweifussig,—vollsamenlappig,—lochfischkiemig, adj.; doppelgesichtig, part. adj.

Dipsŏsōpus, i, m. (Δίς, two; πρόσωπον, the face.) Med., Physiol. Name for a monster-fetus with two faces. Fr. anal. dipsosope, m. Germ. syn. Doppelgesicht, n.

Diptĕrŏlō'gia, æ, f. (Diptĕrus; λόγος, a discourse.) Entomol. A treatise on the Diptera: diptero'logy. Fr. and Germ. anal. diptérologie, f.

Diptĕrў'gius, a, um. (Δίς, two; πτέρυξ, a fin.) Ichthyol. Having but two fins. Fr. anal. diptérygien, adj. Ger. syn. mit zwei Flugeln.

Dīpўrēnus, a, um. (Δίς, two; πυρήν, a fruit-stone.) Bot. Having two fruit-stones. Fr. anal. dipyréné, adj. Germ. syn. doppelkornig, adj.

Dīrhyn'chus, a, um. (Δίς, two; ῥύγχος, a beak.) Zoöl. Applied to a Tribe (m. pl.) of the Subannelidaria Polyrhynchi, having two cephalic appendages provided with hooks. Fr. anal. dirhynque, adj. Germ. syn. zweischnabelig, adj.

Discĭ'cŏlus, a, um. Discĭ'fĕrus, a, um. Disciflōrus, a, um. Discĭ'gўnus, a, um. (Discus; cŏlo, to inhabit; fĕro, to bear; flos, a flower; γυνή, a woman. Bot. Growing on the edge of cut apple-trees, bearing, having the folioles of the involucre united into, the ovary implanted on, a disc. Fr. anal. discicole,—fère,—flore,—gyne, adj. Germ. syn. scheibenbewohnend,—tragend,—blümig,—weibig, adj.

Discŏcўmă'tius, a, um. (Discus; cўmătium.) Bot. Applied to a Family (m. pl.) of lichens having a proligerous membrane, and answering to the Hymenocarpi of Meyer. Fr. anal. discocymatien, adj.

Discoïdālis, is, e. Discoïdeus, a, um. Pertaining to that which is discoid.

Discŏ'phŏrus, a, um. (Discus; φέρω, to bear.) Same as Disciferus.

Disdia'clăsis, is, or eos, f. (Δίς, two; διάκλασις, a breakage.) Mineral. A double breakage. Fr. anal. disdiaclase, f. Germ. syn. Doppelbrechung, f.

Dīsĕ'pălus, a, um. (Δίς, two; sĕpălum.) Bot. Applied to a calyx when composed of two distinct pieces. Fr. anal. disépale, adj. Germ. syn. zweikelchblattig, adj.

Disjunctĭflōrus, a, um. (Disjunctus, removed; flos, a flower.) Bot. Having solitary flowers. Fr. anal. disjonctiflore, adj. Germ. syn. einsamblumig, adj.

Displōsor, ōris, adj. (Displōdo, to break asunder with great noise.) Entomol. Applied to many Coleoptera that emit, with explosion by the anus, a whitish smoke serving to disperse their enemies. Fr. syn. tirailleur, adj.

Dissĭtiflōrus, a, um. Dissĭval'vis, is, e. (Dissĭtus, distant; flos, a flower; valva.) Bot., Zoöl. Having distinct flowers, valves. Fr. anal. dissitiflore, dissivalve, adj.

Dista'chyus, a, um. (Δὶς, two; στάχυς, an ear.) Bot. Having two ears or spikes. Fr. anal. distachyé, adj. Germ. syn. zwei ährig, adj.

Dis'tĕgus, a, um. Distēmŏnis, is, e. Distēmŏno'pleanthĕrus, a, um. (Δὶς, two; στέγη, a roof; στήμων, a stamen; same, πλείων, more, anthĕra.) Mineral., Bot. Having two ridges, stamens, double the number of anthers to that of filaments. Fr. anal. distège,—stémone,—stémonopléanthéré, adj. Germ. syn. zweidachig,—staubfadig, adj.; doppelstaubbeutelig, adj.

Distĭchophyl'lus, a, um. (Distĭchus; φύλλον, a leaf.) Bot. Having leaves in double rows. Fr. anal. distichophylle, adj.

Distig'mus, a, um. (Same.) Having two stigmata. Fr. anal. distigmate, adj. Germ. syn. mit zwei Narben.

Distrac'tĭlis, is, e. (Distractus, separated.) Bot. Applied to the Connectivum when it separates very distinctly the divisions of the anther. Fr. anal. distractile, adj.

Distrĭ'chia, æ, f. (Δὶς, two; θρὶξ, hair.) Same as Distichia.

Dīta'xium, ii, n. (Δὶς, two; τάξις, an arranging.) Bot. A capsular fruit with two series of compartments. Fr. anal. ditaxion, m.

Dīthўrus, a, um. Dītŏmus, a, um. Ditrĭdac'tўlus, is, e. Ditrĭ'nŏmus, a, um. (Δὶς, two; θύρα, a door; τέμνω, to cut; τρὶς, three, δάκτυλος, a toe; τρὶς, three, νόμος, a law.) Conchol. Same as Bivalvis. Ornithol. Having two or three toes in front. Mineral. Applied to a variety resulting from decreases by one, two, three rows, each of which acts on two parts of the primitive form. Fr. anal. dithyre,—tome,—tridactyle,—trinome, adj. Germ. syn. zweithurig,—schnittig,—dreifingert,—dreigetzig, adj.

Dīvergentĭflōrus, a, um. Dīvergĭner'vius, a, um. Dīvergĭvēnōsus, a, um. Bot. Having diverging flowers, nerves, veins. Fr. anal. divergentiflore,—ginerve,—veiné, adj. Ger. syn. mit Adern, mit Nerven auseinander lauffend.

Dīversi'cŏlor, ōris, adj. Dīversĭfō'lius, a, um. Dīver'sifrons, ondis, adj. Dīver'sĭpes, pĕdis, adj. Dīversispo'reus, a, um. (Dīversus, different; cŏlor, colour; fŏlium, a leaf; frons, a frond; pes, a foot; σπορὰ, a seed.) Bot. Having varied colour, leaves, fronds, feet, spores. Fr. anal. diversicolor,—folié,—frons,—pède,—sporé, adj. Germ. syn. ungleichfarbig,—blättrig,—wedelig,—füssig,—keimkornig, adj.

Diūrēsiæsthēsis. Same as Uresiæsthesis.

Dōdĕcădactўlītis, ĭdis, f. (Dōdĕcădactylon; terminal -ītis.) Med., Pathol. Inflammation of the duodenum. Fr. anal. dodécadactylite, f. Germ. syn. Fingerdarmsentzündung, f.

Dōdĕcă'fĭdus, a, um. (Δώδεκα, twelve; findo, to cleave.) Bot. Divided into twelve segments more or less deep. Fr. anal. dodécafide, adj. Germ. syn. zwölfgespaltet, adj.

Dōdĕcă'nŏmus, a, um. Dōdĕcăpartītus, a, um. Dōdĕcăpē'tălus, a, um. (Δώδεκα, twelve; νόμος, a law; partītus; πέταλον.) Mineral, Bot. Applied to a variety having twelve decreases, divided into twelve, having twelve petals. Fr. anal. dodécanome,—parti,—pétale, adj. Germ. syn. zwölfyetzig,—getheilet,—blumenblattig, adj.

Dŏlaspis'tus, a, um. (Δόλος, treacherous; ἀσπὶς, a buckler.) Zoöl. Applied to serpents with laminæ, or plates that have poisonous fangs. See Dolops. Fr. anal. dolaspiste, adj.
